Yet it has happened that the genius of the people have discovered a means of reducing the cost of iron and coal to every worker desiring to use them. It was a simple proposition. Through fraud, the owners of coal and iron deposits had been allowed to gather tribute from labor wishing to use these products. Their mines had been increased in value through the operation of a law which enabled them to take from the hand of toil a portion of its product. The tariff bounty to coal mine owners meant an increasing tribute from all engaged in production of iron and steel. Nearly five tons of coal is required to produce a single ton of manufactured steel. Of ore nearly three tons are used. The original basic tax on these two products cumulated to the injury of labor and only to the benefit of the owner of the natural deposits. No robber baron ever laid more unjust tax upon his victims. None ever proclaimed his intent to bless while thus plundering.

The American people are now offered, through the tariff bill of the democratic majority in the house of representatives, something better than an invention for cheaply operating coal fields. Such an invention, under the operation of the McKinley bill, would but have increased the power of the mine owners over legislation by increasing their capacity for fat-frying in the interest of a party pledged to the perpetuation and extension of the infamous system. Timid souls who believe that this boon, brought to democratic statesmanship in obedience to the demand of the people, will be repaid by a vote of lack of confidence by the people in its benefited, have small basis for their claim that popular sovereignty is not a failure.—American Industries.

WAGES AND THE TARIFF.

Blackmailing Employes to Secure Their Votes. Schemes of Protectionists.

The McKinleyites assert that the higher the duty the higher the wages of American labor, and the lower the duty the lower the wages. This is untrue. Wages are highest in unprotected industries. Wages in the same industries, under the same tariff, vary greatly in the different states of the union. Therefore when they threaten to close their factories to lower wages because their protective duty is to be reduced by the Wilson bill they are simply blackmailing their employes for votes or trying to frighten congress.

There is only one way in which the price of anything can be increased by the tariff. That is by limiting its supply by placing a tax or duty on it. There is no duty on labor. Men are on the free list. Foreigners compete on even terms with natives. For many years the protected manufacturers imported the cheapest labor they could find in Europe. Some of them do it now, violating the contract labor law. No manufacturer pays higher wages than he is obliged to in the unprotected labor market.

It does not follow that higher rates of wage mean greater cost of labor. As a rule, high wages mean cheap products, because high-priced men are much more efficient than low-priced men. Secretary Blaine reported that this was so as to cotton operatives. American workmen are more skillful, intelligent and enterprising than foreign workmen, and American machinery is better. The average cost of a ton of paper in an American mill is $8.87; in the English mills it is $13.46, though wages are higher here.

In many cases under the McKinley law the protection on an American product is greater than all the wages or labor cost. The labor in mining a ton of coal costs from 60 to 70 cents; the mine-owner is protected by a tax of 75 cents plus the cost of transporting the foreign product.

Wages do not go up with increased duties. They did not in 1860. In 1860 the average tariff tax was 24 per cent.; the average labor cost in protected articles was 25 per cent. of the whole cost of the product. In 1880 the tax had risen to 46 per cent. and labor cost had fallen to 22 per cent. To-day the tax is 48 per cent and the labor cost probably not above 20.

NOT THE SO'UTH.

Why Birmingham Iron Men Do Not Want Taxes Reduced.

A dispatch from Birmingham, Ala., announces that "the Wilson tariff bill does not meet indorsement in the south." This implies that Birmingham, Ala., is the headquarters of "the south"—the place whence the voice of "the south" speaks with authority—the Delphic shrine of the southern oracle. It is quite safe to say that the implication is false. Birmingham is a place where pig iron is produced in considerable quantities, and the owners of coal and iron mines and furnaces are in favor of a tariff for revenue only—for themselves.

The dispatch goes on to say that "Senior Morgan says he is not for the free list as promulgated by the bill. It is inconsistent with a tariff for revenue and he will stand with the interests of Alabama and the south in defending them against free coal and ore for the benefit of the northeast." The further information is conveyed that "the coal and iron men of the district are with Senator Morgan." It would be nearer the truth to say that Senator Morgan is with the coal and iron men of that district.

And all this is no news. Representatives of the Birmingham interests went to Washington some time ago and labored with Chairman Wilson and his associates against free coal and ore and for as high duty on pig iron. And it is not forgotten that the spokesman of the delegation not long before had published in the Iron Age a statement over his own signature that pig iron could be produced at less cost in the south than in England. Mr. Wilson and his associates may have seen that statement. At all events the delegation labored in vain. Their selfish opposition to the bill is a matter of course. They are not authorized to speak for "the south" any more than the Pittsburgh iron men are authorized to speak for the north.

As for Senator Morgan, nobody need be surprised at anything he may say or do. He calls himself a democrat, but he is "agin" the administration. He is one of the Sam Randall variety of democrats, whose support for any measure of tariff reform worth having has never been counted on. There may be a few more democrats of the same variety in the senate, but not enough to defeat the Wilson bill.—Chicago Herald.

THE CALAMITY BUBBLE.

It Is Punctured by Congressman Harter—Protectionist Claptrap.

Representative Harter, of Ohio, is not dismayed by the fact that republican politicians who happen to be in the manufacturing business are trying to make illegitimate party capital by cutting down the wages of their employes and charging their conduct to the uncertainty felt about the democratic tariff.

"Of course," said he to a friend who called his attention to the matter, "all this is mere protectionist claptrap intended to frighten the workingmen by making them believe that revenue reform is hostile to labor. It is not likely to deceive many persons—certainly not any who read and think. If you will go over your list you will find that not one of these fellows who is making such haste to cut down the wages of his hands has shown equal haste in cutting down prices to his customers. That is where the cut is really needed, and where justice demands that it shall be made. Let it be remembered that these men, in continuing to charge the same prices for goods manufactured under the McKinley tariff, show that the conditions have not changed. Their proposal to cut down the wages of their help is based entirely upon their expectation of a change of conditions still to come. Now, why is it not just as fair to reduce the prices to consumers on account of a future contingency which seems to be impending, as to cut down the wages of the poor men who do manual labor in their factories?

"The fact is, for every 10 per cent. cut from the wages of workingmen on account of a prospective decrease in duty on the finished product, at least 20 per cent. ought to be struck from prices on account of the free raw materials which, under such schedules as the Wilson bill, practically would enter into most of the fundamental manufactures."

"Unfelt" Taxes.

The president in his message referred to "the indirect and almost stealthy manner in which a large part of our taxes are exacted." Upon which a McKinley organ observes that this is only another way of saying that under the republican system "nobody feels the burden or knows that he is taxed."

What humbug! If a man earns $1,000 a year and pays $100 in the tax-enhanced cost of his necessary purchases he may not know just when or how each tax was paid, but he feels the loss in striking his balance for the year. A woman may not feel the loss or know that she is being robbed when a thief picks her pocket, but she knows it when she gets home.

The people of this country paid last year in duties upon woolen goods the great sum of $54,293,000. They paid nearly $17,000,000 in duties upon silks. Did they not "feel" the tax because they did not know just how much was duty and how much fair cost in each yard purchased?

Out upon such flimsy and dishonest pretense! An indirect tax imposes a direct burden. It is felt, though it may not be seen. If even one-quarter of our revenues were raised by direct taxation of those best able to pay, we should have no more billion dollar congresses.—N. Y. World.

Dolge Cries "Wolf" too Often.

Alfred Dolge & Son, of cooperative notoriety, threaten to move their felting machines to Germany and leave Dolgeville a desolate waste if the Wilson bill seems likely to pass. The country would survive if they should execute their dreadful threat. But they will do nothing of the kind. They will get their wool free and a "protection" of 15 per cent. on their product if the Wilson bill passes as it stands, and they cannot do better in Germany. The Dolges are joining the procession of tariff-enriched bulldozers, who repay a generosity, which they never deserved, by threatening to do desperate things. There is some reason to think that they will not be able to frighten the present congress.—Chicago Herald.

The Tin Plate Myth.

Protection speakers are talking about "the tin plate industry" and trying to make capital for McKinley on that score. The governor stated at Ashtabula that 100 persons were employed in the tin plate factory at Conneaut. The Herald representative met a very reputable man to-day who said he had recently visited that alleged factory, and by permission he searched the establishment through to find those 100 happy employes. He declares that only seven persons (six men and one girl) constitute the entire working force of the concern. He added that 10 per cent. is about as near the truth as McKinley ever gets when talking tin plate nonsense.—Chicago Herald.

THE BIRDS OF NORTH AMERICA.

In connection with the foregoing report of our Ornithological Chapter, it is only right to call the attention of all lovers of birds to the magnificent work now being issued by the Natural Science Association of America, and entitled "The Birds of North America." Edition limited to 1,000. It is emphatically an original work, original in design and execution, and whether in letter press, illustrations or price, it is unapproached by anything of the kind in existance. It is recommended by the highest scientific, ecclesiastic and educational authority as being the most attractive, meritorious, pure and ennobling exposition of our ornithology yet given to the public. Dr. Elliott Coues, author of "Birds of the North-West," says: "It is a really notable work." Prof. C. J. Maynard, author of the "Birds of Eastern North America," says: "It contains the best pictures of the species which I have ever seen." Thos. G. Gentry, author of "Life Histories of Birds," and "Nests and Eggs of Birds of the United States," says: "It is the cheapest and best publication on ornithology in this country. The drawings are of a very high order, and rivals in beauty of design and finish the more costly works published abroad or in this country. It should be found in our homes and in libraries generally." And, according to Dr. Theodore Gill, a member of the National Academy of Sciences, "It is not only a meritorious volume, but is altogether so handsome as to make it a very appropriate presentation book or ornament for the family table." It is an imperial quarto volume of engraved figures of all our species, artistically reproduced, true in all hues of color to their natural plumage and botanical surroundings. It also includes a copious text description of their habits and characteristics, and embracing in general the observations made by the most eminent writers on ornithology, and a systematic table, arranged according to the classification adopted by the American Ornithologists' Union, includes all the additions and corrections of our North American species which have been made to date, with an index to page, plate and figure of each species according to the A. O. U. number. It is illustrated with one hundred and nineteen full page colored plates, each representing from one to thirty or more species. It is the finest book on American birds issued since Audubon, and is pronounced by some authorities superior to that now rare and costly work. It is issued in half and full bindings, Russia, seal, or morocco, at the net price of $40 and $45 respectively; but in response to a special letter, the association authorized me to say that a substantial discount will be made to such of our A. A. members and others as are working naturalists. We commend this work especially to members of the Wilson Ornithological Chapter. It is also a very useful and appropriate addition to the home and reference library, and for presentation purposes generally. Address regarding it, the Natural Science Association, 114 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Sample plates and text can be had by sending twelve cents in postage stamps.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or astringents, because they are irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

THE BASIN OF TENNESSEE.

Oh, the glorious Middle Basin,
The rose in nature's wreath!
With her purpling sky and her hills on high
And her blue grass underneath.
'Tis here our fathers built their homes,
'Tis here their sons are free,
For the fairest land
From God's own hand
Is the Basin of Tennessee.

Oh, the fertile Middle Basin!
Proud Egypt's thrashing floor
Held not in the chain of her golden grain
Such fields as lie at our door.
Our daughters grow like olive plants,
Our sons like the young oak tree,
For the richest land
From God's own hand
Is the Basin of Tennessee.

Oh, the joyous Middle Basin,
Land of the mocking bird!
Where the flying feet of our horses fleet
In front of the race are heard.
They get their gameness from our soil,
Their spirits will ever be,
For the merriest land
From God's own hand
Is the Basin of Tennessee.

Oh, the loyal Middle Basin,
So quick for life and drum!
She stood in the breach on the Crescent Beach
When the hated foe had come.
Her Jackson made our nation safe,
Her Polk an empire free,
For the truest land
From God's own hand
Is the Basin of Tennessee.

Oh, the glorious Middle Basin!
Can we be false to thee?
Sweet land where the earth and the sky gave birth
To the spirit of liberty!
No, not while our maids have virtue,
Not while our sons are free,
For the fairest land
From God's own hand
Is the Basin of Tennessee.

A COAL OF FIRE.

"He's a muff all round, outside school work, I'm sure. Can't play cricket a little bit anyway," said Douglas Metcalfe.

"Rummy clothes he wears, eh? Hat looks as if it had come out of an old clothes shop," said Frank Newlyn.

"He's a sullen sort of beggar too. I suppose he's proud of his poverty; some fellows are like that, you know," George Marchant remarked.

All the three speakers were in the sixth form at Denmark House, and the boy they referred to was Herbert Grierson, who had just come to the school at the beginning of this term.

It was Saturday afternoon of a warm day in early summer, and the three boys were strolling down toward the bay, on the heights overlooking which the Denmark House stood. When they reached the beach, they found some half dozen other boys undressing preparatory to bathing. A large, broad beamed boat lay out in the bay. One or two other boys were now in it; among the rest Herbert Grierson.

"We'll swim out to those fellows and have a dive from the boat," Douglass Metcalfe said. In two minutes the two were swimming toward the boat, followed closely by Tippoo, Douglas' terrier. They scrambled into the boat. The others were now in the water, with the exception of Grierson, who stood at the bow ready to dive. His clothes lay beside him, with his hat on the top. A sudden spirit of mischief seized Douglas.

"Let's see if he is as good at swimming as he is at Virgil," he whispered to his companions.

"Own up now, Douglas. You're a bit jealous of Grierson. You're afraid he's going to run you hard for dux, old chap," Newlyn said.

"Oh, as to that, I don't care much one way or the other," replied Metcalfe, with a show of carelessness. "But I fancy I'm his match at swimming anyhow. But we'll see in a minute or two."

As he spoke Douglas pretended to stumble against Grierson's clothes, and recovering himself struck the hat with his hand, and sent it spinning into the water.

"Hullo, that was jolly clumsy of me!" he exclaimed.

In a moment Grierson was in the water after his hat, which the breeze had caught and carried to a considerable distance out in the bay. Tippoo was before him, however, and swimming toward the hat.

"Now then. He's got a pretty good start. We'll see who reaches the hat first. But I must send that little rascal Tippoo back," said Metcalfe, who was one of the best swimmers in the school. He leaped into the water and struck out with all his strength in the wake of Grierson.

All were now watching the chase of the hat with interest and laughter and cries of "Go it, Douglas," "Strike out, Grierson," "The hat's going to win."

It was quite clear that Herbert Grierson was a strong and expert swimmer. For a little Douglas Metcalfe did not gain a yard upon him, but presently the onlookers could see that the space between the two boys had narrowed. Metcalfe was, in fact, doing his very best, and it was with keen sensation of satisfaction and triumph that he at last overtook and passed his rival.

The hat was now floating a few yards in front of Metcalfe. The chase of it had proved a harder one than had been expected. Metcalfe and Grierson were now far out in the bay, and of course much beyond their depth. At this point a strong current swept past the bay. The River Gleam emptied itself into the sea at the north horn of the bay, and this caused a current which set in a transverse direction across the bay, oceanward.

Both boys were by this time in the center of this sea stream. Metcalfe's hand closed upon the hat. It was his intention to swim back with it toward the boat and replace it upon the little pile of clothes, and thus put a triumphant finish to his swimming feat.

Metcalfe was now facing toward the shore again. Grierson had turned too. The latter was quite aware that Metcalfe had acted as he had done not to recover the lost hat and restore it to its owner, but in order to prove his superiority in swimming before the rest of the boys. The latter raised a cheer as they saw Metcalfe striking for the land again, holding the hat in his hand. Then they saw Metcalfe stop suddenly. The arm that held the hat dropped and disappeared below the water.

Grierson, now swimming a yard or two behind Metcalfe, gave a few vigorous strokes which brought him alongside the latter. But before he could stretch out a hand to prevent it Metcalfe's head went under. Grierson dived at almost the same moment. The boys in and around the boat held their breath.

"Something's wrong with Douglas. He's taken cramp or something," George Marchant said.

A minute went by, and they saw the heads of both boys reappear, a yard or two further ont. Grierson was supporting Metcalfe with his right arm.

"I've cramp in my right leg and arm," Metcalfe said in a hoarse, low voice. "I'm afraid I can't swim a stroke farther myself."

"All right, try to tread water with your other leg; it will help a little. We'll be all right when we are once out of this current," Grierson replied quietly.

Yet Grierson knew that his task was not going to prove an easy one. For a few minutes he made little or no headway. Metcalfe hung upon his arm almost like a dead weight. Douglas was doing his utmost to help himself, but it availed very little, for, besides the cramp which had attacked him, he was exhausted by his efforts at first to overtake and outstrip Grierson.

Grierson struggled on, his burden impeding every stroke he made and lessening its effect. The boy felt his own strength ebbing fast. Unless he got out of the current in a few minutes more, he feared that all would be lost. But he was making progress and could see that the distance between the boat and himself was lessening.

"A minute more, and we shall be in smooth water," he whispered hoarsely to Metcalfe.

As he spoke Grierson changed Metcalfe from his left arm to his right and used the left for swimming. This gave him considerable ease and rest, and his next few strokes were freer and more vigorous. And now he felt the current decidedly lessening in force. He summoned up all his remaining energy in one last effort, and half a dozen more strokes brought him free of the current.

The two boys were in calm water, and now, too, they were met by George Marchant and Frank Newlyn, who relieved Grierson of his burden and took Metcalfe between them. In this order they reached the boat. There were many outstretched arms to help them in, and then the boat was towed to the shore.

Dr. Metcalfe, the principal of Denmark House and Douglas' father, was not a little alarmed at what had happened, though he did not show it. Both boys were immediately got to bed, and prompt measures taken to restore warmth and circulation to their chilled and aching bodies. These had the desired effect; in a day or two both Grierson and Metcalfe were back in class and playground.

"I have to thank you very much, Grierson," he said. "You saved my life at the risk of your own; there's no doubt about that. And the whole thing was my fault too. I am very sorry. Will you accept my best thanks, and try to forget my part in the matter? I'll never forget yours."

Her Bathing Togs.

The little boy was very much interested in a picture that his sister had had taken while at the seashore. It was a picture that had been taken "just for the fun of the thing" and not for distribution among her friends—one of those pictures that a girl keeps in her own room where none but her intimates may see it. This one showed the young lady and her "dearest friend" on the beach in bathing suits. Both of the girls were pretty and had good figures that the bathing suits showed to excellent advantage, but the picture seemed to be a source of endless speculation to the boy.

"Did you and Mamie wear them togs at the seashore?" he asked one day.

"Of course we did," she replied.

"Did you wear them short skirts and stockin's so's you could go in bathing?" he persisted.

"Certainly; what makes you ask such a question?"

"Oh, I dunno," he replied carelessly. "I thought mebbe you went in bathin so's you could wear them togs."—Chicago Post.

Smokeless Powder Ruins Guns.

There seem to be some very serious drawbacks in the usefulness of the smokeless powder, on which the military authorities of the world have expended so much money lately. One of the latest discovered of these is that in some way it injures the guns in which it is used. A French newspaper says that the powder has done great damage to the steel guns of the Italian army; that at least 500 pieces of artillery have been rendered practically useless by it.—New Orleans Picayune.

Undertakers Don't Believe In Spooks.

An aged undertaker of this city was asked if he had ever seen any spooks. He laughed derisively and said: "No, and I doubt if you will find any one in my line of business who believes in the existence of such things. We find there is nothing more harmless and pitiful than dead people."—Philadelphia Record.

Reason For Laughing.

"Why did everybody laugh so long over that story of old Boreby's? It isn't a bit funny."

THE FIRST PORTFOLIO COUPON.

Our first portfolio coupon appears in this issue of the HERALD, and one coupon will appear each week hereafter until the entire series shall be completed. It is impossible to tell beforehand how many copies will be called for, but we shall be prepared to accommodate all who come, whether the number be 50 or 500. We have a few suggestions to make, however, to people who expect to take the parts, which will facilitate the work and avoid mistakes. It is desired that all who intend to avail themselves of this offer should apply for the first part promptly as soon as the first part coupon appears. This will enable us to order the exact number each week necessary to supply all applicants, and save much confusion and trouble. Every person's name will be registered in a book kept for that purpose, and the names on this list will be numbered consecutively. Every person calling or sending for a part should give his name and consecutive number; the clerk can then turn to the list and check off the part delivered. By observing this rule strictly, people will save themselves trouble and reduce the work of distribution materially. To give our patrons, who do not get their mail at Tecumseh, a chance to examine the work, we shall send sample copies of the first part to the following postoffices, where they can be examined: Clinton, Macon, Lake Ridge, Britton, Ridgeway, Holloway, Raisin Center, Sutton, Pentecost, Onsted, Tipton, Springville and Cambridge.

Part first contains the preface and table of contents for the entire book and also the following views, with a page of descriptive matter to each view:

A Family Reunion.

There is nothing quite so pleasant in life as the gathering together into the home nest the children who have drifted out to make homes for themselves. Such an occasion of joyfulness occurred last week at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Blackmar, in Cambridge.

There were present W. A. Blackmar and wife, of Charlotte; G. W. Blackmar and wife, of Grand Rapids; besides there were the two sons still at home, Frank B. and W. L. Blackmar. Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Hosmer, of Tecumseh, were also honored guests. And to make the occasion happier still there were four nice grandchildren.

The family had expected to have the reunion on Christmas day but it was necessary to defer it until Jan. 28. Mr. Blackmar tells us that his father's birthday fell on Christmas and it was the old gentleman's custom on this day to gather his family and friends together to enjoy the festivities of the season. After his death the custom was continued for many years by his large family of children, the gathering growing in number with the taking in of those outside of the fold. But the family has been diminished by death and scattered abroad, and those good old days of reunion have passed. This gathering of Mr. Blackmar's own children and friends was a happy counterpart of the old time gatherings and brought heart joy to the host and hostess who know so well how to extend hospitality.—Brooklyn Exponent.

OBITUARY.

Died, at her residence, on Monday, Jan. 22, 1894, Mrs. Peter W. Miller.

Mrs. Miller has long been an invalid but her faith in God remained unshaken till the very last moment of her life. Her last words were triumph over death through Jesus Christ her Lord.

Since the death of her husband, which occurred 17 years ago, her daughter, Mrs. Galus Squires, has been her constant companion. Mr. Squires, himself, assisting her with all the devotion of an own son; day and night watching over her with an untiring and unflagging love and devotion. But death came suddenly at the last; one minute in conversation, the next in the Eternal World. Mrs. Miller has been a faithful and consistent member of the Methodist church of Ridgeway for many years. Her funeral was attended by a large number of relatives and friends, and her remains were laid away in their resting place, until the morning of the Resurrection, in the Lake Ridge cemetery.

One by one we are passing away. The family of Mr. Galus Squires and all the children have the Christian sympathy of all neighbors and friends of their extensive acquaintance.

Died: In Norvell, Mich., Jan. 23, 1894, Mr. Appleman Aten, aged 65 years, 4 months and ten days. Deceased was born in Livingston Co., N. Y., Sept. 13, 1828.

When he was four years old his father came to Michigan and settled in Tecumseh township, which then contained but six families. To attend his first school he walked three and one half miles. On Nov. 3, 1855 he married Miss Mary Wilson, at Ridgeway, and settled in Franklin Township. In 1880 they removed to Deerfield, residing there about seven years, then returned to Lenawee county, living in Adrian and vicinity for several years. He and his companion came at last to spend their remaining days with their only child, Mr. Perley B. Aten, of Norvell, where he peacefully passed away, trusting in His Savior. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. Churchill, of Napoleon.

Death of Mrs. Packard.

We clip the following from a recent number of the Cherokee, Ia. Democrat. Mr. Packard was a member of the Packard family who lived in Franklin for many years. A brother of his, Henry H. Packard, married a daughter of Noah Burroughs:

Mrs. Laura Packard, wife of Engineer Frank Packard of the Illinois Central, died at her home in this city at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, Dec. 24. Mrs. Packard had been in a critical condition for several days, and although it was known that there was little chance for recovery, all Cherokee people hoped that she might be saved, and when the word was passed that death had finally relieved her there was universal sorrow throughout the city. She leaves four children, the youngest two years of age, to the care of a husband whose load of grief is hard to bear. Mrs. Packard was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amiel Littlefield of this city. She was born Aug. 15, 1860, at Milford, Mass. She was united in marriage with Mr. Packard at Cherokee, May 7, 1884, and has been a truly devoted wife and mother. The funeral services will be held at the Congregational church at two o'clock this afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. L. Ferris, and it will be with greatest sorrow that Cherokee people will follow the remains of Mrs. Packard to their final resting place.

TWELVE THOUSAND CATARRH PATIENTS

Treated Absolutely Free of Charge by Dr. Hartman.

The announcement made in many of the leading papers of the United States last November that Dr. Hartman, of Columbus, Ohio, would undertake the treatment of 10,000 catarrh patients free was thought by many who would have gladly availed themselves of his offer to be a mistake. Nevertheless it was a fact and already the 10,000 have applied and are already taking the first month's treatment. The elaborate preparations which the doctor made, and the great number of assistants required to carry on this undertaking, makes it possible for him to extend the number to 12,000. Therefore, 2,000 more names will be accepted as regular patients. All that is required of the patient is to send name and address to Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and complete directions for the first month's treatment will be sent at once. No charge is made at any time.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

ANNOUNCMENT FOR 1894.

Again the "Old Reliable" greets its patrons, extends its thanks for past favors, and lays before them its program for 1894. The HERALD passed through the panic of 1893 much better than we anticipated, and is prepared to face the future with confidence. We have several attractive offers to present, some of which we believe will merit the approval of every subscriber. With the attractions herein offered we hope to retain all our old friends and make many new acquaintances during the coming three months.

Realizing the fact that every dollar counts in these hard times, we have concluded to make our rates for the coming year on a "hard times" basis. One dollar will pay for the paper for one year, when sent to any post office in Lenawee County. Beyond Lenawee County $1.25. In making this concession however we shall be compelled to adopt the strict advance rule. We cannot afford to accept these rates and wait several months for our pay. Sixty days grace will be allowed for payment of subscriptions which is ample time for all who desire to keep the paper, and all papers not renewed within that time will be stopped. People expect to pay for their outside papers strictly in advance. Why should they not be willing to treat their home paper with the same courtesy?

We have a few combination offers, which we believe will prove especially attractive.

FIRST.

The Detroit Weekly Free Press has been changed to a semi-weekly, and is now a "twice a week" paper, each edition containing at least eight pages. These two papers with the HERALD—three papers in all—will be furnished for $2.00.

SECOND.

The American Farmer and the Farmer's Guide are both first-class farm papers, well edited and finely printed. The subscription price of each is fifty cents. Either of these papers will be furnished in connection with the HERALD for $1.25.

THIRD.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine is now acknowledged to be one of the very best monthlies published. It ranks with Harper's, Scribner's and the Century. Its December edition was unprecedented, being over 400,000 copies. The Cosmopolitan will be sent in connection with the HERALD, both journals, for only $2.25.

FOURTH.

We have closed a contract with the Globe Bible Publishing Co. by which we can furnish our patrons with the entire series of "Shepp's World's Fair Photographed." The work is issued in thirty-two parts, regular price twenty-five cents each, each part containing eight pages of descriptive matter and eight full page half tone photographs. One coupon cut from the HERALD, accompanied by ten cents in coin will entitle the subscriber to one of these parts. The distribution will begin on Thursday, February 1st, and continue weekly until the entire series shall be taken. Every HERALD subscriber will be able to obtain this magnificent series of World's Fair views at exactly wholesale cost price. This offer is more fully described in detail elsewhere.

FIFTH.

The N. Y. Voice is the best and ablest prohibition paper published. We can furnish the HERALD in connection with The Voice, the latter accompanied with a premium book, "Martyn's Life of Wendell Phillips"—the three, for only $2.00.

SIXTH.

"Coin" is the title of a new publication issued by the Bimetallic League. It is a monthly, ably edited and a first class paper, the yeagly rate being fifty cents. The silver issue is not yet settled. Every Democrat, Republican and Prohibitionist ought to post himself on this subject. The joint rate for the two papers—HERALD and Coin will be only $1.25.

LOVE AND I.

Once I found Love sleeping
And caged him with a smile,
"Now that I have caught you
You must stay awhile."
But he pined and fretted,
Sighing ceaselessly,
As he beat against the bars,
"Give me liberty."
Touched by his lamenting,
I set wide the door;
Out he flew and vanished,
And I was as before.
By my lonely hearthstone
Bitterly I wept,
When with twilight's shadows
Through the door Love crept.
"Though I die when prisoned,"
He whispered, "yet when free—
Oh! woman heed the lesson—
I straight return to thee."—Vogue.

Women as Farmers.

California boasts of a number of women farmers who manage large estates, make money and keep healthy and happy. The comforts of farm life here are greater than they are in the east, and there is a possibility of gaining more than a mere living. Some of the women farmers have won more than mere local fame. Mrs. Theodosia Shepherd of Ventura is known in the east as a cultivator of California flower seeds and bulbs. Mrs. Strong is known far and wide as the woman who makes a good income by raising and selling pampas grass. Mrs. E. P. Buckingham of Vacaville is an orchardist whose fruit commands the highest price in eastern markets.

Another successful agriculturist is Mrs. Georgia McBride. A dozen years ago she was an invalid, a widow, poor, with four boys to bring up. She knew nothing of fruit raising, but with feminine recklessness she purchased 38 acres of land near San Jose and set it out as an orchard. Now she is prosperous, healthy and wealthy, as the wage earners go, and an enthusiastic advocate of farming for women.—San Francisco Correspondent.

Hiram Maxim's Youth.

When Hiram Maxim, the famous inventor, lived in Sangerville, anxious mammas used to warn their hopefuls not to play with "that wicked Maxim boy." In fact, young Maxim grew up under the doubtful reputation of being the very worst boy in the neighborhood. This isn't said for the purpose of encouraging any other Maine incorrigibles who are in the depths of their misdeeds. If Hiram had been a perfectly good little boy and had devoted his time to studying his lessons, he might have had that flying machine all completed by this time.

Hiram used to work at carriage painting in Abbot and was hired by D. D. Flynt. He was an artist with the brush. One day a man called to see Flynt while the latter was out. "There has been a man in to see you," said young Maxim. "What's his name?" "I don't know, but that's how he looks," and the boy pointed to a board on which he had roughly daubed a face. "I forgot to ask him his name," said the boy, "and so I drew that." Flynt knew his man.—Lewiston Journal.

Not In Her Set.

A lady went to get a check cashed at a bank where she was entirely unknown.

"It will be impossible for me to give you the money, madam," said the teller politely, "unless you can identify yourself in some way."

"But I am Miss C——!" said the lady.

"Certainly, but it will be necessary, for some one whom we know to give you an introduction to us."

She drew back and regarded him haughtily.

"But, sir," she said in what has been called "a tone of spurn," "I do not wish to know you!"—Life.

Japan's Great Artist.

Meizan is the name of Japan's greatest decorator of Satsuma art ware. A writer on the subject says Meizan is beyond question the first artist in Japan. No one can blend colors as harmoniously or paint flowers so delicately. No one is such a master of design as applied to borders. No one save Meizan, to put the case concretely, knows how to fill a bowl 2½ inches in diameter with 2,000 cho-cho, or butterflies, making each distinct and a thing of beauty.—Philadelphia Press.

His Gentle Wit.

She shook her head sadly when he had asked a fateful question.

"I wish you were all the world," he sighed.

"You said I was that to you once," she ventured coquettishly.

"Yes, but I don't think so now."

"No?"

"No, for all the world loves a lover," and his gentle wit won her over to a reconsideration of the question.—Detroit Free Press.

A sentence from a review of a novel printed in The Queen, an English publication, is suggestive. It ran, "The tale is a nicely told one, and no girl who has the responsibility of making out suitable library lists for her mother's reading need feel any hesitation about including it among the novels."

One hundred domestic servants are killed annually in England in the process of window cleaning. An invention recently patented is a window of which the outside may be cleaned without exposing the cleaner to any chance of a tumble.

The grip bacillus, which has been cultivated and photographed time and again, has the appearance of being a fine thread strung with numerous minute beads.

In Paris the theater will check the bicycles as it will a coat, and the barroom has pumps and repair outfits, as our own has lunch counters and stock tickers.

The performance of the Mendelssohn Quintette Company at the Imperial Opera House was perhaps the finest musical entertainment ever given in Vancouver. The large audience—for the house was crowded to the doors, and the gallery was packed—testified to the reputation of the company, and the anticipation of a musical treat by the people of Vancouver.

Congressman Gorman is confined to his room as a result of a severe fall he received Friday night. He is somewhat improved in condition, but is still suffering a great deal of pain. Unable to ease his fall, he sustained a very painful and possibly dangerous injury.

On Friday last, L. D. Dewey's chicken pickers picked 1480 head of chickens, turkeys and ducks, being an average of 185 head an hour for eight hours. This beats the record. Pretty good for the Tecumseh poultry house.

Fifteen ladies of Tecumseh will act as patronesses of the ball, and nothing will be left undone to make it the social event of the season. When James J. Corbett appeared in the play of "Gentleman Jack," he used to knock out "Charles Twitchell, of England," each evening in three rounds. Singularly enough when it came last Thursday to his meeting the real Chas. CHILLS AND FEVER.

Several years ago a man forty-five years of age, from a malarious district, came along distance to consult me for a chronic malarious affection for which he had doctored without intermission for over ten years. The treatment which had been mainly relied on by the various doctors he had consulted was quinine and other derivative of chinona bark. Of these preparations he had taken many pounds, and during several intervals he had taken a great many chill cures, but nothing seemed to have any permanent effect.

His complexion was of that dirty yellow so characteristic of ague patients, and his sunken, lusterless eyes, surrounded by dark circles, indicated how completely his health had been undermined. The tongue was heavily coated red with a thick brown coating, breath very offensive, and he complained of constant, dull headache. A poor appetite, indigestion, biliousness and constipation completed a tale of woe commonly heard in a malarious locality. The chills came on at irregular intervals. Sometimes he would not have one a month; then again every day for a while.

For this man I prescribed Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin as directed on the bottles, the Man-a-lin to be used until the bowels became regular and digestion good. A few weeks after I received a very enthusiastic letter from him, in which he declared himself nearly well and better than he had been in years, and had taken no quinine since beginning my treatment. I instructed him to gradually leave off the Man-a-lin which he did, but continued the Pe-ru-na a few months longer, and made a complete recovery, continuing to enjoy the best of health.

His case is one of which there are thousands in every malarious district who have been many years and still are searching for something to bring relief to their miserable condition. I am positive that Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin will cure every one of these, for I have watched its effect a good many years and I do not know a single failure.

The panel will consist of not more than twenty-three jurors and not less than sixteen, ten of whom may agree upon an indictment. The jurors will be charged specially upon the frauds in connection with the salaries scandal.

The toils are tightening around the conspirators who boldly falsified the canvass of the vote on the salaries amendments, and a web of evidence is being formed which will serve to entrap the most wary of the rascals. The determination of the officials to invoke the aid of the grand jury in investigating the frauds perpetrated by falsifying the canvass is being applauded by good citizens, irrespective of party affiliations. The people are strongly opposed to any attempt to whitewash the corrupt officials.

Attorney General Ellis has returned to auditor general for deposit in the state treasury $296, that being the amount of salary paid him on the auditor's warrants during the last seven months as increase of salary allowed by the legislature of 1893. As he claims the amendment of 1891, which increased his salary from $1,800 to $2,500, was carried despite the forgery in the Gogebic county return and the throwing out of the vote of Gratiot county, he does not propose to return any further sum unless the courts decide against him. The other state officers whose salaries were increased by the amendment of 1893 last week drew their salaries for January at the constitutional rate in force before that amendment was erroneously declared carried.

JEALOUSY CAUSES A TRAGEDY.

A Michigan Man Shoots His Wife and Is Himself Wounded by Officers.

GRAND HAVEN, Jan. 28.—A messenger reached this city at 7 o'clock Saturday night from Robinson township, about 10 miles southeast of this city, in search of the sheriff and a physician, and reported that during the afternoon a man named Hawkins had shot his wife through the neck. A local constable named William Foster, who, with two assistants, went to arrest Hawkins, was fired upon by him as they approached the house. The officers were not harmed. Constable Foster then fired on Hawkins with a shotgun loaded with buckshot, wounding him so severely that he died. The messenger reports Hawkins' wife probably fatally injured. The sheriff and physician have left for the scene of the tragedy and no further particulars can be learned until their return. Jealousy was undoubtedly the cause of the trouble, as Hawkins, who was in the city Saturday, told a merchant he was in trouble, having a few days before discovered a man named Ellsworth, who is a mail carrier between Holland and Grand Rapids, in his house alone with his wife. Hawkins and his wife are comparative strangers in this locality, having moved to Robinson last summer from Texas and located on the farm where the tragedy occurred.

BONE TAKEN OUT OF HER HEAD.

Remarkable Operation Performed on a Woman at Ann Arbor.

ANN ARBOR, Jan. 26.—A remarkable operation was successfully performed in Dr. Fleming Carrow's clinic at the university Thursday, the patient being Mrs. Danbury, of Colon. The cause of the trouble was a growth of bone filling the hollow part of the skull just above the eyes, endangering both the eyesight and the brain. The bone of the forehead was sawed so that a V-shaped portion was taken out, the bony growth underneath in the sinus chiseled out and then the frontal bone replaced. The patient is recovering nicely.

The house and furniture were consumed. The latter was insured for $500.

BANKER CHENEY ARRESTED.

A Sparta Man Said to Have Held Back Money Collected by Him.

SPARTA, Jan. 25.—A. B. Cheney, banker, ex-member of the legislature and for many years the most prominent man in this place, has been arrested on a [illegible] charge. A. B. Collins had $2,500 in an eastern bank and drew for the amount through Cheney's exchange bank. Cheney, it is alleged, received the money in due time, but claimed he had not. Collins wrote the eastern banker and was informed they had paid the money on a draft for Cheney. Collins then demanded the money. Cheney acknowledged he had received $500 and paid this to Collins, but claimed he had not received the balance.

Two additional suits have been begun against Banker Cheney. The Commercial savings bank of Adrian charges that Cheney collected $9,000 for the bank and converted the money to his own use, and Spraul and McGurrin, of Grand Rapids, charge that he collected money on a note sent him by them and made no return.

Chapin, a member of a banking firm which made an assignment last July, with liabilities in excess of assets of about $80,000, has been arrested on complaint of a Mrs. Beggs, who charges embezzlement. The complaint is on the ground that Mrs. Beggs left a note of nearly $900 with the bank some time before the assignment, with instructions to collect the interest only. Both principal and interest were collected and Mrs. Beggs claims she was not apprised of the fact until after the assignment, when Chapin sent her a certificate of deposit for the amount.

STARTLING RUMOR.

A Michigan Pleasure Party Said to Have Perished.

THE REPORT UNCONFIRMED.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 29.—The little schooner Florence, which left Holland, Mich., four months ago for the Gulf of Mexico, has been capsized in the Mississippi river at a point near New Orleans and the passengers and crew—a pleasure party—were drowned. This is the substance of a statement contained in a letter received by Mrs. Robert Lunder, of 151 Huron street, whose father was on the vessel. The start from Holland was made in September. The party on the boat consisted of George Henry Brooks, aged 65; George Brooks, aged 19; Eddie Brooks, aged 17; Bertie Brooks, aged 11; John Howard, aged 65; Mrs. John Howard, aged 65; James Howard, their son, aged 35.

The schooner Florence is a vessel of thirty-five tons that has seen considerable service in the lumber trade on Lake Michigan. Late last season she was fitted up by George H. Brooks, of Holland, for a voyage through the Illinois river, down the Mississippi and along the gulf coast of Florida.

Local vesselmen think that if an accident befell the Florence it would have been reported before this in the regular press dispatches from New Orleans, and that the news would not have come to Milwaukee in the round-about way that it did.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 29.—Nothing is known here about the loss of the schooner Florence in the Mississippi river.

REPORT OF RAILROADS.

Commissioner Billings on the Railroads of Michigan.

LANSING, Jan. 25.—In his annual report Railroad Commissioner Billings recommends greater caution in trespassing on tracks and trains and advises intemperate people to keep away from railways in order to lessen casualties. Stronger railroad equipment and better safety appliances should be required. He says: "In view of the popular demand for rapid transit and the fact that protection is afforded at the principal street crossings where necessary, it is very desirable that the authorities of cities and villages should reasonably modify their ordinances in this regard."

In Michigan, for 1892, railroad employes numbered 27,819; passengers carried, 17,506,063, and tons of freight moved, 32,813,539. The total number of accidents to persons in Michigan reported by all roads for 1892 is 786, an increase of 96 over the number for the preceding year. Of these 207 are reported as accidental, and 579 as due to neligence, lack of caution and trespassing. One hundred and forty-seven are reported as due to trespassing. Of the total number 536 were accidents to railroad employes. Michigan railroads earned $38,377,426.59, and paid $893,707.01 taxes in 1892.

LOCAL OPTION LAW IS VALID.

Judge Buck, of Kalamazoo, Renders an Important Decision.

KALAMAZOO, Jan. 28.—In the mandamus case of Fred. H. Giddings against H. K. Wells, brought to test the legality of the local option law in Van Buren county, Judge Buck has filed his opinion denying a writ. He says:

"I have examined with care the affidavit and return the suggestions which have been made with reference thereto by counsel; and while there may be some doubts with reference to the adoption of the law I feel it my duty to solve them in favor of the validity of the proceedings taken to adopt the law and to hold that the local option law is in force in Van Buren county; and I am also impelled to this ruling because of the importance of the questions at stake as well as because a speedy review can be had before the supreme court and a decision arrived at which will be of great value not only in this county but elsewhere in the state and finally settle what has hitherto been a mooted question."

Snow a Boon to the Lumbermen.

THE DANGER OF NEGLECT.

IN CASES OF PILES AND OTHER RECTAL DISEASES.

There is no class of diseases so difficult to permanently cure when once firmly established as affections of the rectum and lower bowels. The tendency to chronic disease is very marked and although the first symptoms are unmistakable, yet they are in most cases neglected until deep seated disease is the result. In nearly every case of rectal disease, fistula, ulcers in rectum, fissure and similar troubles the first symptoms are heat itching about the affected part finally developing into an ordinary case of Piles.

It may be itching bleeding or protruding Piles it matters not, the end will be the same if neglected, and right here is the point to take time by the forelock and cure the piles, and effectually ward off any further danger. The surest and safest way to remove any form of Piles is to use the Pyramid Pile Cure, a remedy which has been fairly tested by thousands of sufferers and physicians, and it cures every form of Piles rapidly and without pain or inconvenience.

It is not to be confounded with the ordinary ointments, suppositories, pills and salves, so extensively sold and advertised as sure cures for Piles.

The Pyramid Pile Cure differs from all these in that it contains no poison, no opiates, and more over gives results on the first application.

Your druggist will tell you that no pile cure gives such universal satisfaction. A Treatise on Piles, invaluable to every sufferer, is enclosed in each package.

A man in Ontario, Canada, is slowly laughing himself to death. He probably compared the Wilson bill with the Chicago tariff plank.

Lost manhood, lost energy, weakness general debility are all cured by P. P. P. New life, new energy are infused in the system by the blood purifying and cleansing properties of P. P. P., the greatest blood purifier of the age.

Queen Lilluokalani was too late in reaching the conclusion that a massacre is a very unladylike affair.

Everyone gives it the highest praise. H. Gradel, Druggist, Walnut and Allison Sts., Cincinnati, O., says this of his trade: "I sell my share of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and my customers that have used this preparation speak of it in the highest terms."

It's a cold day for the housekeeper when Pearline gets left. Take Pearline from washing and cleaning and nothing remains but hard work. It shows in the things that are washed; it tells on the woman who washes. Pearline saves work, and works safely. It leaves nothing undone that you want done well; what it leaves undone, it ought not to do.

The baby was having a spasm, and the small boy spread the news in this way: "Our baby's got a spavin, and you'd better keep away or you'll catch it."

The public meeting advertised to take place at the council room Wednesday evening, in the interest of the suffering miners of the north, was an utter failure.—Blissfield Advance.

Crusaders are on deck in Osseo. A number of wives and mothers shut up a pool room by visiting it, singing and praying, and urging the men to become converted.—Hudson Post.

Many farmers are fattening hogs on wheat and are satisfied with the experiment, finding that their wheat disposed of in this way brings them more money than to sell it at present prices.

The repert that the Blissfield council closed the saloons at 7 o'clock, was a false alarm. Nine o'clock was the hour. A man could not get comfortably drunk between supper time and 7 o'clock. The council had considered that point.

Tecumseh pupils had contemplated a most jolly time on the ice, Monday of last week and to add to the enjoyment, somebody might have consented to be drowned, but the rains came and the skate was "off."—Adrian Press.

David Woodward is shipping tile to his county farm by the car load. What is going to happen?—Clinton Department Herald.

Why, merely that David is going to see that his farm is "duly tiled;" that's all.—Adrian Press.

A gentleman representing Sells Bros' circus was in town Monday getting information relative to people who were swindled in a shell game, connected with an alleged Sells circus that exhibited here a year ago last summer. He claims the people so swindled will get their money back.—Blissfield Advance.

Supervisor Hile, of Ogden, should be prosecuted for cruelty to animals. He drove his horse 30 miles through the mud one day last week, in the interest of the starving miners, and was obliged to walk part of the way. Hile and the horse were nearly bushed. This was cruel treatment of both animals.—Adrian Press.

A bright little girl who happened to be in the parlor last Sunday evening when she was not wanted, told the gentleman caller that she was half past nine years old, but it would take a great deal of pressing to find out just how old her young lady sister was. As the visitor tarried till after midnight it is safe to say he tried his level best to find out her age.—Hudson Post.

A debating society in the eastern part of the county is struggling with the question, "Whether anticipation or realization adds most to the sum of human weal or woe." So far as we are concerned, the anticipation of good roads during January, and a procession of subscribers wanting to pay was very pleasant, but the realization, had it only materalized, would have been even more agreeable.—Hudson Post.

The vested choir of Christ church including twenty boys, took the overland trip to Tecumseh last night, and rendered the musical portion of the service at St. Peter's church, for Rev. Blachford. Rev. C. H. Channer accompanied them, and preached the sermon of the evening. Mr. Channer and the young gentlemen were treated in a cordial manner by the Tecumseh Episcopals.—Evening Telegram.

The performance of "Little Duchess," at Slayton's new hall, last Friday and Saturday evenings, under auspices of K. O. T. M., was a success and enjoyed by all who attended. The leading parts were taken by Mrs. A. O. Miller and Miss Stella Miller, the well known theatrical lights—they still retain their old-time enthusiasm and popularity as performers. The other characters were well rendered by home talent. It is possible that same company will soon repeat the play in Dundee and some neighboring towns.—Dundee Reporter.

By the secretary's report it will be seen that the arrangement has been made to operate the Morenci creamery throughout the coming season. This is well for our general business interests, as it is an institution that, rightly managed, is of material benefit to the town. Its recent history has been unfortunate, but this should in no sense affect its future, for its backing now is such as to insure absolute safety to all patrons. It is hoped that a greater quantity of milk will be received from April to December than ever before in the same period since the concern was started.—Morenci Observer.

A man in Mascoutah was given six years in the penitentiary for stealing two cigars. There are people alive today who deserve longer time for the cigars they give away.

UNCLE SAM'S WINE CELLAR.

He Doesn't Drink, but He Has Lots of Rare Wines on Hand.

A ghostly silence pervades the place. It is like the silence of the tomb. The outside world seems already centuries away. The air is cool and soothing, and three flaring gas jets cast an intricate combination of shadows upon the massive masonry of the arches, says a writer in the Boston Herald, in describing the wine vaults under the Boston custom house.

After hundreds of years, when Boston is only a hole in the ground like the ancient cities in the Mediterranean, some archæologist will dig down through the accumulated dust of centuries and find those hewn arches standing as they stand now.

And yet the whole substantial structure is like the foolish man's house, founded upon the sand and mud of Boston harbor. Three thousand tall pine trees, stripped of their limbs, were driven down close together in the black ooze to form a foundation for the building. These piles would last but a few short years in the outer air, but sunk in the harbor mud they are believed to be as indestructible as the earth itself.

When it was built, the custom house was upon the water front, and even now the cellar is below high water mark, yet there is no drier cellar on Beacon hill. The builders seemed to have been the builders of pyramids and catacombs reincarnate, and the work was done to stand after the builders themselves were long forgotten. Upon the heads of the piles, in the form of a Maltese cross, was laid a capping of granite in hydraulic cement. Around it were built the massive walls of solid granite 6 feet thick, which were to be a protection against heat and cold, fire and water and all the elements. Within these walls rose the puzzling scheme of sturdy pillars and arches which made the cellar a maze of low roofed chambers, niches, crypts and passages.

When the visitor enters the basement and storehouse, which is on the street level, he feels instinctively conscious of the huge pile of granite over his head. This floor, within the surrounding row of offices, is used for the storage of champagne and bottled wines. The cases, which hold two dozen bottles, are piled in regular tiers as high as the ceiling, and under the main entrance they are packed in solidly. There are usually between 3,000 and 4,000 cases, or over 40,000 bottles, which if popped all at once would make the granite dome tremble and might drown the attendants in a foaming flood.

When a consignment of rum, which means anything from champagne to brandy, is landed from a foreign vessel, the government orders it to be sent to the custom house cellar. If no owner appears to claim it, it is kept for a year and then is sold at auction to pay the duties and warehousing charges.

If the owner appears, he can pay the duties and withdraw his liquor for immediate consumption, or he can give bonds for the duties and keep his stock stored in the government vaults until he wishes to withdraw it. The government charges him storages according to the capacity of packages and allows him to take it away by degrees as he needs it, paying duty only on the amount withdrawn.

Very often an importation of wine and spirits may change hands several times while it lies in bond deep under the granite dome. In such cases it is sold in bond, and the owner, instead of the importer, pays the duties and makes the final entry of the merchandise.

An Explanation From Disraeli.

Mr. Justin McCarthy, discoursing on the house of commons, related a capital story of Disraeli. It was during the Russo-Turkish war, and while relations were very strained between England and the czar a member was indiscreet enough to put a question to Disraeli, who was then prime minister, as to the policy of the government in the event of the emperor of Russia doing a certain act.

Members shuddered as Disraeli, with a most funereal face, slowly advanced to the table. The question, he declared, in a slow, measured voice, was one of such perilous moment that the honorable member acted most unwisely in putting it on the paper, yet it was a question of such importance that the only course now open to the government was to accept the inevitable and boldly answer, "If," declared Disraeli, "the emperor takes this step, all I can say is—and I am speaking after a prolonged consultation with my colleagues—the government will then give the policy they are to pursue their very best consideration."—Westminster Gazette.

Cromwell and the Specter.

The stories of the "White Lady" that periodically visits the German royal family and of the "Little Red Man" that frequently paid his respects to the great Napoleon, are tolerably well known, especially that of the former. But few perhaps are familiar with the story of Cromwell's "Giant Specter." It appeared to him one night when he was wide awake and quietly resting on his couch. In appearance the apparition was a woman of gigantic proportions. Approaching him, she announced in tones like thunder, "Within the year you, my son, will be recognized as the greatest man in Britain."—St. Louis Republic.

A Remedy For The Grip.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the grip, is Kemp's Balsam, which is especially adapted to diseases of the throat and lungs. Do not wait for the first symptoms of the disease, but get a bottle and keep it on hand for use the moment it is needed. If neglected, the grip has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. All druggists sell the Balsam.

A Little Deceiver.

It cannot be called a fraud, as it is of too great value and is not to blame for being misused.

Vick's New Branching Aster when cut resembles the chrysanthemum so closely that only experts can tell the difference, and as it comes into flower six weeks before the "mums," and at a time when flowers are scarce, it is a great temptation to the florist to sell these Asters for "mums." The Branching Aster can be easily grown out doors, and the seeds cost only 25 cents per packet, so that every person who has a foot of ground can enjoy a grand treat for almost nothing.

If you want honest goods send 10cts. to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for Floral Guide; it costs nothing, as the 10 cents may be deducted from first order.

Aunt Jane Kelly has bought the building formerly used as an office by Dr. Kishpaugh, of Oliver Drake, and will have it removed to her premises, to be used as a bee house.

Will Binns, who has been suffering with disordered blood to the extent that it made him resemble the physical statue of Hercules, is improving, and the false picture of Corbett's power is fading from his frame.

The work for conversion is steadily receiving its reward in this vicinity. The topic of christianity is the chief one. Two churches here are working for the salvation of mankind and the bible is being preached in various byways beside. New converts are springing up every day. The Y. P. S. C. E. had about 15 names presented to it last Sunday, in the Presbyterian church, for active membership, and 23 new converts stood up to show the harvest of this revival of the word of God.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Memorial Tribute of Macon Grange No. 167 to the memory of our Worthy Brother William H. Mather.

We realize that as Patrons of Husbandry, this, our Grange, has sustained a severe loss in the death of Brother Mather. His was an ever active and useful service. We sorrow because we shall ever miss his words of cheer, good counsel and his presence at the meetings of our body. We mourn and would express our sorrow, while at the same time we do know that God does devise the means that His people shall not be expelled from him, but will bring His banished home to Himself.

And, whereas, in the providence of God our brother has been called from work to reward we can feel that those who look forward to a reunion in another world that separations will there be unknown; therefore afflictions in losses are in reality dispensations of mercy, therefore,

Resolved, that we bow in submission to the will of the Great Master who appoints to every man his work and allots his time of service and thankfully remembers and acknowledges His love and goodness in sparing to us for so many years one so faithful and useful in the cultivation of this particular Husbandry.

Resolved, that we strive to emulate and copy the sweet fraternal spirit so manifest in the life and service of our brother, and rejoice in and imitate more and more the activities, spirit and zeal of our brother workman.

Resolved, that we be more constant in our endeavor to work in the different degrees of our order and with more zeal and devotion, as one of our brothers is called up higher, to render more efficient service in this field.

Resolved, that this memorial be placed upon our Grange record, also that it be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD and Tecumseh News and a copy be sent to the family of our deceased brother, and Grange Hall be draped in mourning for sixty days; thus manifesting the feelings of love and esteem we cherish for his memory, and expressive in some degree of the deep sorrow of our hearts in this bereavement. As coworkers and associates we will unite in our supplications to God that the affliction be to us all in reality a blessing and mercy from our Supreme Master, Christ Jesus.

S. W. FARMERS' CLUB.

The February meeting was held with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bartless, on Friday, Feb. 2. About seventy persons were present; among them several invited guests.

After a sumptuous dinner was partaken of, the exercises began with a piece of instrumental music, beautifully rendered, by Mrs. J. F. Spafard.

The report of the last meeting, held at J. P. Tracy's, was read and approved.

W. E. Peas read an excellent paper on the Columbian Exposition. He said: As a national undertaking it was decidedly a financial failure, but viewed from an individual standpoint it was a benefit and an improvement in every way. The finest thing he saw was the White City itself.

Mrs. J. F. Spafard read a beautiful description of her two visits to the World's Fair; the first made in July, when the grounds presented a fine appearance and the lake breezes were gentle and refreshing. She spoke particularly of the fine exhibit of Steinway pianos and the musical instruments used by some of the old musicians, and of a harpsicord once the property of Queen Elizabeth.

Mrs. E. Y. Green described the work of the artist in butter. She was told it "was done with two little sticks and a twist of the wrist."

Mrs. L. S. Hulbert read a poem on the subject, written in her inimitable style. Mrs. L. M. Baldwin also about electricity, etc. in rhyme.

G. S. Rawson gave a graphic account of his visit; wished his children and his neighbors' children had seen the great exhibition. The contents of the transportation and government buildings were of special interest to him. He spoke of seeing Washington's old chaise there.

L. M. Baldwin noted the great discoveries in electrical science since 1876. The furnaces in the Machinery annex fed with oil instead of smutty coal.

Mrs. Frank Spafard took exceptions to Mr. Pease's denominating the Midway Plaisance as the prince of fakes; for so educated and traveled a man as Julian Hawthorne said it would take years of travel in many lands to see as much of different races as one could see on Midway. She admired the Court of Honor as much as any one object at the fair.

Miss Hitchcock, in her two trips, made a comparative study of the products of the different countries, as well as of the states. The Anthropological building and the State buildings, especially that of Massachusetts, were interesting to her.

Mrs. Calhoun enjoyed most of all the electrical display at night, when the dome of the Administration building reflected the colors of the rainbow and the water in the lagoons looked like molten gold.

Mrs. J. P. Lapham admired the illuminations and thought the moon looked decidedly old fashioned by contrast. She could almost say, like St. John, that she had been in the spirit, so much was she entranced by the beauty.

Mrs. L. D. Watkins said: One great object lesson to be drawn from the fair was this; it shows what great results the united efforts of man can accomplish. Unity is a masterly power."

Nettie English read a description of some objects with which she was most pleased. The Russian exhibit of tiger and bear skins, the sable and ermine furs, Moscow's gold and silver brocades, the Italian exhibit of Carrara marble statuettes, and above all, the loan collection of paintings in the art gallery.

Lucy English described the new liberty bell, Mexico's exhibit in the mines building and the set of Evangeline plates in the exhibit of English china.

John English enjoyed all. The first sight of the White City amply repaid one for their time and expense.

The meeting now adjournud to meet with Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin the first Friday in March.

The Tribune Almanac.

Among the annual Almanacs which are put into print at this season of the year, The New York Tribune Almanac must be rated as easily the first. The New York Sun (Dem.) praises it as an exceedingly valuable and accurate book of reference, and, on the other hand, calls its principal rival a book of popular mis-information. Although emanating from the office of the most aggressive Republican newspaper of the United States, The Tribune Almanac is absolutely devoid of partisanship. The Tribune's "arithmetic man" who figures up majorities the night after election, lays aside his political affiliations when he comes to work upon the Almanac. Accuracy, fairness and completeness are the watchwords then, and the result is seen in the wide distribution of The Tribune Almanac all over the United States, and its use by Democrats, Populists and Republicans alike. The number for 1894, which has just come to us, has brought its election returns, statistics and general information up to date, and is the largest and most complete number ever issued. The price is only 25 cents a copy, although now a volume of 360 pages. It was 25 cents a copy, even in the early Forties, when it began its career as a little document of 80 pages.

Don't Tobacco Spit or Smoke your Life Away

The cost is trifling and the man who wants to quit and can't runs no physical or financial risk in using "No-to-bac." Sold by Baker & Ham, Tecumseh, Mich. Book at Drug Stores or by mail free. The grand jury is now in session at Lansing and the election scandal will be probed to the bottom. There should be no whitewashing in this matter. Hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may.

The Free Press aptly says: The vote on the Wilson bill is scheduled for high noon to-day. It will pass the House and then comes the wrestle with senatorial courtesy, which is developing a startling resemblance to total depravity.

The last day of the tariff debate was a field day in the House. The big guns on both sides participated. Congressman Wilson's closing speech was only thirty minutes long, but it carried the House by storm and he received a grand ovation for his effort.

The incorporation of the income tax provision into the tariff bill evidently strengthened that measure instead of weakening it. Fifty majority was all the friends of the Wilson bill claimed for that measure, but it actually passed by sixty-four majority.

The sugar trust has received a knock down blow in the Wilson bill. The McKinley act put raw sugar on the free list and taxed refined sugar, by which the trust pocketed several millions a year. This tax is now abolished and the sugar bounty goes with it.

The eastern papers call the income tax a "[illegible]." If the one hundred and sixty millions a year paid for pensions isn't a war expenditure, what is it? Pay the war pensions with an income tax. How does this plan strike you, gentlemen?

The Wilson bill passed the House on Thursday last by the decisive majority of sixty-four; more than the author of the bill claimed for it. Its passage was followed by one of the most remarkable scenes ever witnessed in the House. That vote marked the beginning of the end of war taxation.

Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, made a powerful speech during the debate on the income tax. He dealt many sledge hammer blows in its favor, and among other things presented the fact that according to reliable statistics, 91 per cent of the population of the United states own but 29 per cent of the total wealth, while the remaining 9 per cent of population own 71 per cent of the total wealth.

Secretary Carlisle has sold those bonds although it was necessary for him to invoke the aid of Wall street before he was able to do so, but it remains to be seen whether he will be allowed to use the money received for them to pay current expenses. Congress is very much divided on the subject, and for that reason failed to agree upon anything previous to the issue of the bonds, but its members seem determined to do something.

The New York World says: The fact that all New York Congressmen are on record as opposed to an income tax has been cited as proof that New York is against it. It simply proves, however, that a small but noisy minority among the constituents of these Congressmen whose wealth and social position make them prominent, are using their influence to concentrate attention upon their protests, which they present in chorus and call public opinion.

There are thrifty men in Congress as well as out of it, and the thrift of some of the Congressmen may soon lead to a considerable scandal. The law provides for the payment of a clerk for each member of the House at the rate of $100 a month while Congress is in session, and some of the over-thrifty members have been taking advantage of the hard times to employ clerks at much smaller salaries and pocket the difference. This has leaked out and the result may be an investigation.

It is evident that the Senate Finance committee does not expect to dispose of the tariff bill in a few days or even a few weeks. That committee has sent out about 400,000 circular letters containing a long list of questions concerning the tariff and its general effect upon all branches of commerce and industry and it is still sending out more. According to a census expert, if all of these questions are answered and returned to the committee, it would take the entire force of the U. S. Census office three months to classify and arrange them as to make the information they contain available to members of the committee.

AN ABSURD SYSTEM.

Should Be Less Delay in Carrying Out the Mandate of the People.

On the 8th of November, 1892, the people of the United States held an election which turned on the question of tariff reform. The subject had been under discussion for more than two years. The issue was made as sharply as possible. The verdict of the people was unmistakable. By an overwhelming majority they declared in favor of a lower tariff.

In his message to congress President Cleveland says:

"After a hard struggle tariff reform is directly before us. Nothing so important claims our attention, and nothing so clearly presents itself as both an opportunity and a duty—an opportunity to deserve the gratitude of our fellow-citizens, and a duty imposed on us by our oft-repeated professions, and by the emphatic mandate of the people. After full discussion our countrymen have spoken in favor of this reform, and they have confided the work of its accomplishment to the hands of those who are solemnly pledged to it.

"If there is anything in the theory of a representation in public places of the people and their desires, if public officers are really the servants of the people, and if political promises and professions have any binding force, our failure to give the relief so long awaited will be sheer recreancy. Nothing should intervene to distract our attention or disturb our effort until this reform is accomplished by wise and careful legislation."

This is perfectly sound doctrine. If Mr. Cleveland had been inaugurated and congress had met last January, at the same time with all the governors and legislators chosen on the day of the presidential election, there would have been no dissent from his statement of the case. Republicans themselves frankly admit that the people had given a "mandate," and that it was an "emphatic" one. It was then as clear that the people of the country wanted tariff reform as that the people of Massachusetts wanted a republican for United States senator, or those of Missouri wanted a democrat for the same office.

A year has now passed. One of the greatest financial convulsions in our history has occurred. We are in a period of "hard times." Many are out of work or have had their wages cut down, and are dissatisfied with the existing situation. It happened that four or five important states were to hold elections for state officers in November, 1893. These elections resulted in republican victories. Immediately the cry was raised that a new "mandate" had been issued by the people; that they had served notice that they did not want the tariff reform policy carried out.

Of course this is an absurd plea. When the people of forty-four states have held an election upon the issue of tariff reform, the voting of three or four states a year later—turning largely, and in New York almost exclusively, upon state issues—cannot be considered as entitled to the slightest weight. At the same time it is true that the very raising of this claim does confuse the situation and is calculated to puzzle the weaker sort of congressmen, who are always anxious to "keep in touch with the people," and who are told that the people do not feel now as they felt a year ago.

The anomaly is so monstrous that there ought to be a radical reform. Two "mandates" at once are one too many. The thing to do is to carry out every mandate as soon as possible after it is issued at Washington, as is the rule at every state capital in the country. The present condition of things ought to result in an agitation which will bring about a change. A people sensible enough to run their state governments on the proper plan ought not to maintain forever so idiotic a system of federal legislation as now prevails. It is a reproach to the common sense of the nation.—N. Y. Evening Post.

CUT THEM OFF.

Let the Steel Rail Manufacturer Paddle His Own Canoe—Let Rails Be Free.

The Wilson bill is excellent so far as it goes. It makes raw materials free. This will reduce prices of manufactured goods, enlarge the demand for them and compel the manufacturers to employ more labor at higher wages. It reduces duties and will lessen the cost of living without lowering wages. It will be a boon to manufacturers and laborers and a God-send to consumers. But in one respect, at least, the bill will not do all it should do. It will take much from trusts but it will still leave them good pickings.

Take, for example, the steel rail trust. Duties on steel rails have been reduced from $13.44 per ton to 25 per cent.—about $5 per ton. But why leave any duty at all? It will yield no revenue except to the trust. There is not a shadow of a doubt but that steel rails can be and are manufactured in some of our largest mills for less than $20, and probably for less than $19 per ton. These are figures that could not be touched by foreign manufacturers—at least in our own markets. Indeed, it is probable that if our manufacturers were not favored by duties they would soon be exporting more rails than are expected by any foreign country. About the time the new tariff schedule was under consideration by the ways and means committee the steel rail trust let go its grip and prices fell from $29, where they had been for several years, to less than $22. After the 25 per cent. rate had been agreed upon the trust took a new hold and fixed prices at $25—just below the point at which it would cease to be profitable to import. The duty will enable the manufacturers to charge about $5 more than they otherwise could do on every ton of steel rails sold in this country. It is worth tens of millions of dollars to the trust, but nothing whatever to the government. It will take millions out of the pockets of both the producers and consumers of grains, meats, etc., shipped over railroads, and return nothing to their pockets.

The one-quarter cent per pound duty left on refined sugar has no foundation in justice. It will simply license one of the worst trusts on American soil to extract $10,000,000 per annum from consumers. In no other country is sugar refined so cheaply as in our great refineries. Our exports greatly exceed our imports. During the past year this trust, protected by a duty of one-half cent per pound, has paid dividends of about $20,000,000 on an actual capital of less than $50,000,000 and besides has laid by a surplus of between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000.

The saw, ax, cartridge and dozens of other trusts can still ply their nefarious business after the Wilson bill is in operation. They all export their products and give special discounts to foreigners. They need no duty whatever and it will be an act of shame to leave them one per cent. Wilson has clipped the wings of these vultures; he should cut off their heads. Why has he not done so? Is the fear of entrenched corporate capital so great that even a party which represents the wishes of nearly two-thirds of the American people dare not lift its arm to strike the death-blow to monopoly? If so, it will be in order for another congressman to arise and inquire, "where are we at?"

B. W. H.

AN EMERGENCY.

The Time Has Arrived for the Imposition of an Income Tax.

One answer given by many congressmen to the World's inquiries is that an income tax is to be approved only for use "in an emergency."

Very well. Is not the emergency upon us?

The enormous pension roll, the looted treasury and the heavy obligations imposed by the extravagance of the Fifty-first congress absolutely compel the present congress to provide in some way for an increased revenue during the next few years.

At the same time the people have demanded and the party in power has promised that their burdens shall be lightened, and especially that the taxes upon the necessaries of life and the raw materials of manufacture shall be materially reduced.

If this demand is to be satisfied and this promise kept congress must find some means of increasing revenues from other than tariff sources, or it must sit still and let the treasury fail to meet its obligations, to the ruin of the national credit.

It is to meet this "emergency" that an income tax is proposed, and no alternative half so just has been suggested. The history of the former income tax shows that a very moderate and easily borne impost of this character, levied exclusively upon large incomes, will yield a sum ample to make good the loss of revenue from tariff reduction.

The real question is: Shall we levy a little tax upon large incomes where it will be scarcely at all felt, or shall we continue to make the people pay out of scant earnings a "sorely felt" tribute upon all the necessaries of life? Shall we tax luxury or want? Shall superfluous wealth bear its fair share of the public burdens, or shall they fall mainly upon the shoulders of wage-earners?

Stop the Uncertainty.

The new tariff bill will have, it is to be hoped, the right of way in congress at once until it is passed. We say this irrespective of the criticisms that a closer analysis may develop. There is no denial from any source that the democrats are pledged to a revision of some sort. Literally their pledge is to "a tariff for revenue only," and a revision that makes a shortage in revenue of $50,000,000 a year is hardly a revision "for revenue only." The republican campaign orators are entitled to the issue of a bill the people understood the democrats would pass when they elected them into power last year. Such being the case, as a change of about this sort is almost inevitable, let it be made with the least possible delay. American industries can get along with either the McKinley bill or the Wilson bill, if they are given a chance to adapt themselves to the case; but they can't get along prosperously with uncertainty. "If 'twere well done" when 'twere done quickly." Of the effect of the publication of the tariff bill on industrial values, we quote the following from the circular published weekly by a republican banker, Henry Clews, who says: "Judging from the tone of prices outside of 'industrials' the general bill does not appear to have excited any distrust unfavorable to investments." The "industrials" are the trust stocks—sugar trust, cordage trust, etc.—and the country can view a decline in their stocks with equanimity.—The Voice (Prohibition).

True Democratic Tones.

"So far as Alabama is concerned," says the Montgomery Advertiser (dem.), "we can speak, we can hope with some authority, for the democracy here. The democracy of Alabama does not believe in protection, and Chairman Wilson can be assured that the protection cry going up from Birmingham is not the cry of the Alabama democracy."

"It is vitally important that the democrats lose no time in dealing with the tariff," says the Boston Herald (dem.). "To avoid this error they must first act upon principle, and not be swerved from that line by local clamor. And then they must act promptly."

—The attention of congress is invited to the fact that the tariff proteges here and there are closing or threatening to close their works, or reducing or threatening to reduce wages. This is their way of bringing pressure to bear against the Wilson bill. The best way to bring this sort of argument to an end is to get the bill into the hands of the president as quickly as the tariff reformers in 1846 got their bill into the hands of President Polk. It took them only a month and a-half. If this congress would do as well the Wilson bill would be a law before the end of January and there would be no further use for the practical blue ruin argument.—Chicago Herald.

THE BIRDS OF NORTH AMERICA.

In connection with the foregoing report of our Ornithological Chapter, it is only right to call the attention of all lovers of birds to the magnificent work now being issued by the Natural Science Association of America, and entitled "The Birds of North America." Edition limited to 1,000. It is emphatically an original work, original in design and execution, and whether in letter press, illustrations or price, it is unapproached by anything of the kind in existance. It is recommended by the highest scientific, ecclesiastic and educational authority as being the most attractive, meritorious, pure and ennobling exposition of our ornithology yet given to the public. Dr. Elliott Coues, author of "Birds of the North-West," says: "It is a really notable work." Prof. C. J. Maynard, author of the "Birds of Eastern North America," says: "It contains the best pictures of the species which I have ever seen." Thos. G. Gentry, author of "Life Histories of Birds," and "Nests and Eggs of Birds of the United States," says: "It is the cheapest and best publication on ornithology in this country. The drawings are of a very high order, and rivals in beauty of design and finish the more costly works published abroad or in this country. It should be found in our homes and in libraries generally." And, according to Dr. Theodore Gill, a member of the National Academy of Sciences, "It is not only a meritorious volume, but is altogether so handsome as to make it a very appropriate presentation book or ornament for the family table." It is an imperial quarto volume of engraved figures of all our species, artistically reproduced, true in all hues of color to their natural plumage and botanical surroundings. It also includes a copious text description of their habits and characteristics, and embracing in general the observations made by the most eminent writers on ornithology, and a systematic table, arranged according to the classification adopted by the American Ornithologists' Union. Includes all the additions and corrections of our North American species which have been made to date, with an index to page, plate and figure of each species according to the A. O. U. number. It is illustrated with one hundred and nineteen full page colored plates, each representing from one to thirty or more species. It is the finest book on American birds issued since Audubon, and is pronounced by some authorities surperior to that now rare and costly work. It is issued in half and full bindings, Russia, seal, or morocco, at the net price of $40 and $45 respectively; but in response to a special letter, the association authorized me to say that a substantial discount will be made to such of our A. A. members and others as are working naturalists. We commend this work especially to members of the Wilson Ornithological Chapter. It is also a very useful and appropriate addition to the home and reference library, and for presentation purposes generally. Address regarding it, the Natural Science Association, 114 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Sample of plates and text can be had by sending twenty-five cents in postage stamps.

In the industrial trades generally the manufacturers have not had so much fear of the tariff as they have had doubts as to their ability to cut down wages without justifying strikes.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that it becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which is usually the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure. Call upon your druggist for it.

THE WOODS' GHOST.

Possibly General Fawncliffe was eccentric because he could not help it, but it is more probable that he did things in a manner entirely different from anybody else because he wanted to be odd and wanted to make a sensation. He was a wealthy man, and therefore he could do very nearly as he liked. He was haughty, overbearing and irritable. I always thought that if he had been the czar of Russia or the shah of Persia he would have played his role very well. He had built a fine house on the banks of the Delaware, and at the verge of the Block woods, of which he was the owner. He was not more than 45 years old and appeared to be entirely alone in the world; at any rate, no one in Blockville ever heard that he had any relations.

At the time of which I write I was a young fellow of 16, of no sort of consequence whatever, and my name was, but is not now, Pardon Sashwood, though mother and everybody else called me Pardy. My mother was a dressmaker in the town and did a big business. She never said anything about my father, and I did not know anything about him, and I concluded that he had been hanged, or otherwise nipped in the bud, and I did not press my inquiries in regard to him. I was a regular resident in Block Hall, as General Fawncliffe called his elegant mansion, and my first duty is to explain how I happened to be a dweller beneath its princely roof. I was very fond of fishing, and my mother was very fond of eating fish, for I caught very nice ones in the river. One day I sat upon a rock that projected out into the stream just below the general's mansion. Above me was a sandy beach, and while I sat there the general drove down upon it in his buggy, with a high spirited horse. I wondered what he was doing there with such a turnout.

The horse was full of spirit, and the choleric driver seemed to be well supplied with spirits, though of the artificial sort. The animal pranced and capered on the sand, and did not appear to have learned that his master was as impatient as he was eccentric. The horse had a way of his own, and so had the general, and as the two ways did not run in the same direction it created an unpleasantness between them. At last the driver used his whip without the exercise of much discretion, and the brute manifested himself in a very decided manner. Then I decided that he was trying to drive the horse into the water, where he was unwilling to go. But the general got the best of it in the end and drove the obstinate creature straight into the river, as though he intended to cross to the other side. In a few moments the animal had to swim, but he struck out bravely, the general applying the lash all the time; in fact, he seemed to be whipping him for his own satisfaction, now that the brute had yielded the point.

In another moment the buggy, which appeared to be floating, suddenly toppled over and spilled the occupant into the drink. He lost his hold upon it, and then I saw that he could not swim.

The horse took a circle around the spot and swam leisurely to the shore, dragging the buggy after him. Just below the rock on which I was seated was a bateau, and I lost no time in rushing to it. I had some skill in the use of the paddle, and I soon reached the general, who was floundering about in the water like a grounded whale. He was a large man, and I saw that it would be impossible to get him into the boat. I asked him to take hold of the stern to support himself while I paddled to the beach. He used expletives and insisted upon getting into the boat. I told him I would leave him to his fate if he did not do as I directed. The threat carried him, and he held on to the boat till his feet touched the bottom.

"I will kill that horse!" he exclaimed when he reached the beach and had recovered his breath. "He is the ugliest brute I ever drove."

"He is not so much of a brute as you are, general," I replied. "You acted like a heathen when you whipped him, and I had half a mind to let you drown."

He looked at me in astonishment. Perhaps he thought I had earned the right to speak my mind, but whether I had or not I expressed myself as plainly as though I had been the general and he had been Pardy Sashwood. Doubtless it was a new thing for any one to "speak up" to him.

"Boy, I want you to come and live with me," he said, and I was amazed then.

"I won't do it," I replied. "I would not live under the same roof with such a porcupine as you are for all your money."

He actually teased me, and he expressed his obligations to me very handsomely, but I stuck to my text. I helped him right his buggy, now that the horse had cooled off, and he insisted on driving me home, which I permitted him to do. My mother saw me when I got out of the buggy. The general told me to think of his offer and come to his house if I decided to accept it. My mother, after she had heard all about the affair in the river, insisted that I should accept the offer. I argued against it for a long time, but I finally yielded to her wishes. The next day I belonged to the general's household, and Mrs. Cashley gave me a hearty welcome.

General Fawncliffe treated me with a degree of consideration accorded to no other person. I helped him about his accounts and papers, though I was permitted to attend the academy. I really came to like him after awhile, and I know that I improved his manners and morals to some extent. His narrow escape from drowning had strongly impressed him, I discovered. He was a victim to that malady of sedentary and lazy people, insomnia. He had been in the habit of drinking more whisky than was good for him as a remedy. He told me he could not sleep until he had drunk at least six glasses. I reasoned with him, talking flatly and plainly, as I always did. I asked him to stop it and walk one or two hours in the Block woods after 9 in the evening. He tried it with good results, and after that called me doctor.

After he had practiced this walking for a couple of weeks, he told me he had seen a ghost in the woods three successive nights. I laughed at him and asked him if he had been drinking whisky again, but he assured me he had not. The next night I watched myself in the grove. Sure enough, I saw a figure in white, though I did not believe it was a spirit from the other world. I saw that the figure tried to approach the general, but from fear, or some other motive, he kept his distance from it.

I had a revolver, and with this in my hand, though it was not loaded, I went with the general to the woods one bright moonlight night. The ghost came as usual, and the general was inclined to retreat. So was the figure when I showed myself. But I pursued it. I held up my revolver and threatened to fire if the ghost did not halt.

"No, Pardy! Don't fire! I am your mother," screamed the ghost, not knowing that the weapon was not loaded.

She halted, and I went up to her, the general following me when assured that the figure was not a supernatural one. She was dressed in white, as she was usually in summer, and I wondered if she was troubled with insomnia.

"Pardy, General Fawncliffe is your father and my husband!" exclaimed my mother when the general had come up with us.

"Emily!" he exclaimed, "I wondered where Pardy got all his impudence, for I thought he could have inherited it only from me."

We had a long talk in the moonlight. I knew that my mother had come from California, but her former home was one of the things of which she seldom spoke. The general acknowledged her as his wife before me. They disagreed and had separated. For the sake of her son she had followed him, hoping that years had softened his temper. She did not care to call upon him at his house, but when I became on such excellent terms with him she had decided to meet him in the woods, where I had told her that he walked every night. He had fled from her, but she persevered till I brought matters to a head. My mother is now the mistress of Block Hall, and I still have to do a great deal of plain speaking.—Oliver Optic in Philadelphia Press.

Packing a Trunk Well.

Do you know how to pack a trunk well? asks Ruth Ashmore in The Ladies' Home Journal. And if you don't how many people do you know who do? And wouldn't you gladly give $1 for a large and 50 cents for a small trunk that is properly packed? The packer comes with dozens of sheets of tissue paper and several pieces of tape. You can sit where you belongings are, and as skirts and bodices are taken down say which you want. Then the bodices have their sleeves stuffed with paper to keep them in shape, the trimmings carefully covered with it; the skirts are properly folded; the bonnets and hats have tapes pinned to them, and these same tapes are tacked to the sides of the hatbox, so that no matter how much the trunk may be shaken not a feather nor a rose moves out of its place. Then when everything is done there is laid on the top of the last tray a list of the things that are in the trunk, so that you don't lose you temper searching for the pink bodice which isn't there, or the tan colored shoes which you expressly requested should be left at home.

First Person Cremated In America.

The first white person lawfully cremated within the present limits of the United States, according to wishes and desires expressed by himself, was Colonel Henry Laurens, one of the Revolutionary patriots. He was born in Charleston, S. C., in the year 1724, and died on his plantation near that place on Dec. 8, 1792. His will, which he had requested them to open and read the next day after his death, was supplemented with the following: "I solemnly enjoin it upon my son, as an indispensable duty, that, as soon as he conveniently can after my decease, he cause my body to be wrapped in 12 yards of towcloth and burned until it be entirely consumed." The request was carried out to the letter and was the beginning of cremation in America.—St. Louis Republic.

WINTER DAIRYING.

A Paper Read by George R. Holloway before a Recent Meeting of the Farmers' Union.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

The subject for discussion to-night is one that should interest us all—the subject of dairying—and I think it will interest the ladies the most, as I intend to show you by figures that you can get as much money out of the milk by patronizing some good creamery as you can by manufacturing your butter at home, and thereby saving all your labor.

The position in which the farmer has been placed for the past few years, owing to the low prices which we have received for our labor and the expense of procuring our help, it leaves us but a small margin to pay our honest debts with. Most of the farmers have depended on their wheat crop to pay their debts with, but owing to the low price of wheat that day is passed as the expense of producing a bushel is greater than it will bring in market.

And our good Republican friends tell us if it was not for the Wilson Bill sheep would be a gold mine. But as that is going to become a law that knocks sheep in the head. Then we will naturally ask the question, what are we to do to increase our receipts and reduce our expenses? My answer is, keep cows and send your milk down to the Clover Leaf Creamery.

The question for discussion is, does winter dairying pay? I will take a larger scope and say does dairying pay? My answer is yes, if given the same attention as that of other branches of farming. There probably is not another branch of farming that requires as close or more attention than dairying, and not another branch that will pay a person as well for time and labor as it.

The cow in nothing more than a machine for the manufacturing of milk. The better it is cared for the better will be the returns.

We probably have noticed when traveling about the country wherever we strike a community engaged in dairying that they are always prosperous, have fine buildings, and their farms are much more productive than ours. Why? Because they sell nothing off the farm but the manufactured article in the shape of butter, cheese, hogs and cattle.

Hear what the Elgin Dairy Report says about creameries: "The educational advantages offered by the establishment of a creamery in a community should not be underestimated. The majority of farmers apply a less degree of methodical exactness to the management of the dairy when it is merely an adjunct to the general work of the farm than to almost any other branch of their business. All the process, from the care and feeding of the cow to the handling of the milk and manufacture of butter, are conducted on a hit-and-miss plan which usually misses a gilt edged product. The creamery shows them at once the need of a better system of management and provokes a spirit of inquiry as to the ways and means. When the product is sold each day farmers become more solicitious about keeping their cows up to a high and uniform production as the pocket feels it at once when they fall back. The study of the question of feed is introductory to the study of the whole science of dairying and the farmers of a creamery district invariably improve in all of their methods."

I presume there are some here who have given the subject of dairying more attention than I, as I have been engaged in the business only a year, but from that year's experience can say that it has paid me and my neighbors more for the amount of money invested than any other branch of farming in which we have engaged in several years. We have disbursed during the past year, $6,000 amongst a few farmers for their milk, and I think I will be safe in saying that the wheat raised by the same farmers all bunched together would not bring that amount of money.

A person going into the business of dairying has got to change his mode of farming to correspond with the business. Then it makes no difference whether it rains or shines he has so much money coming every day. I will give some figures what we have done down with us the past year manufacturing butter. We started our factory the 22d day of December, 1892, and have been running ever since. I will give you an avetage of some of the patrons' cows for the year: Mr. John Schwab has had an average of twelve cows during the past year. I have paid him $318.15, or an average per cow of $53.03. Mr. Macham $640.65, or an average per cow of $53.31. Mr. McIntyre $290.79, an average of $48.46. Could give others, but that is a fair average per cow of what the milk has brought at the factory. Now the skim milk has got to be estimated. I claim that the milk and calf are worth $15 per cow, and I think that a low estimate, but admitting that is what it is worth, we have the average of Mr. Schwab's cows at $66.56, Mr. Macham's at $68.31; Mr. McIntyre's at $63.46.

Now I hear some one say that it costs that much to feed a cow. Have any of you got any figures to prove that it does? I have to prove that it does not. One of my neighbors has weighed his feed for a month for two cows. Those cows' milk came to the factory by itself that month, so there could not be any mistake about it. It cost him $1 per week for each cow at the market price of hay and grain, the feed for the two cows for the month costing him $8. I paid him for the milk $12.22. Then add the skim milk which was worth $2.50 more, making a gain or profit of $6.72. Some may say that the labor of taking care of them and taking the milk to the factory has got to be reckoned in. I say no. The manure is good pay for labor performed. Is there any other branch of business that gives as good returns for money invested as a good cow? I think not.

The time is not far distant when dairymen will be more amply rewarded for their labor, as the dairymen of the country are combining their forces to bring before congress and the different legislasive bodies of the states for the enactment of laws compelling the manufacturers of oleomargerine to color their products so it will be distinguished from butter. That will force them to sell it for what it is. The minute we can get such legislation the price of good butter will then advance, and by combining our efforts to make a good article, we will soon be able to get a better return for our labor.

There would be more money in the pockets of farmers if there was not a pound of dairy butter made. It is the poor article that spoils a market.

And there is one other advantage in taking your milk to some factory, your money comes every month. When we make our own butter, we take it to town and procure a certain price for it providing we will take part or all of it in trade, thereby increasing the groceryman's profit and lessening our own.

Winter dairying can be made to pay better than summer if we prepare ourselves for it during the summer months. We get a better price for our butter, we have more time to attend to our cows, and with proper feed and care the returns will be more remunerative than in summer. By having our cows in milk in the fore part of the winter and well cared for through the winter, when they go on grass they will give a good flow of milk through the summer. Then we can raise a better calf in the winter than in the summer.

Now, Mr. President, we that have been engaged in diarying the past year claim that it pays better than any other branch of farming at the present prices of produce.

THE NEW ARMORY.

A Few Facts About the New Home of Co. C. and the Grand Dedication Ball.

The members of Co. C. have felt for months that their quarters were not large or commodious enough for their use. A project to buy the Hayden warehouse on the corner of Logan and Evans streets met with favor, and finally developed into action. The boys took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves and went to work and the result is one of the finest armory buildings in the state, outside of Detroit.

The building is divided into five compartments. A drill hall 28 by 78 feet in size; a parlor and reception room 24 by 36 feet; a private officers' room 12 by 14 feet—these are all on the ground floor. In the basement are an equipment and business room 24 by 38 feet and a kitchen 20 by 24 feet. The latter is not yet completed but work is already in progress upon it. The basement rooms are so arranged with wide doors in the center of the cross partitions, that a target range is provided for the entire length of the building, or 102 feet. The drill hall is an elegant room for that purpose, with a hard ash floor, plastered walls and sheet iron "ribbed ceiling." Two rows of incandescent lamps the entire length of the room, suspended from the ceiling, afford abundant light. The ceiling of the parlor will be finished with fancy moulding, rosettes and panels. A memorial grate and range has been placed in the parlor by the officers and ex-officers of Co. C. in memory of J. D. Sholes, the first captain of the company. The Tecumseh Table Co. donated a handsome oak table, J. D. Kinney an oak reclining office chair and A. J. Palmer an ash rocker, to assist in furnishing the rooms. The drill hall is heated by a large Floral Queen furnace, built at Monroe, which was put in by Will Spalding. He also furnished and put on the ribbed ceiling, which contains one and one-half tons of iron altogether. The parlor and private room are warmed by soft coal stoves and the equipment room below by a hard coal stove, which will prevent any dampness. The whole interior is finished in putty coat plaster and nicely painted. Thirty-eight hundred dollars have already been expended and it will require about $200 more to finish the kitchen and pick up odds and ends.

THE DEDICATION BALL.

It would hardly seem appropriate to begin every day life in such an elegant new domicile as this without some special house warming in the form of a dedication. The building was sufficiently near completion, so that last Monday night was the time fixed for this event. The boys had to hustle themselves last week to make all the necessary arrangements, but they were equal to the task. The parlor and private room were nicely furnished with upholstered furniture, screens and rugs, loaned for the occasion. The equipment room below was used for refreshments, and the drill hall was used for dancing.

By nine o'clock a fine company had assembled. Gen. Wood, Maj. Howell and about twenty members of Co. B. were present from Adrian, and three members of Co. D., of Jackson. These were invited guests and were provided with dance tickets. Fifty-six dance tickets were sold to home parties. The attendance of ladies must have fully equalled the total attendance of gentlemen, indicating a company of fully two hundred, and there was room enough for all with plenty to spare. There were twenty-four dances on the program, all of which were gone through with. The Columbian orchestra furnished the music, and they demonstrated the fact that it isn't necessary to go out of town to have first class dance music. The refreshments were provided by the ladies of St. Peter's church, at fifty cents per couple, and an elegant lunch was furnished for that moderate figure. These fifteen married ladies acted as patronesses of the ball, all of whom lent their presence and active assistance to render the event a success: Mesdames L. I. Bidwell, C. M. Woodward, J. D. Shull, M. E. Corey, B. P. Anderson, Alice Hardenburg, L. P. Tribou, J. F. Hicks, A. C. Paxson, M. A. Zimmerman, C. J. Brewer, S. P. Hosmer, Geo. Wilson. The young ladies of Tecumseh who indulge in dancing were present with scarcely an exception. Although not intended to be a full dress party, there were many elegant costumes worn by the ladies, while the blue coats and brass buttons of the soldier boys imparted an elegance to the scene.

Altogether it was a brilliant company and we doubt whether Tecumseh ever witnessed a more enjoyable dancing party. The new armory received its christening in fine style, and we hope that Co. C. may enjoy their new quarters as they deserve.

The Witness Answered Back.

Seth Bean, Adrian's keen and brisk disciple of Blackstone, was in Hudson a few hours Tuesday on his way to Marshall. Seth is a persistent inquisitor when he has a witness on the stand, but sometimes the witness gets back at him with a tart retort. He had a bright old Irish lady on the stand once, where the value of a piece of land, which the witness owned, was involved. She had testified that she had raised beans on the land.

"Do you mean to say," inquired Mr. Bean sharply, "that you can raise beans on that sand patch of yours?"

"Yes, 'n whiter Beans 'n you!" retorted the old lady, while the court and jury roared.—Hudson Gazette.

OBITUARY.

William F. Kennedy, the subject of this humble tribute, was born in Easton, Pennsylvania, in the year 1817, and his boyhood and youth were passed in that vicinity. He was married to Miss Mary Lanning Dec. 28th., 1842. Thirty-seven years ago the family took up their residence in Tecumseh and this village has since been his home. He had always enjoyed good health until recently and since the death of his wife which occurred a few months ago. That affliction seemed to weigh heavily upon him and he never was the same cheerful, lively man that he was before. On the morning of his death he suffered a stroke of apoplexy and only survived a few hours, being 76 years old at his death. He attended the M. E. church on the night before the final summons came, giving in his testimony on the Lord's side and the next morning he was suddenly called home to join the loved ones who had gone before. He was an upright man, a kind husband, an affectionate father a consistent christian, having been a member of the M. E. church for many years.

The funeral services were held at the family residence on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 25th., when a large concourse of his old friends and neighbors assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to the departed. Words of comfort to the mourners were spoken by Rev. J. P. Varner and Rev. Frank Fistler and the M. E. choir furnished appropriate singing. The remains were deposited in our evergreen cemetery to sleep the sleep that knows no waking.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to thank all who were so kind to us in our late bereavement, and especially for the beautiful music so tenderly rendered.

W. F. KENNEDY'S CHILDREN.

GONE TO REST.

Lola S. Walker was born at Chenango Forks, N. Y., March 14th., 1854. Her early childhood was passed in that place. When about ten years of age her parents moved to this village, and after a brief residence here to a farm in Brooklyn, Jackson Co. She attended the High School in Tecumseh for two years, and after some experience in country schools she taught several terms in the west branch school of this village, and was regarded as a very superior teacher in the primary branches. On the 30th. day of March, 1882, she married Dr. P. Hyndman, and settled in Tompkins, Jackson Co., Mich., where she continued to reside until the date of her death on Friday, Dec. 22d, 1893.

The deceased was a woman of fine ability and more than average attainments. She possessed a bright, sunshiny disposition, that always made the best of life, that ever saw the silver lining to the cloud, and that imparted a halo of cheerfulness and joy to the family circle in which she moved. Her married life proved to be a peculiarly happy one, and the wounds inflicted by her untimely death can only be healed beyond the grave. Those who knew her best will sympathize most deeply with the afflicted friends. They will weep and wonder why such a kind, loving and dutiful wife should have been snatched from her earthly home so soon. Thy will, not mine, be done.

A. J. Palmer is working into quite a busines in repairing old furniture. He has lots of shop room and machinery for that kind of work, and also makes special articles of furniture to order. People in need of that kind of work should call and see him.

Certainly no one is better qualified to discuss the Wilson Bill than Senator Roger Q. Mills of Texas, who was the author of the last Democratic tariff measure in 1888. Senator Mills' views on the new bill are set forth in an article which he has written for the February number of the North American Review.

Suit has been commenced by the General Electric Co., of Chicago, by their attorney, W. C. Burridge, against S. B. Nesmith, the electric railway progenitor, for $2,980. This amount, it is alleged, represents a bill incurred by Nesmith for electrical supplies which he bought to equip one of the roads he engineered.

The late Miss Woolson is said to have left no unpublished manuscripts with the exception of one or two in the possession of Harper's Magazine. Her short stories were in great demand and rarely remained long in the publisher's hands before being printed. "A Transplanted Boy," in the February Harper's was writen two years ago, and is one of a series of sketches of Italian life, of which enough were finished to make a small volume.

The Mendelssohn Quintette Club of Boston can not be classed with the orchestral organizations, but its claims as an educator of the public taste should not be disregarded on that account. For forty-four years it has kept its place upon the concert stage, and largely by the indomitable energy and enthusiasm of one man, Mr. Thomas Ryan, the clarinet and viola player of the organization. Players have come and gone, many of them great artists, but Mr. Ryan has remained at his post throughout the entire period, the one fixed, reliable fact in that little world of change; and so long as he lives it is likely the club will be known to concert-goers. It gave its first concert in Boston in 1849. During the first twenty years of its existence it played exclusively in New England, but since then it has appeared all over the United States as well as in Canada, the Sandwich Islands, and Australia. Its standard has always been a high one, and in its quiet way it has done good service in the cause of popular musical education.—Scribner's Magazine.

Mrs. Irv. Finch, of Adrian, was in town Monday, between two trains, en route to Sand Lake to spend a few days with her father, John W. Monaghan.

John S. Temple left home Tuesday morning for a week's trip to Detroit and Saginaw. He will attend the lumbermen's convention in Detroit and then go on to Saginaw.

The Mendelsson Quintette Club of Boston gave much satisfaction by their interpretation of Beethoven's Quintette, opp. 29. It was also heard in Brahm's Quintette, op. 86, which was played for the first time in this country.—New York Herald.

Entered into rest, at the home of her mother in Albion, Mich., on Tuesday evening, Jan. 30th, Sadie E. Merritt, second daughter of Mrs. Mary R. Merritt and grand-daughter of the late T.T. Romyne of this place, aged 26 years. For many weary months she has been a patient sufferer from consumption, but her faith in Christ as her personal Savior never wavered, and she said to a friend who called upon her that she could not remember when she was not a believer. We shall sadly miss her, but we sorrow not without hope, knowing that she sleeps in Jesus.

THE JURY AT WORK.

Investigating the Frauds in the State Canvass.

The Proceedings Are Guarded Closely—Gov. Rich Requests the Resignation of the Members of the State Board of Canvassers.

THE INQUIRY BEGINS.

LANSING, Feb. 4.—For the first time in twenty-seven years the grand jury is in session in this county. The jurors convened at Mason Thursday to investigate the charges of fraud in connection with the state canvass of the constitutional amendments increasing the salaries of state officials, which has created such a profound sensation in Michigan. The unusual proceeding as well as the gravity of the offense alleged attracted a large crowd of spectators. Twenty-three jurors were drawn, but for sufficient reasons two were excused, leaving twenty-one in the panel. They are generally intelligent farmers, business men and tradesmen, and, probably, no better jury for the purpose could have been drawn under existing methods of procedure. Silas M. Phillips was chosen foreman.

Judge Persons' charge to the jury is commended on all sides for its comprehensiveness and fairness. The judge said the investigation rose above all party considerations, because political parties could long exist if fraud and violation of the election laws were permitted. Gov. Rich, who has taken an active part in the investigation, having himself made the disclosure that the canvass had been falsified, was the first witness sworn. It is known that he laid before the jury all the facts in his possession, together with important papers, which may tend to criminate persons in high authority. Deputy Secretary of State Lindholm was also sworn. He produced the records of the secretary of state and they were offered in evidence. It is believed that several indictments will be found.

The principal witness to testify in the grand jury investigation Friday was Frank A. Potter, who had complete charge of preparing the canvass of 1893 and who called off the erroneous figures to Clerk Warren for tabulation. Potter says that he told the jury nothing new for the reason that he could not, having already told everything he knew on the subject. He is still firm in his belief that some one unknown to him, who had access to the returns when he was not working on the canvass, took out the original returns from the counties erroneously tabulated in the canvass and replaced them with forged sheets, so made out as to make the aggregate vote show a majority for the salaries amendment.

The members of the state board of canvassers, consisting of State Treasurer Hambitzer, Secretary of State Joachim and Land Commissioner Berry, have been given by Gov. Rich the alternative of either handing in their resignations or answering to the charge of gross neglect of duty in signing the official canvass of 1893 without holding a meeting and proving the figures prepared by the secretary's clerks. Under the constitution it is the governor's duty to remove officials for neglect of duty, but he must first give them a hearing or specify charges.

The three officials under fire had a conference Saturday with Gov. Rich, and as a result the governor has given the above stated officials until Tuesday to decide whether or not they will hand in their resignations.

A great deal of guessing is being done as to whom the governor has decided upon for the several offices, he having declared that the vacancies will be filled as soon as they are made. Several persons have been mentioned for each of the offices, but persistent effort has failed to induce the governor to give any information as to who his appointees will be.

In the opinion of those who are best qualified to judge, Rev. Washington Gardner, of Albion college, will be the new secretary of state, although Dennis E. Alward, of Clare, clerk of the state senate, is being strongly backed for this place.

For state treasurer James M. Wilkinson, a prominent Marquette banker, Joseph B. Moore, cashier of the Peninsular savings bank, of Detroit, and Daniel McCoy, of Grand Rapids, are mentioned.

Several names are mentioned in connection with the office of land commissioner. Among them are William A. French, of Presque Isle county, Sidney T. Morris, of Muskegon, Milo D. Campbell, of Coldwater, and ex-State Treasurer B. D. Pritchard, of Allegan.

MUCH WORK AHEAD.

Furniture Factories in Grand Rapids Have Plenty to Do.

GRAND RAPIDS, Feb. 3.—All of the furniture factories in this city are now running on either full or part time, and they have orders enough to keep them busy until July, when the next semi-annual furniture sale opens. The January sale which just closed was very successful. There were 135 buyers present from all parts of the country. This was a falling off of forty as compared with last July. Prices ruled fairly strong, however, and all orders were placed on a cash basis.

KALAMAZOO, Feb. 3.—Nathaniel A. Balch, for many years one of the leading lawyers of Michigan, died here Thursday, aged 86 years. He was always a strong democrat, and in 1863 ran for congress in this district, following a successful canvass for the state senate in 1857.

IRONWOOD, Feb. 5.—There is no longer any suffering or starvation in the Gogebic range, thanks to the appeal of Gov. There is a sufficient supply of goods on hand to meet the wants of the poor until the middle of March. Up to date donations of food and clothing have been received to the value of nearly $100,000. When an appeal was first made for help there were not over 500 working at the mines of this city. Now there are 700 employed at the Norrie, East Norrie and Pabst and 100 at the New Port. LIGHT ON A MURDER.

The Killing of Butcher Schilling, at Kalamazoo, Revived.

A Sensation Created by the Confession of a Fellow Implicating a Woman and an Unknown Man in the Crime.

MAY SOLVE A MYSTERY.

KALAMAZOO, Feb. 3.—On Tuesday afternoon, March 21, 1893, at 1 o'clock Louis Schilling, aged 60, one of Kalamazoo's best-known citizens, was found dead in his office on Portage street. His skull was crushed in and his throat cut from ear to ear. The dead man's pocketbook was gone, and, as he was known to carry a great deal of money, robbery was the evident motive of the crime.

Sheriff Vosburg has arrested William Alguire, Horace Mansfield and Mrs. Anna Wood Alguire. Alguire has turned state's evidence and charges Mansfield as principal in the murder and the woman as accessory before the fact. Alguire says he heard Anna Wood and a young man planning the murder in her room. On the day of the murder Mansfield, who is a colored man, came to Mrs. Wood's room with a bloody knife under his coat. The woman washed the knife and then threw it into a basket of dirty clothes. Alguire was married to Anna Wood some time last May. Mansfield refuses to talk beyond denying all knowledge of the crime. Mrs. Wood likewise disclaims any connection with the murder.

The officers are still working on every clew and will secure the letter which Alguire says he recently received from Mansfield, and also that from the man who planned the robbery to Miss Wood. The latter, it is expected, will show who the man is. The affair is the talk of the city and is causing as much of a stir as did the murder.

THE STATE FAIR MUDDLE.

Trouble Arises Over the Decision to Hold It in Detroit.

LANSING, Feb. 2.—Several years ago the State Agricultural society quit traveling from one city to another and took up its permanent location in Lansing, the Central Michigan Fair society giving the state society its handsome grounds in this city on condition that the state fair society should hold annual exhibitions upon them. Last year the Central Michigan society waived the forfeiture clause in this contract on account of the world's fair and no state fair was held. This year the state society found itself $25,000 in debt, with no assets, and concluded to hold a fair in Detroit in order to replenish the depleted treasury. An arrangement was therefore made with the business committee of the Central Michigan society whereby the forfeiture clause was waived, but at the annual meeting of the Central Michigan society Thursday the members refused to ratify the action of the business committee, and if the state society carries out its present plans and fails to hold a fair in Lansing it will probably forfeit its claims to the grounds in this city, which are valued at $80,000.

DETROIT'S BIG VICTORY.

Millions Involved in a Decision Against a Street Railway Company.

DETROIT, Feb. 2.—In the case of the [illegible] Railway company to enjoin the use of the streets of the city by the company on the ground that the thirty-year grant made in 1879 was invalid, Judge Taft, of the United States circuit court, filed a decision here for the city. He says the companies are out of the possession of the streets. The amount of property affected by the litigation is $4,500,000, of which $1,500,000 is in stock interests and the balance is first and second mortgage bonds. The company is given three months to remove its tracks from the streets or make new arrangements with the city, but a supersedeas is also granted staying the effect of the injunction until the case can be reviewed by the circuit court of appeals.

Those Pimples

Are tell-tale symptoms that your blood is not right—full of impurities, causing a sluggish and unsightly complexion. A few bottles of S. S. S. will remove all foreign and impure matter, cleanse the blood thoroughly, and give a clear and rosy complexion. It is most effectual, and entirely harmless.

Chas. Heaton, 73 Laurel Street, Phila., says: "I have had for years a humor in my blood which made me dread to shave, as small boils or pimples would be cut, thus causing shaving to be a great annoyance. After taking three bottles of S. S. S. my face is all clear and smooth as it should be—appetite splendid, sleep well and feel like running a foot race all for the use of S. S. S.

CHILLS AND FEVER.

A Case of Long Standing Finds a Cure.

Several years ago a man forty-[illegible] years of age, from a malarious district came a long distance to consult me for a chronic malarious affection for which he had doctored without intermission for over ten years. The treatment which had been mainly relied on by various doctors he had consulted was quinine and other derivative of chinona bark. Of these preparations he had taken many pounds, and during several intervals he had taken a great many chill cures, but nothing seemed to have any permanent effect.

His complexion was of that dirty yellow so characteristic of ague patients, and his sunken, lusterless eyes, surrounded by dark circles, indicated that completely his health had been undermined. The tongue was heavily coated red with a thick brown coating, breath very offensive, and he complained of constant, dull headache. A poor appetite, indigestion, biliousness and constipation completed a tale of woe commonly heard in a malarious locality. The chills came on at irregular intervals. Sometimes he would not have one a month; then again every day for a while.

For this man I prescribed Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin as directed on the bottles, the Man-a-lin to be used until the bowels became regular and digestion good. A few weeks after I received a very enthusiastic letter from him, in which he declared himself nearly well and better than he had been in years, and had taken no quinine since beginning my treatment. I instructed him to gradually leave off the Man-a-lin which he did, but continued the Peruna a few months longer, and made a complete recovery, continuing to enjoy the best of health.

His case is one of which there are thousands in every malarious district who have been many years and still are searching for something to bring relief to their miserable condition. I am positive that Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin will cure every one of these, for I have watched its effect a good many years and I do not know a single failure.

THE DANGER OF NEGLECT.
IN CASES OF PILES AND OTHER RECTAL DISEASES.

There is no class of diseases so difficult to permanently cure when once firmly established as affections of the rectum and lower bowels. The tendency to chronic disease is very marked and although the first symptoms are unmistakable, yet they are in most cases neglected until deep seated disease is the result. In nearly every case of rectal disease, fistula, ulcers in rectum, fissure and similar troubles the first symptoms are heat itching about the affected part finally developing into an ordinary case of Piles.

It may be itching bleeding or protruding Piles it matters not, the end will be the same if neglected, and right here is the point to take time by the forelock and cure the piles, and effectually ward off any further danger. The surest and safest way to remove any form of Piles is to use the Pyramid Pile Cure, a remedy which has been fairly tested by thousands of sufferers and physicians, and it cures every form of Piles rapidly and without pain or inconvenience.

It is not to be confounded with the ordinary ointments, suppositories, pills and salves, so extensively sold and advertised as sure cures for Piles.

The Pyramid Pile Cure differs from all these in that it contains no poison, no opiates, and more over gives results on the first application.

Your druggist will tell you that no pile cure gives such universal satisfaction. A Treatise on Piles, invaluable to every sufferer, is enclosed in each package.

Miss Kate L. Clark and nephew, Willie LeBaron, who have been visiting friends here, left Thursday for their home in Dwight, Kansas.

The ladies of Golden Rod Chapter, Eastern Star, expect in the near future to entertain the members of Manchester and Tecumseh Chapters.

H. D. Niblack has concluded to become a Clinton resident again. He will move back here from Ypsilanti and has gone to work for S. W. Demuth.

Two of our business men set out for the lakes Tuesday morning with an axe, fish-poles, etc. The readers of the HERALD can prepare for a big fish story next week.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Frank Silvers, of Albion, Mich., to a Mr. Leonard. Miss Silvers is a daughter of Benj. Silvers, so long a resident of Clinton.

Regular meeting of Golden Rod Chapter No. 85, O. E. S., next Wednesday evening, Feb. 14th. After the business is transacted, a musical and literary program will be carried out.

The revival meetings which began last Sunday, conducted by Smart and McLachlan, are attended with much interest and will evidently result in much good. They will be continued until the 14th inst.

Mr. and Mrs. George Freese entertained their friends at their new home on Chicago street Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Freese are delightful hosts, and the guests in attendance all pronounced it one of the most enjoyable pedro parties of the present season.

Two cradlers begin cradling wheat in the center of a circular field, in the center of which there is a clear circular space twenty feet in diameter. They begin directly opposite each other cutting round and round in a circle until the entire field is finished. Which one, if either, cuts the most grain?

The entertainment given Saturday evening by the St. Ambrose Society was a great treat, and from a musical standpoint, the finest ever given here, not excepting the foreign professional troupes that have been secured by the lecture course committees. Every selection was rendered in an artistic manner, and Mrs. Burroughs added new laurels in her rendition of the Chariot Race. The Society cleared about $19. After the entertainment the members of the Society repaired to the residence of Mrs. John T. Clark, where a banquet was spread. A pleasant, social time followed. Impromptu speeches were indulged in, in which they complimented each other and made their president a gift of a beautiful musical instrument, and presented their general manager, who is our tax collector, with an elegant "tax-puller."

LA GRIPPE BOOK FREE.

Sent Post-Paid During February—Be Quick and Get One.

Nearly everybody is having la grippe now days, but what is still more unfortunate, a large per cent of those who are afflicted with this epidemic instead of getting well, as they ought to, will have chronic catarrh as the result. This is almost invariably the case unless Pe-ru-na is taken as soon as possible after la grippe begins. Every one who has observed the effect of Pe-ru-na during the last three epidemics of la grippe positively knows that this remedy will cure it permanently. The fact is, however, that a great multitude of people will not take Pe-ru-na, and the foundation for chronic catarrh will be laid. Here, again, Pe-ru-na is the only reliable remedy. Even in cases that the chronic catarrh has affected the lungs and the early stages of catarrhal consumption have been developed Pe-ru-na can be relied upon as a prompt and lasting cure. La grippe and catarrh are at present the two greatest enemies of life in the land. Pe-ru-na is a cure for either.

IMPECUNIOUS LOVERS

THEY BUY ENGAGEMENT AND WEDDING RINGS ON CREDIT.

Contract to Pay on the Installment Plan, and the Fair Sweethearts Never Know About It—An Interesting Talk With a Confidential Clerk.

An engagement ring contracted for on the installment plan is now as common a business transaction as the fitting up of a boarding house on the same easy payment plan. There are several New York jewelry firms which do a prosperous business among prospective bridegrooms on the credit system.

One of these is located on a prominent down town stret. Engagement rings and wedding rings are here sold on credit, the weekly payment being 50 cents. At this store the other day a bashful young man asked the chief clerk to show him some rings suitable to present to a young lady.

"Engagement ring, eh?" said the clerk in a confidential undertone. "Here you are, sir, the very latest. Forty-five dollars—exquisite stone—payment in 10 months. This shell ring is our own design. Any girl would have fits over it. See that dainty spiral thread of gold about the setting? That emphasizes the gem and makes it appear worth more than it is. You can't better yourself, sir. Pay cash and you'll get a discount of $5.

The young man seemed much impressed. He gave the measurement of the little finger of his fair charmer and left his name and references.

In his pocket as he went out he carried a stupendous contract printed in red ink, which stipulated that "in case of nonpayment according to the terms of contract, etc., the ring must be forfeited."

"That's a fair sample," said the clerk in answer to a question. "That fellow represents a certain element of middle class society. Most of the hard-working young men buy rings for their sweethearts that way. The girls would never get any engagement ring at all if the money had to be paid outright."

Another shy young man was ushered in, and the clerk motioned him to a private room adjoining the main office. There they were closeted for several minutes, and then the clerk emerged to seal a contract with the new customer. The necessity of the private audience room, it seems, is because financial embarrassment, coupled with native modesty, prevents lovers in the first stage from divulging the terms upon which they wish to pay for a ring. They prefer to state their case unheard by any one except the head clerk, who, in the course of his business, has cultivated a profound sympathy for the entire race of sweethearts.

"Oh, they tell some pathetic stories," said the clerk. "They let me into all their secrets gratuitously. One very devoted young lover told me the other day that he earned $4 a week, but couldn't get married until he had been raised to $5. When advanced to this position of opulence, he thought he could afford to buy a diamond ring on installments of 50 cents a week.

"But it is in the case of lapses that I hear the most pathetic tales. As a rule our customers are straightforward and honest. As long as a young man has work we have no difficulty in getting his money. When he loses his position, he usually lets us know, and then if the fellow is honest we ease up on him just a little."

"But what if the girl and the ring disappear simultaneously?" he was asked.

"Oh, the young man always pays up, and if the girl has thrown him over you can bet he never tells any one about it.

"There are lots of well to do young men who spend $30 or $40 in a night for pleasure and who do business with us because they prefer to regard jewelry as a luxury and pay for it on time.

"Here, for instance, is a ring made to order for a broker down town," and the clerk held up a diamond ring valued at $250, which had been made to fit the finger of some metropolitan belle who may never know the "terms of the contract."

"I don't know of a single instance where a girl has had to forfeit her fing. In case she had a dishonest man or a sneak for a lover the case would be rather embarrassing. But as a rule the blushing bride elect knows nothing about the installments, for our customers come promptly to the office and pay up every Saturday.

"There are some cases where we have to unbend a trifle, as, for instance, where there has been a death in the family. When a sad faced young fellow steps into my private office and tells me confidentially that he has lost his father and must help pay the funeral expenses, or that he has spent all his available capital in celebrating Thanksgiving or Fourth of July the day before, then he can usually count upon the sympathy of the firm.

"Of course we run great risks, but we never sell to anybody without looking up their references."

The investigation blank, which, when filled, establishes the purchaser's integrity of character, should contain the date of contract, name of applicant, house address, business occupation, business address, references, time employed in present position, description of engagement or wedding ring and a host of other details.

The form of contract is suitably verbose, and the red tape involved is sufficient to make a young lover feel the responsibility and importance of having creditors.—New York World.

Considerate.

"Why don't you take me with you sometimes of evenings, dear? I get so tired of staying at home alone."

"Because I can't afford to dress you as well as myself. I don't want to be seen around with a woman dressed as you are."—Indianapolis Journal.

SHE GOT A BARGAIN.

Better Than That, She Knew How to Use It After Getting It.

A lady surrounded the bargain counter of one of the big retail stores on Sixth avenue the other day and captured a fragment of china silk with which she wanted to make a screen. To accomplish this required a degree of strategy and physical exertion sufficient to equip a college eleven for active service on the gridiron. But she got there.

"I spent the whole afternoon," said she to a friend, "and when I got home I figured the whole thing up. I could have bought the same stuff up stairs at the regular counter for 39 cents a yard, and I wanted only 3½ yards. Well, that mean little clerk sold me four yards for 35 cents—it was a remnant, you know—so I found I had been trodden upon for about two hours and squeezed black and blue and had lost just 3 cents by the operation.

"But, law, that's nothing! What do you s'pose? Why, when I examined that silk the next day, I found a hole in every fold.

"Mad? Well, I think I was mad! My husband laughed at me. He says women were born to be fooled, don't you know—that most of us haven't sense enough to spread an umbrella when it rains.

"'What would you do?' I asked him.

"'Do,' says he, 'I'd throw that away and never go back to that store again.'

"'Not much,' says I. 'I'm going to make them take that back if I die for it. Now there! And if you should miss me when night comes, you'll find my remains at the foot of the china silk counter!'

"I went back. After another two hours of shuffling and crowding I got a chance to confront the young man who sold me that silk. I was prepared to make him ashamed of himself, now I tell you. But he merely looked at it and said in a bored sort of way, 'Oh, yes, that is the same piece of silk Mrs. Blank returned last week.'

"Yes, I was stricken dumb. If there had been room enough, I'd have dropped. But that's nothing. Let me tell you. While he was making out my rebate check another lady glanced at the silk I had just laid down.

"'That's real pretty,' said she. 'How many yards?'

"'Four, ma'am,' says he.

"'How much?'

"'Forty cents,' says he, with the most unblushing face. 'It's the last piece of that shade in the house,' says he.

"'I'll take it,' says she, pulling out her purse just as he gave me my ticket for the return of that identical piece. Well, then I knew that young man deliberately cheated me and was going to cheat that lady right before my face. But I got my breath quick enough to tell her. And I did. I said: 'Madam, I've just this minute brought that back. It's damaged. Look at these holes! He knows it's damaged. Here's my ticket for the rebate for its return.'

"Well, if you could have seen the look she gave him! Then she turned on her heel and went out. Yes, I should say I'm about even with that house—one of the finest stores in town too."—New York Herald.

Old John's Translation.

Every one in Boston knows of old John the Orangeman, that picturesque and almost historical personage who presides over the affections of all Harvard men. And every one who knows John knows also that his life's motto is that familiar phrase which expresses briefly and to the point the wish that Yale may be forever relegated to the region of sorrow and perpetual darkness.

One afternoon strangers were walking through the yard at Harvard, and on every hand they saw the college seal bearing this motto, "Christo et Ecclesiæ."

Not being on speaking terms with Cicero, Cæsar and the other Romans, this did nothing but to arouse their curiosity.

Finally they met John.

"I say!" said one of the visitors, "I see these words everywhere. Can you tell me what they mean?"

John looked carefully at the Latin inscription, bit his pipe a little harder and then replied gravely:

"Oi don't jist know, fr'nd, but Oi t'ink it means 'To h—— wid Yale.'"—Boston Budget.

Some Timber Strength Tests.

It would be difficult to convince the average man, especially the Missouri pioneer, that fir is a stronger wood than oak, but such has been proved by actual tests that were made by a fair and impartial committee appointed for the purpose. The timbers used were each 2 by 4 inches and 4 feet long, both ends solidly braced and the weight applied in the middle of the span. Yellow fir stood a strain of 3,062 pounds, common Oregon oak 2,922 pounds. Fine grained yellow fir from near the butt stood a strain of 3,635 pounds, and best Michigan oak snapped with a strain of only 2,428 pounds. These tests were made by the Northern Pacific Railroad company at Tacoma.—St. Louis Republic.

Not Obscure Enough.

"You intend this novel for the Boston public, do you?" said the publisher, leaning back in his chair.

"Yes, sir," said the novelist.

"Well, Mr. Pensling," said the publisher, "the work has its merit. It is pointed, interesting, and the style can be readily read and understood, and I think," he continued as the novelist's face broke into a smile of hope, "I think therefore that you should give up all effort to get Boston people interested in it."—Chicago Record.

Proving the Proposition.

When a man writes to another challenging him to fight a duel because that other has called him a fool, the challenging party betrays lamentable ignorance as to popular understanding in regard to what a fool is.—Buffalo Commercial.

The New York World.

The most valuable paper that comes to this office is the New York World. Fearless and Independent, working at all times for the best interests of the people, and never for the selfish ends of any ring or individual, supporting the right and condemning the wrong wherever found, it becomes a great power for good throughout the land. Its policy is defined by its well-known motto, "Equal Rights to All, Special Favors to None." The reputation of The New York World as an incomparable newspaper is fully established. It reaches for the very best and fullest news of the entire country, and gets it. The celebrated "Tariff Mule" articles are again appearing in their weekly and are creating widespread attention. Its miscellaneous pages are replete with articles of valuable and interesting information for every one. It is a large 12-page, 72-column paper for only $1.00 a year. We have succeeded in making special arrangements by which we can furnish The HERALD and The Weekly World one year both for only $2.00.

Mrs. Bruce Watson, Cedar Springs, Mich., says: "Whenever I am real tired and nervous I take about seven drops of "Adironda" and I always obtain instant relief." Sold by John Orr.

If a man could steal air in Chicago he would be perfectly justified in doing it. But water, with Milwaukee only eighty miles away, never!

Rev. E. H. Inman, Baptist clergyman at Centreville, Mich., says he has at last found an equal to "Adironda," Wheeler's Heart and Nerve Cure. Sold by John Orr.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Another "dance" at the hall Wednesday night. The hard times don't seem to affect the dancing.

Pentecost is booming. A grain elevator is to be built here in the spring, and material is being drawn on the ground for the same.

A genuine "Manitoba blizzard" seems to have broken loose, and is shrieking and howling at this writing, Feb. 12, as if all the furies were let loose.

Pentecost people lose their standby, Dr. Perkins, who goes to Seneca to live, having bought a fine residence there. He has rented his farm, and leaves today for his new home. He will be greatly missed by a large number of patients in this part of the county.

A large force of men are at work clearing up the timber left by the logging force last year on the tract bought by R. H. Nogar. The procession of teams drawing heavy loads of fire wood, and the scores of busy choppers, make a lively scene and furnish a welcome job to many a willing worker.

About a hundred of Dr. Perkins' friends stole a march on him on the evening of Feb. 6, and with well laden lunch baskets gave him a farewell supper as well as a rousing surprise. After supper the company "tripped the light fantastic toe" until the very "wee" small hours in the morning.

Many farmhouses about here have from two to half a dozen boarders, and fresh parties of choppers arrive nearly every day, anxious to get work on the "big job," as they style it. One stirring fellow started out Tuesday morning after Monday's storm, and after urging his big, strong team as far as possible the heavy drifts, was obliged to stop and shovel snow the rest of the forenoon to get through a distance of about fifteen rods. There's lots of snow but poor sleighing.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Regular grange meeting Wednesday night with literary programme.

W. D. Easlick just received a raise of pension from $14 to $17 per month and $78 back pay.

Monday was the worst day of the season, snow from one inch to five feet deep just as the wind left it. A regular Dakota blizzard from Canada.

Mrs. Mary J. Stewart's house caught fire in the upper ceiling from a heated stove pipe Saturday morning, but was discovered before much damage was done.

Jo Hunter's team got frightened on their way to church Thursday night and dumped the family into the ditch, breaking a doubletree, but no other serious damage was done.

Next to the Wolfenbarger and Huckins meeting was the county grange meeting, held in Grange hall, February 1st. State Lecturer Crosby gave an excellent address, and the dinner—well, grangers are noted for good dinners.

The poles are on the ground and supplies on hand for closing the four mile gap in the C. T. line, which with loops, ells, hollow squares and angles, will make a metallic circuit of about 40 miles whereby the remaining 60 miles can be switched in, bringing Macon, Lake Ridge, Britton, Ridgeway, Tecumseh, Holloway, Raisin Valley, Newburg, Clinton, Tipton, Sand Lake and Adrian into one circuit. There are about two instruments per mile of line and from four to six operators per instrument or a total of about 400 operators from the new beginner to the finished railroad agent and press dispatcher, and for general news, social exchange and all around business, discounts any other 100 miles of telegraph on earth.

TIPTON TOPICS.

The Maccabee Tent is taking in new members at every meeting now.

Hub. Love, from Nebraska, has been visiting his father, S. H. Love, the past few weeks. He and his brother Liss go to Montcalm county this week.

Rev. F. Beebe, a theological student from Delaware University, spoke in the churches last Sunday, and will speak in the M. E. church Friday night. Subject: "Three times and out."

BLISSFIELD'S GANG OF THIEVES CAUGHT.

Blissfield has been touched up considerably lately by burglars, and the officers have been all at sea as to the perpetrators. The robberies were so bold and of such frequent occurrence that many of the village merchants did not feel like leaving their stores over night for fear that they would not find them there in the morning.

All this was settled Saturday by the arrest of five of a gang that has been carrying things their own way for the past six months.

On the night of September 3, 1893, the clothing store of Brown & Carpenter was raided and between $300 and $400 worth of clothing taken. This was the principal one of the robberies, the balance being of a trifling nature.

Parties watching knew as soon as discovered that a fellow by the name of Win Ayers was disposing of some clothing to various parties. Prosecuting Attorney Wood, Sheriff Wilson, and Under Sheriff Ferguson went to Blissfield Saturday, taking with them young Carrol as a blind. Ayers was trapped, and being pinched pretty hard, confessed the whole business.

He implicated Ralph Miller of Blissfield, and Joe Barber of Metamora, with him as the ones who stole the clothing. They secreted it in Ayers' house and then sold it, piecemeal, to David Antinaugh, Hess Cole and Henry Meisiner.

By judicious engineering the whole party was captured except Barber, who lives at Metamora, and Under Sheriff Ferguson is after him in hot haste.

Cole is a colored man and a day laborer. Meisener and Miller are also in the same trade. Antinaugh is the owner of the saloon under the Pennsylvania house and claims the goods found in his possession were given him by Ayers for drinks. Ayers is a farmer living a mile and a half southeast of Blissfield.—Evening Telegram.

FLORIDA ON WHEELS.

The people in this city who were so unfortunate as to be unable to see Florida's magnificent display at the World's Fair are congratulating themselves upon the splendid opportunity now afforded to them. "Florida on Wheels," the elegant special car showing the many products of this sunny peninsula, arrived last evening and is now installed on a side track near the Michigan Central depot.

The car was open for the inspection of visitors this morning and during the day many interested people took advantage of the exhibition to take a cheap trip through Florida on Wheels. The visitors were delighted and telling their friends that they cannot appreciate the grandeur without seeing it. The car was built especially for the purpose it is now accomplishing. The interior is neatly and tastily arranged. Through the center of the miniature palace live alligators add to this collection. On the walls are innumerable photographic views of the attractive scenes in Florida. The exhibit is well worth a visit, for in no manner can a more comprehensive knowledge of the character and resources of Florida be obtained other than a visit to the place itself.

The car will leave Jackson Wednesday night to continue the trip through Michigan.—Jackson Evening Courier-Star.

Will exhibit in Tecumseh, Saturday, Feb. 17th, day and evening, L. S. M. S. Ry.

The Tribune Almanac.

Among the annual Almanacs which are put into print at this season of the year, The New York Tribune Almanac must be rated as easily the first. The New York Sun (Dem.) praises it as an exceedingly valuable and accurate book of reference, and, on the other hand, calls its principal rival a book of popular mis-information. Although emanating from the office of the most aggressive Republican newspaper of the United States, The Tribune Almanac is absolutely devoid of partisanship. The Tribune's "arithmetic man" who figures up majorities the night after election, lays aside his political affiliations when he comes to work upon the Almanac. Accuracy, fairness and completeness are the watchwords then, and the result is seen in the wide distribution of The Tribune Almanac all over the United States, and its use by Democrats, Populists and Republicans alike. The number for 1894, which has just come to us, has brought its election returns, statistics and general information up to date, and is the largest and most complete number ever issued. The price is only 25 cents a copy, although now a volume of 360 pages. It was 25 cents a copy, even in the early Forties, when it began its career as a little document of 60 pages.

Many homes would be happier if mother was cured of her terrible headaches and nervous troubles. Write Mrs. G. K. Watts, Brandywine, Va., with stamp, to learn how she suffered agonies for six years and was cured by Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer in six weeks, or ask J. J. Orr, Tecumseh.

Brainard's Musical World.

The February number of this valuable monthly is out, filled with choice new music and interesting reading. Send 15 cents and you will receive a copy by return mail, or for 25 cents three back numbers will be sent, containing about $5.00 worth of new music. The Musical World is published monthly at $1.50 per year and no music lover should be without it. Published by the S. Brainard's Son's Co., Chicago, Ill., who will mail their catalogue of choice new music and music books free to any one wishing it. Music teachers are specially requested to send them their names.

You may rest nights if you will take "Adironda," Wheeler's Heart and Nerve Cure. It contains no Opium or Morphine. Sold by John J. Orr.

OUR WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIOS.

Two numbers of our Art Portfolios have now been issued and those taking them are fully satisfied with their bargain. People should bear this fact in mind. That they are receiving the official photographs of the fair, the views taken by the official artist, and authorized by the officers of the local board, and that each view is accompanied by an elaborate description, thus giving not only illustrations, but a history of the Exposition as well.

This magnificent gallery consists of copyrighted photographs, six by eight inches, of the World's Columbian Exposition, the use of which is authorized by the official management. In one oblong volume. The text matter covers the entire page opposite each photograph and expands into an amount of reading matter that surpasses anything of its kind ever before produced.

Fifty nations and thirty-seven colonies are represented. Added to these are the United States Government, and the various States and Territories of the Union. The principal architectural colossal wonders are the Agricultural building, costing $618,000; Machinery Hall, costing $1,285,000; the Administration building, the gem of the Exposition. Its cost was $435,000. The Manufacturers and Liberal Arts Building, which is the largest on the Exposition Grounds. It cost $1,500,000, and covers 44 acres of floor. The Electricity Building, costing $401,000; the Mines and Mining Building; the Transportation Building; the Horticultural Building; the Woman's Building; the United States Government Building; the Fisheries Building; the Art Building; the Forestry Building; the Dairy Building, etc., etc., all treated with ample fullness.

The making of "Shepp's World's Fair Photographed" has absorbed the entire interest and energies of head, heart and hand of the publishers, and entails such a financial outlay as guarantees the very best results that human eyes can gaze upon. The official heads of the Exposition Management would not give the seal of their approval to anything but the best, and we think the very best none too good for our patrons. The photographs of the buildings in this book stand out clear cut as cameos against the sky. Every nice detail of ornament and design are clearly visible. Almost every mark of the chisel reveals itself clear cut as intaglio.

The third part, which is now ready for distribution, contains the following views:

1. Looking west-southwest from roof of Liberal Arts building.
2. Looking west from same roof.
3. Looking northwest from same roof.
4. Looking north from same roof.
5. Search light from same roof.
6. Fireworks No. 1.
7. Fireworks No. 2.
8. General interior view of Liberal Arts Building.

The Republican's Best Newspaper.

The N. Y. Tribune's party is just now in a minority in the national administration, but The Tribune makes a brave showing for the Republicans and continues to advocate their policies with its historic ability and energy of purpose. Any Democrat who wants to know what the Republicans think and intend, and wishes to obtain the information from a paper whose utterances are authoritative, can get Republican doctrine, pure, undefiled, and fresh from the fire, in the columns of The N. Y. Tribune. As an agricultural weekly, The Tribune is an excellent paper. Its market reports are especially accurate, complete and good and they commend it to all who want current prices and the state of trade. There are reasons why every family wishes (in addition to the necessary local newspaper, which it must certainly have, whether it takes others or not) to enjoy the perusal of the great editorials, foreign letters, book reviews, and special articles of a newspaper, which is edited for the country at large and devotes its attention to matters of national and general moment. In their choice of general newspapers, this winter, our readers will do well to consider The New York Tribune. Its price is low, $1 a year; and its columns are crammed with strong, brilliant and entertaining matter. It is announced that the paper will continue to print the writings of Roswell G. Horr, of Michigan, on the tariff, Reciprocity, Coinage and Currency, and The Tribune has a strong editorial page and many non-political features of interest including two pages a week of Agriculture and papers on special branches of Farming. The Tribune has undertaken to illustrate the news of the day and has an excellent Art Department. An illustrated Premium List and a sample copy will be sent, free, to any applicant.

Terrible blood poison, body covered with sores, and two bottles of P. P. P. (Prickly Ash, Poke Root, and Pottassium) cured the disease, making the patient lively as a ten-year-old.

PECULIAR TO ITSELF.

So eminently successful has Hood's Sarsaparilla been that many leading citizens from all over the United States furnish testimonials of cures that seem almost miraculous. Hood's Sarsaparilla is not an accident, but the ripe fruit of industry and study. It possesses merit "peculiar to itself."

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 15, 1894.

The business revival runs by fits and starts. The calamity howlers are having fits and the mills are starting.

Election outrages in the south are likely to take a rest for awhile, pending the returning board muddle at Lansing.

A hint to the jingo Congressmen: The groundhog saw his shadow on Candlemas day; now let Minister Willis be recalled.

Here is the Courier-Journal's advice. To the Senate: The Tariff Bill is in your hands. Whoop it up and whoop it through.

The political scandal at Lansing overshadows national politics at present. Everyone is on the qui vive to see what will be the next development.

The state officers involved in the canvassing board scandal have decided not to resign. They will stick and fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.

Pay the pensions with an income tax. Why not? Most of the millionaires of the present day became such through business opportunities afforded in war times.

Now let the U. S. Senate get down to work, give the Wilson bill a fair measure of debate and then pass it. Patriotism and good policy both demand this course.

In the investigation of the returning board frauds, the whole matter should be probed to the bottom. Let no guilty man escape, whatever his political affiliations may be.

From present appearances, Madison Wells and Eliza Pinkston could take a few lessons in returning board tactics from the Lansing cabal. The Louisiana job was a modest affair compared with the Lansing steal.

The Kansas City Star says Mr. Thornblower was married yesterday to a charming widow. And there is not a woman in this country who will not applaud this rebuke to that bald-headed old bachelor, David B. Hill.

The Federal Elections Bill passed the Senate last week and now only awaits the signature of the President to become a law. With the repeal of this law, another old relic of war times will have gone where the woodbine twineth.

The Republican organs now say that Congressman Wilson knows too much to be a Congressman. The masterly manner in which he has handled his tariff bill shows that he knows much more than the average Congressman, that is true.

Gov. Rich seems to have struck it rich in the returning board scandal. Enough evidence has already been found to show a big steal in both 1891 and 1893 and the end is not yet. The governor has made a shrewd move in forcing the investigation himself.

Moody and Sanky began a series of revival meetings in Washington last week, and although they have the largest hall in the city, with accommodations for about 8,000 people, they are turning away thousands every night. This is a good omen, as revival meetings are badly needed in Washington.

In commenting on the passage of the Wilson bill, the N. Y. World aptly says: In spite of general and special opposition, in spite of the clamor of local interests, in spite of the demand for continued pap on the part of bounty-fed sections and interests, and in spite of the parrot cries raised against the income tax feature of the measure, a Democratic House has been bold to redeem the promises made to the people.

The Baltimore Sun says: The Rubicon of tariff legislation is reached. The Democratic majority in Congress must cross it safely and triumphantly by passing the Wilson bill or it will write itself down as precisely the party of insincere professions, unreliable promises and incoherent policies which its Republican enemies have always said it was. Democracy and the Wilson bill will succeed or fail together. A party called to govern must govern—or get out.

IN CHICAGO'S SLUMS.

Five Cent Lodging Houses Where Chairs Take the Place of Beds.

Finding a lodging place for the night when one has but 5 cents—an ordinary street car fare nickel—is no easy job. Lodging houses where the beds rent for 10 cents hold as grimly to tariff prices as a coal combine in arctic weather would do. It is a case of fist money with those people. If they had 500 beds and but five lodgers, the sixth could not get an abatement, even though his flesh were dropping from his bones with frost. "No pay, no bed," is the motto, and they stick to it.

Nowadays dimes are being withdrawn from circulation. At least the people who are forced into begging them report that to be the state of the money market. Two nickles make a dime, it is true, and so do 10 pennies, but there seems to be a bear movement in small coins, and this form of currency also is hard to get, especially so for those who either can't, don't or won't work for it.

As a matter of fact there are many hundred persons in Chicago every night who cannot purchase a lodging for lack of means and who stay out so late that access to the station houses is denied because they are already overcrowded. These people will then sleep anywhere. All they want is cover from the night.

That can be had in Chicago for 5 cents. But the lowest tramp, if fortune favored him with a dime, would shrink with horror from lodging in such a place. There are one or two places of the kind in Chicago, and they are hard to find. When found, they are the very apotheosis of degradation, dirt and dinginess. Beside the 5 cent places those where admittance is a dime are palaces. For 5 cents the lodger is allowed the privilege of a chair until morning—simply that and nothing more.

The keepers of such places form the lowest elements of society. They do not treat their patrons as humans, nor yet as beasts of the field. The 5 cent wretch becomes an object for blows and kicks. When his nickel enters the greasy pocket that gapes for it, he is then an atom of squalor, and he is treated accordingly.

Recently the Atlas hotel was visited. It is probably the worst lodging house in Chicago. The prices begin at 5 cents and run to 15 cents. It is located on Custom House place a few yards from Van Buren street. On one side of it is a stable. There the horses get clean straw every night for bedding. On the other side is a deserted church, which has been purchased and which will be shortly converted into another lodging house. Amid such surroundings the poor fellow who has but a nickel is allowed to stay over night. He can sit on a three legged chair, or he can lie down on the floor. In either event he is forced to sleep with another man half covering him, for every night the filthy cellar is crowded.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Chicago Streets.

"Great city," said the stranger reflectively. "Wonderful city! The buildings are magnificent, the boulevards are superb and the hotels are unsurpassed. But—but why don't you name your streets?"

"Name our streets?" exclaimed the Chicagoan. "We do. You can't find a street in the city without a name."

"Well, then," went on the stranger, "why not derive some benefit from it? Why should there be any secrecy about it? Why not treat all streets alike? Why put the name of one street on the corner lamppost and not the name of the next? And why not have some uniformity about it?" he continued, warming up to his subject. "Why tack the name of one street onto a building, put the next on a lamppost, the third half way up an electric light post, the fourth clear at the top of it and have no sign at all for the fifth?"—Chicago Post.

Senators In the Barber's Chair.

A workman in the senate barber shop in Washington is credited with saying that the senators are "the most peaceful" men to shave he has ever met, though some of them are particular. One senator, he says, he has twice shaved three times in one day, not because his beard grows so fast, but because the senator "likes the sensation." Another senator "has a pair of little side whiskers of which he is fond and to which he devotes any amount of attention." He did not reveal all this to any senator, and to the helpless man to whom it was communicated he said with a despairing tone, "You know we are not allowed to talk to our senatorial customers unless they talk to us first." Who would not wish to be a United States senator while being shaved?—Chicago Tribune.

After the Wedding.

"How soon should calls upon a bride be made?" is a question that has been frequently asked. Calls upon a bride should be made very soon after her return from her wedding trip, if no day for such has been designated, and as immediately a visit must be paid to her mother or person at whose house the reception was held. The bride returns her calls soon and so far as possible in the order in which they are made. Her neglect to acquit herself of these debts would be inexcusable, and a person so careless would deserve to be socially forgotten.—Detroit Free Press.

Rather Uncomfortable.

Members of the medical division are forbidden to have their hats or clothing on preparatory to leaving this office before 4 o'clock. Any one breaking this rule will be charged with a demerit of 15 minutes.

It is perhaps not strictly our business, but we should think it would be rather uncomfortable for the clerks of the medical division to work all day without any clothing.—New York Tribune.

GENERAL LEE'S CHRISTMAS FARE.

There Were Cabbage and Bacon, but the Bacon Was Only Borrowed.

As the fortune of war has favored his larder, through some skillful foraging of Ephraim, a negro, who was his faithful cook, bodyservant and waiter—three gentlemen in one—General Lee invited several officers to dine with him on Christmas day, 1864. The lucky recipients of the timely invitation were five in number, all officers of distinction, among them Generals Longstreet, Gordon and Kershaw. They were all on time when the dinner was called. It was served on a rough pine table, without a cover, in General Lee's weather beaten tent. It consisted of boiled cabbage, and eight or ten boiled sweet potatoes and a dish of rice cooked dry. The piece de resistance, which indeed the knightly guests found it hard to resist, was a small bit of fat bacon, about 3 inches square, that lay on top of the large cabbage. Now, bacon was as rare in the Confederate camp at that time as are roses on the northern hilltops in December. You can imagine, therefore, the self restraint exercised by each guest as they declined in turn a slice of the delectable meat proffered by their host, who held the carving knife and fork ready to cut and help.

It was observed that when the general, after helping to the cabbage, said to the guest whose plate Ephraim held out, "Allow me to help you to a slice of the bacon?" the devoted old servitor's hand trembled greatly. In fact, he seemed to be in a state of decided fright. The high military rank of the guests would not account for his trepidation, for he daily served near a master who outranked them all. There was no splendor left in the tracery of faded gold lace on their battle stained uniforms to dazzle his eyes and cause them to roll about and glance from bacon to guest, and from guest to bacon, as each answered the half question with the words, "No, thank you, general." The discomposure of the serving man was all the more striking from its contrast with the serene, self poised dignity of his benign master.

Dinner over, the general and his guests retired from the tent, but as they passed out General Lee turned and said in a low tone, "Ephraim, we have another cabbage, have we not?"

"Then, Ephraim," said the general, "save the piece of bacon to cook with that cabbage."

The prompt and decisive reply, "No, sah, Mass Bob, I can't do dat! I jis borrow dat piece of bacon for seasonin from a friend ober dar in Richmon, and I done gib up my parole ob honor dat I'll gib him back dat same bacon what I borrow."

The general, who could not be a party to any man's violation of his parole of honor, consented at once to the return of the bacon that had so successfully run the gantlet of six hungry diners. He must have reflected, too, on the extremity of his fortunes that led to the borrowing of a part of his Christmas dinner on the hard condition that it should be returned untouched. His New Year's dinner was still more meager, I judge, from what he indicated to General Grant next day.

A flag of truce had been sent into the Confederate lines with an inquiry regarding a Union officer who had been wounded and taken prisoner, and the officer who bore it, after stating its object, said, "General Lee, I am directed by General Grant to give you his compliments and to say that he is thoroughly informed as to all your movements, and even knows what you had for dinner yesterday."

General Lee took the pleasantry in good part and answered, "Please, captain, present my compliments to General Grant and say that I must doubt the correctness of his information, for I know him to be a humane man, and if he had known what I had for my dinner he would have sent me a part of his own."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Bridal Bouquet.

A German horticultural journal is responsible for this story about a bridal bouquet: A certain schoolteacher in the town of Konitz had ordered a bouquet for his wedding day, stipulating that it should not cost more than 4 marks ($1), but not designating what kind of flowers should be selected. It was in the autumn, when bothouse flowers were few and dear, so the florist composed it of white dahlias, but the bride and her family declaring that these flowers were unfit for the purpose the schoolteacher returned the bouquet to its maker and refused to pay for it.

The florist then sued him, but the position of the schoolmaster was sustained in court, in accordance with the testimony of experts in matters of taste whom he had called in and who echoed the opinion of the bride.

A similar result followed upon an appeal to a higher court, despite the testimony of experts now summoned by the florist, and the florist was ordered to pay the costs of the suit, amounting to 300 marks.

A Furious Artesian Well.

A furious artesian well was struck in Chamberlain, S. D., a few months ago. At first, it sent out 3,000 gallons of water in a minute, but later the flow more than doubled. Water is forced through the pipe so vigorously that the solid eight inch stream is thrown over 14 feet into the air. The famous well at St. Augustine, Fla., is the only well in the country which approaches this in force and quantity of flow.—New York Ledger.

THE BIRDS OF NORTH AMERICA.

In connection with the foregoing report of our Ornithological Chapter, it is only right to call the attention of all lovers of birds to the magnificent work now being issued by the Natural Science Association of America, and entitled "The Birds of North America." Edition limited to 1,000. It is emphatically an original work, original in design and execution, and whether in letter press, illustrations or price, it is unapproached by anything of the kind in existance. It is recommended by the highest scientific, ecclesiastic and educational authority as being the most attractive, meritorious, pure and ennobling exposition of our ornithology yet given to the public. Dr. Elliott Coues, author of "Birds of the North-West," says: "It is a really notable work." Prof. C. J. Maynard, author of the "Birds of Eastern North America," says: "It contains the best pictures of the species which I have ever seen." Thos. G. Gentry, author of "Life Histories of Birds," and "Nests and Eggs of Birds of the United States," says: "It is the cheapest and best publication on ornithology in this country. The drawings are of a very high order, and rivals in beauty of design and finish the more costly works published abroad or in this country. It should be found in our homes and in libraries generally." And, according to Dr. Theodore Gill, a member of the National Academy of Sciences, "It is not only a meritorious volume, but is altogether so handsome as to make it a very appropriate presentation book or ornament for the family table." It is an imperial quarto volume of engraved figures of all our species, artistically reproduced, true in all hues of color to their natural plumage and botanical surroundings. It also includes a copious text description of their habits and characteristics, and embracing in general the observations made by the most eminent writers on ornithology, and a systematic table, arranged according to the classification adopted by the American Ornithologists' Union, includes all the additions and corrections of our North American species which have been made to date, with an index to page, plate and figure of each species according to the A. O. U. number. It is illustrated with one hundred and nineteen full page colored plates, each representing from one to thirty or more species. It is the finest book on American birds issued since Audubon, and is pronounced by some authorities surperior to that now rare and costly work. It is issued in half and full bindings, Russia, seal, or morocco, at the net price of $40 and $45 respectively; but in response to a special letter, the association authorized me to say that a substantial discount will be made to such of our A. A. members and others as are working naturalists. We commend this work especially to members of the Wilson Ornithological Chapter. It is also a very useful and appropriate addition to the home and reference library, and for presentation purposes generally. Address regarding it, the Natural Science Association, 114 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Sample of plates and text can be had by sending twenty-five cents in postage stamps.

ON THE FRONTIER.

Two giant minds have stamped the mental world,
Instructors of our times and those to be
Toiling to bring man kind to harmony,
Smoke from each study on the frontier curled.
They cannibal mate for fealty them proveth,
Not for the footprint but the thought of God.
They worshiped wisdom in the chastening rod
That cause transgressors, and yet both
Felt beauty as she moves through cycles vast,
And knew the imperfections that cleave to here
In our panuesion toward the perfect sphere;
They loved the future and esteemed the past.
Revere their lives, O man, for ne'er again
Will this old world contain two loveless men!

A Record Wedding Cake.

An English gentleman residing in Calcutta brought an action against a firm of Paris pastry cooks and confectioners under rather interesting circumstances. The plaintiff was about to be married and ordered what has been called a phenomenal wedding cake from the defendants. A sum of $120 was paid down for the cake on delivery. The colossal and expensive article of confectionary was packed by the plaintiff's order, and he took it with him to Calcutta. On opening the case containing the cake when he arrived in India, the Englishman found that he had literally nothing but a shapeless mass of crumbs. The splendid gateau had been hopelessly bruised and broken during the voyage.

An action was then brought against the Paris firm for a sum of $155, which included, besides the price paid for the cake, the cost of packing and transport. The defendants maintained before the Paris tribunal of commerce that they had no more responsibility after they had delivered over the cake to the person who ordered it. It was true that they recommended a packer, but that expert acted under the orders of another individual, who had been selected by the plaintiff to superintend the operation. The tribunal decided in favor of the defendants.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Two Convincing Reasons.

Lord Peterborough, who lived in the reign of Queen Anne, was very frolicsome, and one day seeing from his carriage a dancing master with pearl colored stockings lightly stepping over the broad stones and picking his way in extremely dirty weather he alighted and ran after him with drawn sword in order to drive him into the mud, but into which he of course followed himself.

This nobleman was once taken for the Duke of Marlborough and was mobbed in consequence. The duke was then in disgrace with the people, and Lord Peterborough was about to be roughly handled. Turning to them, he said:

"Gentlemen, I can convince you by two reasons that I am not the Duke of Marlborough. In the first place, I have only 5 guineas in my pocket, and in the second they are heartily at your service."—Sala's Journal.

Reproved by the Prince.

Not long ago the Prince of Wales was one of a house party, his host being a well known peer. After dinner the Royal ghest, the host and the other male visitors repaired to the billiard room. On a table at the side were two or three boxes of cigars, and the prince was helping himself to one, when an ambitious millionaire approached him, and taking from his pocket a cigar case held it out to the prince, saying, "I think, sir, you will find these better."

"Mr. ——," replied the prince, "if a man's dinner is good enough for me, his cigars are good enough for me."

The millionaire was unexpectedly called away to town next morning on business.—Detroit Free Press.

Newspaper Advertising.

How much money is spent annually in newspaper advertising? Probably any estimate less than $200,000,000 would fall short of the facts. Some single firms have spent as much as $500,000 in a year. To put out such enormous sums requires a large machinery in and out of the advertisers' offices, and the business—or the art, as you may choose to consider it—commands the services of men of a high order of ability.—John Irving Romer's Lecture.

The Bones Were All There.

An auctioneer in a New England city recently sold a horse at auction for 50 cents. The horse was so bony that the auctioneer said, by way of explanation, that "they (the bones) were exhibited intentionally, for the purpose of showing that none had been extracted."—Profitable Advertising.

Hopeless.

Physician (severely)—I have no hesitation in saying, sir, that your wife's nervous fits are occasioned by your staying out so late every night.

Witherby—Great heavens, doctor, I didn't know she was suffering from an incurable disease!—Exchange.

THE MECCA OF LEISURE.

A Place For Wealthy People Who Desire Comfortable Indolence.

Washington is rapidly becoming a favorite place of residence for people who have made fortunes elsewhere, and who are devoting the remainder of their lives to having a good time in a quiet way. There is a large colony of such families, and they contribute enormously to the general stock of elegant and comfortable indolence for which the city is noted. Then there are the retired army and navy officers. Their name is legion, and Washington is their favorite place to live. You see them in great numbers in the clubs, on the thoroughfares, in society. Nor must the widows be overlooked. There are more widows in Washington than in any other city in this country, also for rent. The widows of public men, of army and navy officers, of private citizens in all ranks of life, gravitate to the Capital City as the pleasantest place they know of to pass the autumn of life.

The diplomatic corps comprises several hundred more or less idle and fashionable men and women. Literary and scientific men, especially those enjoying incomes and independence from inherited or other sources, are numerous in Washington. Always the city contains thousands of visitors attracted by the peculiar interest which attaches to the seat of government.

Is it any wonder that we have here an ease loving and an ease enjoying population? Are you surprised that Washington laziness has become proverbial throughout the country? Do you marvel that our streets and avenues are rialtoes in which comfortableness, fashion, superficinlity, even insincerity, are constantly displayed?

The street life of Washington is always interesting. The good dressing gives an air of elegance to the thoroughfares, which, with their famous shade trees and pavements smooth and clean as a floor, are themselves elegant. The number of noted men and beautiful women to be seen in any given walk or drive adds to the charm of the scene. The bicycles, numbered literally by thousands, add the spice of rapidity and whirl to a picture that might otherwise lack somewhat of action.—Washington Letter.

She Wasn't His Wife.

The man got into a street car comfortably filled and crowded into a seat next to a sharp faced woman in the corner. He squeezed her up against the end of the car, took out a newspaper, and shoving it half across her face began to read. She stood it for about five minutes.

"Excuse me," she said then, "are you a married man?"

He dropped his paper and looked at her.

"Yes," he replied curtly.

"I thought so," she went on. "Ain't your wife a little woman that won't say her soul's her own and lets you impose on her all you want to? I suppose she carries in the coal, builds the fires, gets your slippers, does the marketing, mends your clothes, tends to the children, submits like a lamb when you find fault and is generally an excellent wife, ain't she?"

"Madam"— he began.

"Don't say a word," she interrupted. "I'm not your wife, am I?"

"No, and I'm"——

"That's all right. And as I'm not I don't propose to have you sitting down on me and crowding me up in this corner till I can't breathe without wheezing like a steam engine. Why don't you get out and walk?" and the passengers snickered so that he did.—Detroit Free Press.

Found Them Invaluable.

"I suppose typewriters are very common now," said she musingly as she settled back in her favorite rocking chair after dinner.

"Oh, yes," he said, "they're quite a necessity in every line of business."

"You have one?" she asked.

"Yes, indeed," he replied as he hastily looked over the evening paper. "I'd feel lost without one."

"Lightens your work, does it?"

"Lightens it? Why, it makes it an absolute pleasure. I wouldn't be without one for the world."

"Saves time, too, I suppose?"

"It makes it pass so rapdily that you hardly notice it."

"How much does a good typewriter cost, John?"

"Oh, not much," he said absentmindedly. "You can get a rattling pretty one for $12 or $15 a week."

Before he had time to read the first sentence of the article he had started on he was suddenly jarred into consciousness of the fact that wife was referring to machines, not operators, and that somehow he had made a serious mistake.—Chicago Post.

Peg Tankards.

The pegging or marking of drinking cups was introduced by St. Dunstan to check the intemperate habits of the times by preventing one man from taking a larger draft than his companions. But the device proved the means of increasing the evil it was intended to remedy, for, refining upon St. Dunstan's plan, the most abstemious were required to drink precisely to a peg or pin, whether they could soberly take such a quantity of liquor or not. To the use of such cups may be traced the origin of many of our popular phrases. When a person is much elated, we will say, "He is in a merry pin," and "He is a peg too low," when he is not in good spirits. On the same principle we talk of "taking a man down a peg" when we would check forwardness.—Sala's Journal.

An Active Mind.

Fond Mother—My boy has a very active mind, don't you think?

Teacher—Assuredly. I wish you could hear the dear little fellow talk when he gets caught at something and tries to make me believe that he didn't do it.—Good News.

ANN ARBOR LETTER.

Ann Arbor, Feb. 9, 1894.

EDITOR HERALD:

This is the witching time of year at the U. of M. The semester is closing, and exams are concocted by each delighted "tute," who seeks to extricate the much learning, which he has poured unstintedly into his scholars receptive brains. Now, every good student, who wants to grow up and get his credit, bones all day, and when night comes wraps a wet towel around his devoted head, buys a fresh can of kerosene, and grinds on through the hours, which erstwhile he filled with gentle sleep. And the co-eds? Yes, they, fair damsels, grind too, and vengeful Nature steals away their beauty, if they have it, and if not, why, then their temper. No one smiles, or if they do, "they smile in such a sort as if they scorned the weakness."

Everyone "just knows" that they will be "conditioned" in everything. The tutors are all "old fiends," "perfect grinds," "awfully mean," or perhaps the reverse as "dead snaps," "regular cherubs," or "perfectly divine."

The law students were recently made happy by a gift for their library of $10,000. The Gym has been promised to the students by next year, and the new recitation building is completed externally, so we expect soon to be able to conjugate antique Greek verbs amid the modern innovations.

The authenticity of iota subscript and the rough breathing, also the defunct van and other matters of great human interest and of vital importance to all good citizens, are yet undecided, and I shall leave them for a later letter.

Reduced rates will also be made for three "Land Seeker's Excursions," as follows: On Feb. 8th, March 8th and April 9th, 1894, round trip Iron Clad tickets, limited to continuous passage, with final return limit, 20 days from date of sale may be sold at One Lowest First Class Fare for Round Trip to all points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and points in Georgia as far east as Augusta and on and west of a line drawn from Augusta to Millon, Eastman, Abbeville and Albany; then down the Flint River to River Junction, including points in Florida west of River Junction; also to New Orleans, La.

Two fakirs, giving their names as J. Townsend and Al. Stewart, succeeded in "doing" a number of Adrian people to a queen's taste last week, and among them was Landlord Emery who has an unpaid bill of $8. The scheme, which resembles very much the one worked in Hudson a few months ago, was to sell a quantity of tea for 50 cents and promise to enlarge a photograph into a beautiful picture with a frame. The pictures were left with the board bill at the Emery hotel, and the only thing that has been enlarged is the ideas of the susceptibles about dealing with strangers.—Hudson Gazette.

THE END OF RAMADAN

GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF THE CLOSE OF THE FORTY DAYS' FAST.

A Gun Boomed From the Citadel at the Beginning and Ending of the Rite—The Legend Upon Which the Uncomfortable Custom Is Based.

We sat in the tent's shadow, with our faces turned toward Cairo. There were three of us, the sheik of the neighboring village, Ahmed and I. The clear outline of the Mokhattan hills was hidden in the thick mist generated by the heat: the city was a gray blur against the black sides of the uplands. Below us, amid the sugar cane, the fellahin worked with an affectation of energy. Sometimes a voice came to us mellowed by distance; sometimes the sail of a vessel glided phantomwise over the blue ribbon of water that twined along the valley toward Alexandria and the delta.

A month before I had seen the messengers leave the city and strike into the desert. Twenty-four hours later, dusty and hot, they returned, bearing news. The new moon had appeared, and the fast was proclaimed. At midnight a gun boomed from the citadel, and suddenly the merry noises of the streets were stilled.

Next day I wandered through the bazaars, but received no invitation to drink coffee with my friends. Pipes and cigarettes were not offered to me. A kind of half sleep had fallen on everybody, and I hardly dared speak to any one. In the intervals between their bargainings the merchants read the Koran or prayed, counting their beads with nimble fingers, head bent downward. The bargainings, too, were a poor shadow of the exciting scenes I loved. The purchaser was always languid and the vender inert, uninterested.

As the afternoon wore on a look of fatigue, often of real pain, gloomed on the usually genial faces. It was hot, so hot. The sun beat furiously on the white walls and roads; the cruel Kempion whirled the dust through the streets and dried the skin and lips. But the cry of the water carrier was not raised; no boys offered bunches of juicy fruit to the sufferers. Ramadan had come with all its terrors, and for the love of God and his apostle must they be borne, if not cheerfully, at any rate sternly and manfully.

One hour before sunset life seemed to stir again in the veins. The bakeries were crowded; the fires blazed under the ovens; a smell of cooking stole over the city. Women squatted at intervals along the streets with cakes and fruit and bottles of water spread before them. Little groups gathered round them, impatient, expectant. The smokers took out their pipes or cigarettes and stood waiting for the signal, match in hand. Suddenly the sun fell, and the gun thundered from the citadel. The city awoke; the population began to eat; the women were busy disposing of their goods.

For 40 days these things were, and now was come the closing day of the fast, and I sat with my friends on the sand, gazing toward the citadel till the gun showed fire for the last time.

All the afternoon envious glances had been cast at me as I cheerfully disobeyed the prophet's orders. Ahmed, I think, had the sheik not been with me, would have smoked a cigarette, but as it was he lay beside me and sulked. The sheik was too old to behave thus. He was quiet and spoke slowly, but he tried bravely to conceal all signs of discomfort. Ahmed's annoyance may be accounted for in this way. He declared to me that Mohammed fasted one day in the month Ramadan, but on which day was uncertain, and therefore the theologians decreed a 40 days' fast that they might be sure of fasting the same day as the prophet. I do not think Ahmed believes this legend, though he vouches vehemently for its truth.

To while away the time I asked the sheik to tell me about the visit of the czarowitz. But the long abstinence made him unable to talk at any length, and even this his favorite story he told me briefly in a couple of bald sentences, though he responded gently: "I met him as one prince meets another. He told me he owned many villages; that he was sheik over half the world. It may be as they have said."

"And what did he say to you?" I queried. "He greeted me courteously and took me by the hand. This ring that I wear is his gift."

As he spoke he showed me, without pride, a sapphire of great size and beauty. Then he relapsed into silence, and I amused myself by picturing the event in my mind. I would that I had seen that meeting between the heir of the holy Russian empire and the simple Arab chief. Looking into his grave gray eyes and at his tall, slight figure, the broad shoulders not yet bent, though the white beard he was stroking told of many years of life, and in spite of his tattered blue robe, I easily conceived how he had been treated—courteously as became a prince.

Before the setting sun touched the horizon a boy from the village brought a large plate of food and a bottle of water and set them before us. "The signal," I cried as a white puff of smoke rolled away from the citadal walls, and at the same instant the sun sank behind the desert.

The sheik seized the bottle of water and drank long and eagerly. When his thirst was appeased, he belched loudly and handed the bottle to Ahmed, who drank eagerly, too, not omitting the curious after grace.

Then they devoured the food voraciously, the old man beckoning me to join. After we had eaten we sat and talked far into the night under the golden stars. The distant city gleamed fairylike with myriad lamps, and the murmur of its thousand voices came to us through the silent air.

Ramadan was dead. The fast was over and the feast begun.—Pall Mall Budget.

School Notes.

Herbert and Ella Munger were absent Monday and Tuesday.

There were several absent and tardy scholars Monday, on account of the heavy storm.

The Juniors are actively engaged in their plans to make the Junior exhibition a success.

Miss McDonald, of California, and Mrs. Kellogg visited the High School one day last week.

Miss Jennie Price, who taught school in the C room three years ago, is visiting old friends in the village. She called on the high school Tuesday forenoon.

The next Lyceum is to-morrow, Feb. 16th. The subject for debate is, Resolved, That more benefits are gained by reading than by observation. For the affirmative are, Herbert Conklin, Nellie Louden and Anna Williamson; negative, Andrew Kehoe, Samuel McClure and Lillian Waring.

The Housewife, of New York, is a monthly no woman will feel like doing without, for the freshness and worth of its contents. It is evidently edited by a genial and decisive hand, and its contents written by women who know their business well. The fashion, fancy-work and decorations are in excellent taste, while either the health or housekeeping department would make the reputation of a magazine, being full of fresh, trustworthy matter.

Social, political and economic themes are discussed in the mammoth Midwinter issue of The Arena by Rev. Hiram Vrooman, who writes on "How to Organize the Moral Forces"; J. H. Bellangee on "The Relation of the Land Question to Other Reforms"; Congressman John Davis on "Honest and Dishonest Money" and the Editor of The Arena on The Onward March of Uninvited Poverty." This issue contains a Symposium on "Rational Dress for Women." It is profusely illustrated by fifteen large photogravures. A fine portrait of Robert Browning forms the frontispiece of this issue, which contains 164 pages.

OBITUARY.

Ann Garlinghouse was born in the state of New Jersey, Sept. 10th, 1811. At the age of thirteen, she, with her parents moved to Steuben Co., N. Y. In 1832 she was married to John Finch. Blessed with health and having a firm faith in God and a fixed determination to succeed, they began life on a new farm in the woods. There were many years of hard work and privation, but success came, not only in securing a good home and the comforts for later life but the ability to be of use in the world, in the advancement of the cause of Christ, which was dear to both of them, and the uplifting of their fellowmen. In 1865 Tecumseh became their home. In 1880, just after they had passed the forty-eighth anniversary of their married life, her husband died. Since that time her home has been in the family of the only surviving one of her six children, O. B. Finch, of Raisin, at whose home she died, Feb. 6th, 1894, crowned with a long life filled with good deeds, and leaving to all who had known her in the years past a legacy of precious memories.

The Outlook,

The Outlook (formerly the Christian Union) will in the year 1894 give its readers more matter than ever before, and will extend its scope and variety in many ways. This weekly journal, now about twenty-five years old, remains under the editorship of the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott (who is Henry Ward Beecher's successor, both in the pulpit of Plymouth Church and the editorship of this paper) and of Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie, who is familiar as that of the author of several books of charming literary and social essays, and as that of a lecturer on similar topics and an experienced journalist. They are assisted by an editorial staff which has just been enlarged and by many specialists in the lines of theology, political economy, literature and other subjects, whose services are called upon as circumstances require. It publishes also each week many signed articles by writers of ability; follows with care all the important philanthropic and industrial movements of the day; has an excellent department of religious news under the especial care of the Rev. Dr. A. H. Bradford; maintains a Home Department which is rich in suggestion and entertainment for women readers; prints stories and sketches for the young in every issue; reviews and comments upon current literature; furnishes constantly bright and cheerful table talk about men and things—and in short, aims to give the family, the student, the preacher, and the general reader fresh information, original and sensible observation and reasonable entertainment. (Clinton Hall, New York.)

The AnnArbor electric street car company and the Ypsilanti motor line people held a meeting Friday and agreed to consolidate. They intend to run the whole system by electricity. This doesn't look much as though these two lines had been purchased by the Philadelphia syndicate which S. B. Nesmith is chaperoning.—Adrian Times.

Preacher Born did not conduct services at the Mabee Lutheran church last Sunday. Cause: he had been deposed from the pastorship by the church, being under black clouds of charges against his moral character; and early Sunday morning a large number of the society gathered at the church to prevent, by force if necessary, Born's further desecration of the church by his conducting services. Born drove to the church at the usual hour, but finding the gathering and surmising their intentions he wisely retreated.—Dundee Reporter.

Monday's storm was the worst blizd that has struck this vicinity in eral years. The snow drifts on Chie street were four to six feet deep. vel about the country has been ch impeded, and trade this week has n very dull in consequence.

The Baptist church was crowded last nday evening to witness a baptismal vice. The pastor, Rev. H. A. Smith, e a strong discourse and then eight ndidates received the rite of baptism, r young ladies and four gentlemen. e services throughout were deeply pressive and appropriate.

Florida on wheels will be in town next Saturday, the 17th. Read the full announcement elsewhere.

The subject of Rev. Conwell's lecture Saturday evening will be, "The Jolly Earthquake," or how to be happy.

The oldest inhabitant has been put to his trumps since last Monday. They say that it was the worst blizzard and snow fall in this latitude since March, 1867.

In the special notice of the sale of the Blood farm, the price has been reduced from $50.00 to $45.00 per acre. This is a very cheap property at that price.

The next entertainment in the Baptist Course will be the concert by the Silver Lake Quartette next Tuesday evening. People can rely upon hearing a fine musical program.

Teeple has taken two views of Chicago street showing the big drifts, one from the opera house looking east, and one from the railroad looking east. He ought to sell a large number of them.

The second number, volume one, of the "Youth's Herald" is on our table. It is a neat little eight page sheet, published by J. H. M. Campbell at Ypsilanti, Mich., at twenty-five cents per year. We regard Mr. Campbell as a Tecumseh boy and hope his new venture may pan out into a successful affair.

One of the most successful hits of the campaign was the securing of the Silver Lake Quartette, under the leadership of Rev. C. H. Mead. To hear them sing is to feel that you are once more in the presence of the original Hutchinson Family, that did so much to sing freedom into the hearts of the people years ago.—N. Y. Witness.

Edward Bok's successful article in the January Cosmopolitan on "The Young Man in Business" has been reprinted in a tasty and handy booklet form at 10 cents by The Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia. To this reprint Mr. Bok has added some 14 pages of editorial matter answering "Three Uncertain Young Men."

Samuel Bryan, one of the leading farmers of this section, died last Monday evening. He was born in Connecticut in 1815, and came to Tecumseh in 1830. He worked as a hired man upon the very farm on which he died. The funeral services take place this afternoon at two o'clock at the family residence, Rev. H. A. Smith officiating.

A. B. Parks' stock of Dry Goods and Carpets will be closed out at any sacrifice at once, owing to damage by the recent fire. The carpets on the upper floor were but slightly damaged by smoke, and there will be some big bargains on them. He intends to rush the stock off as fast as possible. Read his card on the eighth page.

S. W. Anderson has received a letter from John R. Clark, stating that his other engagements are such that he cannot be here on the 18th, and hence the appointment made for him on that day has been withdrawn. He will probably be in Tecumseh a part of the day Friday, but cannot remain over Sunday, much to the regret of his old friends here.

"How to Help the Unemployed" is a question which is uppermost in the public mind just at present. Henry George discusses this problem in an article that appears in the February number of the North American Review. He declares that the unemployed are insulted and degraded by being forced to accept as paupers what they would gladly earn as laborers.

This item appeared in the Times correspondence last week: The ages of the last twelve persons dying here were as follows: Mrs. Alzina Blood 82, Mrs. Chloe Woodward 97, N. S. Burroughs 82, Wm. H. Mather 73, John Usborne 73, Mrs. Riggs 92, Mrs. John Orr 65, Mrs. Frances Aten 65, James Freeman 62, Wm. Kennedy 76, Harmon Morseman 88, Mrs. John Finch 82, an average of 78 1-3. And now Samuel Bryan can be added to the list, who died last Monday at the age of 78 years.

Rev. C. H. Mead, the leader of the Silver Lake Quartette, was then introduced. Those who had an impression that Mr. Mead's power is limited to song were surely undeceived. No more effective work was ever done here than his. Next morning's Times said: "He delivered a prohibition speech such as Scranton has never been favored with. He made the Prohibition question an awful reality and yet he was intensely humerous and witty. His manner of delivery is unlike any temperance lecturer that has yet appeared in this city and he kept the audience in a continuous roar from beginning to end."—The People.

The February term of the Circuit Court began Monday. As most of the jurymen on the panel could not get to Adrian Tuesday morning, their attendance was postponed until yesterday, when the regular calendar was begun.

F. J. Temple has moved his Ridgeway drug stock to Tecumseh and incorporated the same with John Orr's stock. The store lately occupied by Mr. Orr, between Ed. Kirchgessner's and the bank, is now being fitted up for their occupancy with new shelving, etc., and the new firm will open business there as soon as the improvements are completed.

We have received the 8th semi-annual report of the National Loan & Investment Co. of Detroit, which shows assets of $1,670,450, and net earnings of $271,688. They have a limited amount of 6 per cent dividend stock, which they offer to investors, as a safe investment, and can be withdrawn on demand. For particulars enquire of F. B. Bauer, Sec'y of Local Board.

The Mendelssohn Quintette Club are not frightened by a blizzard. Notwithstanding the fearful storm Monday evening, the troupe appeared as announced, and went through with their entire program to an audience of about fifty persons. Those who ventured out were abundantly repaid for their trouble, for the club were on their mettle and never gave a better entertainment.

The Jackson train going north Monday evening arrived in that city Tuesday morning. The train of Tuesday morning going south left there at ten o'clock and passed this station about noon. Some cuts between Napoleon and Jackson filled with drifts and had to be shoveled out by hand. The crew and passengers divided themselves into gangs and even then they had an all night's job. The trains on the Mackinaw were all late Tuesday.

The revival meetings which have been in progress at the M. E. church for some time had a fitting finale last Sunday morning, when twenty-five persons united with the church. Both old young were included in the list, and in one case father, mother and daughter in the same family. Eleven received the right of baptism, the others having been baptized when children. The baptismal service was performed by Rev. Varner in a very appropriate manner, after which he addressed the new members, explaining their obligations in earnest, happy words. The church was crowded and the exercises throughout were most solemn and impressive.

Co. B of Adrian is arranging for a grand military ball on the evening of the 22d.

Mrs. C. M. Woodward and daughter Agnes, called on friends in Clinton Tuesday afternoon.

One day last week a card on an office door in this town gave this startling information, "gone to dinor."

The repairs are about completed on J. L. Waldo's store, and it will be a much nicer store than before the fire. It will make fine quarters for some good business.

J. C. Hazlett is getting in a fine stock of suitings, and is prepared to suit the most fastidious, in new suits of clothes. For further particulars read his announcement on the first page.

The M. E. Church Aid Society, will hold the regular tea meeting in the church parlors, on Weduesday, Feb. 21st. Business meeting at 4 p. m. Mrs Wyrill's committee will serve supper from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m.

Mr. Conwell has become a favorite in Philadelphia on the platform, and is sure of an audience whenever he appears. He has repeated one lecture at the Academy three times, with equal success, in the same year.

STOLE THE RECORDS.

More Crookedness with Reference to Election Frauds Disclosed.

Books Containing Evidence Against the Conspirators Taken from a Hotel in Lansing—Progress of the Grand Jury's Inquiry.

EVIDENCE DESTROYED.

LANSING, Feb. 12. — The records, bearing evidence of the falsifying of the city of Detroit returns in the 1891 and 1892 votes on the salaries amendments, were stolen Thursday night from a room in the Hotel Downey. William May, county clerk of Wayne county, brought them here to produce before the grand jury at Mason. Their theft shows that conspirators are still at work and do not hesitate to resort to underhand methods to further their case.

Thursday William May, county clerk of Wayne county, was summoned to appear before the grand jury at Mason. He stopped at Lansing in the afternoon on his way to Mason and was seen here by Attorney General Ellis, an official whose salary was raised by the amendment of 1891.

He was not required to appear before the grand jury Thursday and, with other witnesses, reporters and attorneys, returned to Lansing to spend the night. He secured a room at the Hotel Downey, a leading hotel of the city, and placed the records of his office, which were the ones which had been falsified, therein. He spent a portion of the evening with friends. At 11:30 o'clock he went to his room with a friend. The door was found unlocked and partly open. The falsified canvass had been stolen. The thieves had also removed from the record book five leaves containing the evidences of their guilt. The entries with reference to the canvass of 1893 and 1891 were gone, and the conclusion is simply irresistible that the work was performed by some one connected with the perpetration of the original frauds. No trace of the missing documents has been found.

Postmaster Healey, of Ironwood, whom Attorney General Ellis positively alleges has made an affidavit which is in the latter's possession to the effect that he, as chairman of the canvassing board, made the changes in the Gogebic returns, was before the grand jury examining the election frauds for three hours Saturday. Healey has recently denied that he ever made such an affidavit, but whether or not he insisted upon the denial is not known. Deputy County Clerk Strom was the only other witness on Saturday. He testified to the fact that the returns left his office correct as to form and vote cast and were never returned for correction. Lieut. Gov. Giddings, whose salary was increased by the 1893 amendment and who has been accused of knowing something of last spring's frauds, reached Mason Saturday. He denies any knowledge of wrong doing and says he had no unusual interest in the passage of the amendment. The grand jury has adjourned until Tuesday afternoon. It is stated on what is believed to be reliable authority that the jury has agreed upon at least two indictments which will be returned next week.

On Thursday the principal witness was S. S. Cooper, a Bessemer attorney, who under a waiver of professional confidence from Attorney General Ellis testified that the latter on a recent visit to Bessemer sought unsuccessfully to retain him. The details of Cooper's story cannot be learned. Ellis' waiver applies to the grand jury only. A Lansing paper openly charges that Ellis, being the only one personally interested, was the only one who could have a motive which could induce the perpetration of the frauds of 1891.

CHILLS AND FEVER.

A Case of Long Standing Finds a Cure.

Several years ago a man forty-[illegible] years of age, from a malarious district came a long distance to consult me for a chronic malarious affection for which he had doctored without intermission for over ten years. The treatment which had been mainly relied on by the various doctors he had consulted was quinine and other derivative of chinona bark. Of these preparations he had taken many pounds, and during several intervals he had taken a great many chill cures, but nothing seemed to have any permanent effect.

His complexion was of that dirty yellow so characteristic of ague patients and his sunken, lusterless eyes, surrounded by dark circles, indicated that completely his health had been undermined. The tongue was heavily [illegible] red with a thick brown coating, breath very offensive, and he complained of constant, dull headache. A poor appetite, indigestion, biliousness and constipation completed a tale of woe commonly heard in a malarious locality. The chills came on at irregular intervals. Sometimes he would not have one a month; then again every day for a while.

For this man I prescribed Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin as directed on the bottles, the Man-a-lin to be used until the bowels became regular and digestion good. A few weeks after I received a very enthusiastic letter from him, in which he declared himself nearly well and better than he had been in ten years, and had taken no quinine since beginning my treatment. I instructed him to gradually leave off the Man-a-lin which he did, but continued the Pe-ru-na a few months longer, and made a complete recovery, continuing to enjoy the best of health.

His case is one of which there are thousands in every malarious district who have been many years and still are searching for something to bring relief to their miserable condition. I am positive that Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin would cure every one of these, for I have watched its effect a good many years and I do not know a single failure.

This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while in most numberless cases are on record radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments had proved of no avail.

THE DANGER OF NEGLECT.

IN CASES OF PILES AND OTHER RECTAL DISEASES.

There is no class of diseases so difficult to permanently cure when once firmly established as affections of the rectum and lower bowels. The tendency to chronic disease is very marked and although the first symptoms are unmistakable, yet they are in most cases neglected until deep seated disease is the result. In nearly every case of rectal disease, fistula, ulcers in rectum, fissure and similar troubles the first symptoms are heat itching about the affected part finally developing into an ordinary case of Piles.

It may be itching bleeding or protruding Piles it matters not, the end will be the same if neglected, and right here is the point to take time by the forelock and cure the piles, and effectually ward off any further danger. The surest and safest way to remove any form of Piles is to use the Pyramid Pile Cure, a remedy which has been fairly tested by thousands of sufferers and physicians, and it cures every form of Piles rapidly and without pain or inconvenience.

It is not to be confounded with the ordinary ointments, suppositories, pills and salves, so extensively sold and advertised as sure cures for Piles.

The Pyramid Pile Cure differs from all these in that it contains no poison, no opiates, and more over gives results on the first application.

Your druggist will tell you that no pile cure gives such universal satisfaction. A Treatise on Piles, invaluable to every sufferer, is enclosed in each package.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having

Diamond Crystal Salt

instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. If you make butter, investigate our Dairy Salt, there's money in it. Address

John T. Clark has been giving one of his fine Jersey cows (by name Litta Rex) a butter test for one month from Jan. 7th to Feby. 7th, the result being a little over 94 lbs. This upon ordinary feed—he did not feed for a test—largely exceeds the test at the Columbian Exposition.

Several of our grape growers, being unable to sell their grapes last season, turned the crop into wine. Some of the "juice" has been racked off lately and good judges pronounce it a superior article. Who knows but this accident may lead to the establishment of a new industry in Clinton?

SCISSORS AND PASTE POT.

Clippings and Condensations from Our Neighborhood Exchanges.

Let the business men take heart. They have put behind them what is usually considered the dullest month of the year.

Singing schools twice a week are jarring the plastering loose at Hampton's hall, Tipton. The class has progressed from whole notes to "pot-hooks," already.—Adrian Press.

It is a peculiar fact that for the first time in over a quarter of a century a barrel of apples is worth more than a barrel of flour, and the relative difference promises to be larger before the year is closed.

Hard times at Dundee have brought 5 cent loaves of bread down to 3 cents and 10 cent loaves have fallen to 7 cents. So says the Reporter, whose editor once more can invite a friend home to dinner.—Adrian Press.

"Well," replied his sable majesty, we let one of your profession in here many years ago, and he kept up a continual row with his former delinquent subscribers; and as we have more of that class of persons than any other, we passed a law prohibiting the admission of editors."

The postmaster at Clinton was appointed Jan. 1, 1893; consequently his term does not exire until after the next presidential election. There are several aspirants among the Democrats and considerable cursing of the postmaster general for his slow movements. Clinton should come to Adrian and learn how they manage such things here.—Adrian Times.

The editor of the Brooklyn Exponent has been looking up foreign customs and writes the following: A woman in London bequeathed her whole fortune to a newspaper man because she had enjoyed so many delicious hours from the perusal of his daily work. Its different in this country. Here the newspaper man is mighty glad to get the few dollars he earnestly earns. The London idea isn't likely to become universally popular.

Miller, of Raisin, against Raisin township, to recover damages to the extent of $10,000 which she feels she has suffered in the following manner: Some two years ago Mrs. Miller was driving by the residence of Chester Clark. The New York World.

The most valuable paper that comes to this office is the New York World. Fearless and Independent, working at all times for the best interests of the people, and never for the selfish ends of any ring or individual, supporting the right and condemning the wrong wherever found, it becomes a great power for good throughout the land. Its policy is defined by its well-known motto: "Equal Rights to All, Special Favors to None." The reputation of The Weekly World as an incomparable newspaper is fully established. It reaches for the very best and fullest news of the entire country, and gets it. The celebrated "Tariff Mule" articles are again running in their weekly and are creating widespread attention. Its miscellaneous pages are replete with articles of valuable and interesting information to every one. It is a large 12-page, 8-column paper for only $1.00 a year. We have succeeded in making special arrangements by which we can furnish The HERALD and The Weekly World one year both for only $2.00.

A Little Deceiver.

It cannot be called a fraud, as it is of too great value and is not to blame for being misused.

Vick's New Branching Aster when cut resembles the chrysanthemum so closely that only experts can tell the difference, and as it comes into flower six weeks before the "mums," and at a time when flowers are scarce, it is a great temptation to the florist to sell these Asters for "mums." The Branching Aster can be easily grown out doors, and the seeds cost only 25 cents per packet, so that every person who has a foot of ground can enjoy a grand treat for almost nothing.

If you want honest goods send 10cts. to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for Floral Guide; it costs nothing, as the 10 cents may be deducted from first order.

CATARRH TWENTY YEARS.

This is what Dr. Hartman's free course of treatment did for me: I was sick for eighteen or twenty years and did not know what was the matter with me. I expectorated a gray, sticky mucous from the throat. Every time I took cold my throat got sore, and I would have fever. I had catarrh in my head and it began to affect my eyes. My nose was stopped up, and every morning I had coughing spells. I consulted several physicians, one of whom said he would cure in six months. I kept on doctoring until I had spent $300, and was not any better, but kept gradually growing worse until I was confined to the bed. I got some Pe-ru-na and it cured the catarrh in my head and my eyes are better. I don't have any more dizzy spells, my head feels clear, I can breathe through my nose, and my throat is cured. My voice is clear. My appetite is good and I sleep well. When I began taking Pe-ru-na I weighed only 121 pounds, but now I weigh 135. I wish I could tell everyone about Pe-ru-na, so that thousands more would be cured.

RECTAL DISEASES.

Piles, Fistula and Inflammatory Conditions of the Rectum.

These troubles so annoying and dangerous to health are among the commonest with which humanity is afflicted. We are therefore pleased to announce that modern research in medical science has at last produced a certain cure for them, and as usual with all great and meritorious inventions, is simple, and the only wonder is that such a remedy was not discovered and used years before. The remedy we refer to is known as the Pyramid Pile Cure. It is not an ointment nor a salve, liquid nor internal remedy, but is applied directly to the seat of the disease and produces a cure in a surprisingly short space of time. For itching piles a few applications produces a complete cure, while for bleeding, protruding and other forms of rectal diseases its use will result in a permanent cure even in cases where an operation has failed. The Pyramid Pile Cure is painless to use and relieves all pain at once. All druggists keep it or will get it for you. It is prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Albion, Mich., who will send you full particulars concerning the cause and cure of piles, also testimonials from every section of the country, or if your druggist has the remedy on hand you will find the treatise on Piles and testimonials in each package of the remedy. A trial will convince you that the Pyramid Pile cure is a specific for every form of rectal disease, and it is guaranteed to contain no mineral poisons nor injurious ingredients so often resorted to in treating piles.

Best remedy for sprains and pains. Mr. J. M. Spring, Bennings, D. C., writes: "I have been using Salvation Oil and have obtained great relief. Among so many remedies tried, Salvation Oil is the best for sprains and pains in the back." It kills pain.

THE MONOGRAPH.

For One Dollar and Your Opinion on the Subject.

What is the best monetary system for the United States? That is the greatest problem confronting the American people. It is the intention of the publishers that "The Monograph" shall contain the best thought of the nation on this question. The recognized leaders in all political parties have been called upon to contribute plans for their ideal Monetary System. But not content with this, we are determined to embody in the same volume the opinions of thousands of the Great Common People, and to that end we will allow two dollars on the price of the book for your solution to this problem, expressed in not more than 800 words. The Monograph, the best modern work on Monetary Systems, will be sent to any address on receipt of $3.00. It is a book that will interest and instruct, and is destined to become a giant factor in shaping the future monetary system of the nation.

Rev. E. Mudge's son Clifford visited his parents for a few days. He returned to his home in Chicago Wednesday.

The annual donation given for the benefit of our pastor last Thursday evening was a success in every respect. The receipts were $129.

There was a lady's glove found on the sidewalk the morning after the donation. The owner may have the same by calling at the drug store.

The meetings held at the Christian church for the past four or five weeks have proven very beneficial. They have secured nearly 90 new converts. We hope still more may follow.

Revival at Britton.

A remarkable work of grace has been in progress at the Christian Union church for some weeks past. The serial meetings commenced with the week of prayer and closed on Sunday night last. From the beginning of the series there was evident a spirit of work in the church. The meetings were under sole charge of the pastor until the closing day of January. Up to that date about twelve persons gave themselves to the Christian life. On Jan. 31st Rev. C. S. Bullock, of Saline, came to the assistance of the pastor and worked with great zeal and efficiency until the close. He is a young man of 27 years, but has remarkable power as an evangelist. From the day of his coming the meetings took on new interest. Congregations were uniformly large, the church has been greatly awakened, and about ninety persons have turned to the Lord. The services of last Sunday were remarkable. A large congregation in the morning, a mens' meeting of nearly 200 in the afternoon, and a packed house at night. A deep spirit pervaded the entire congregation at night, and a number resolved to live for Christ. In all about 90 persons have consecrated themselves to the Lord.

In this connection permit me to say that on Wednesday, Feb. 15th, a donation was held at the church parlors for the benefit of the undersigned. The attendance was large and the receipts were $129.00. Thanks for the liberal expression. E. MUDGE.

Table Talk.

Having said the best things possible in months past, what is there to add on the appearance of the February issue of "Table Talk," (Philadelphia)? We must repeat that every housekeeper will find something helpful in it, as it caters in its menus, recipes and hints on all household topics to all tastes, and in the pages devoted to the "Housekeeper's Inquiries" can be seen how this is appreciated, as the letters come from all parts of the country, asking help from this department, which is now edited by Helen Louise Johnson, Director of the National Cooking School at Washington, D. C. Upon application to the Philadelphia office, a sample copy will be sent you, free.

Vick's Floral Guide, 1894.

It contains descriptions that describe, not mislead: illustrations that instruct, not exaggerate. This year it comes to us in a suit of gold. Printed in eight different colors besides black. Colored plates of Chrysanthemums, Poppies and Vegetables. On the front cover is a very exquisite bunch of Vick's New White Branching Aster and on the back is the New Double Anemone; 112 pages filled with many new novelties of value as well as all the old leading varieties of flowers and vegetables.

We advise our friends who intend doing anything in the garden this year to consult Vick before starting operations. Send 10 cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for Vick's Guide. It costs nothing, as you can deduct the 10 cents from the first order. It certainly will pay you.

If a vain woman could she would make herself so beautiful that it would kill men to look at her.

We like to sell an article which can be sure will give satisfaction to our customers: that is the reason we recommend Brant's Balsam. Can always find it at our store. 25 and 50 cent bottles at J. J. Orr's, Tecumseh.

When a friend turns out not to be a trump, then is the time to discard.

ECONOMY AND STRENGTH.

Valuable vegetable remedies are used in the preparation of Hood's Sarsaparilla in such a peculiar manner as to retain the full medicinal value of every ingredient. Thus Hood's Sarsaparilla combines economy and strength and is the only remedy of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true. Be sure to get Hood's.

OUR WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIOS.

Three numbers of our Art Portfolios have now been issued and those taking them are fully satisfied with their bargain. People should bear this fact in mind: That they are receiving the official photographs of the fair, the views taken by the official artist, and authorized by the officers of the local board, and that each view is accompanied by an elaborate description, thus giving not only illustrations, but a history of the Exposition as well.

This magnificent gallery consists of copyrighted photographs, six by eight inches, of the World's Columbian Exposition, the use of which is authorized by the official management, in one oblong volume. The text matter covers the entire page opposite each photograph and expands into an amount of reading matter that surpasses anything of its kind ever before produced.

In "Shepp's World's Fair Photographed," the interior views of buildings, pavilions and exhibits are distinct, definite and beautiful—defying competition. Nearly every country on the Globe has paid tribute to the World's Columbian Exposition. Woman has vied with man in the splendid display made. Anchored within the walls of the "White City" lay a wealth of artistic and industrial treasure, the purchase of which would bankrupt the richest nation on earth.

From snowy Alaska to Cape Horn, from the Isles of the engirdling oceans, from the nations of Europe and Asia, and even from Africa and Australia, glorious treasures have poured in in one generous avalanche. Whatever human intelligence could conceive, or human skill execute, was to be found in these treasure palaces of the world.

Huge trains drawn by palpitating engines, snorting in steam over thousands of miles, bore these inexhaustible riches to Chicago, for many months. We bring them to you in our wonderful book, which will remain not only a souvenir, but a vivid panorama of the most marvelous display of ancient or modern times.

The choicest photographs of the principal exhibits in every case have been selected for this great work.

The third part contains the following views:

1. Looking west-southwest from roof of Liberal Arts building.
2. Looking west from same roof.
3. Looking northwest from same roof.
4. Looking north from same roof.
5. Search light from same roof.
6. Fireworks No. 1.
7. Fireworks No. 2.
8. General interior view of Liberal Arts Building.

Part four, just received, contains these interior views, all in the Liberal Arts building:

In United States Section—
1. Woolen Goods.
2. Fire-Arms.
3. Silverware.
4. Watches.
5. Umbrellas and Parasols.

In Austrian Section—
6. Pavilion, exterior.
7. General Interior.
8. Bohemian Glass.

The New York World.

The most valuable paper that comes to this office is the New York World. Fearless and Independent, working at all times for the best interests of the people, and never for the selfish ends of any ring or individual, supporting the right and condemning the wrong wherever found, it becomes a great power for good throughout the land. Its policy is defined by its well-known motto: "Equal Rights to All, Special Favors to None." The reputation of The Weekly World as an incomparable newspaper is fully established. It reaches for the very best and fullest news of the entire country, and gets it. The celebrated "Tariff Mule" articles are again running in their weekly and are creating widespread attention. Its miscellaneous pages are replete with articles of valuable and interesting information to every one. It is a large 12-page, 8-column paper for only $1.00 a year. We have succeeded in making special arrangements by which we can furnish The HERALD and The Weekly World one year both for only $2.00.

Facts People Do Not Know.

Cooler, pleasanter summers, with days one hour shorter. Warmer pleasanter winters, with days one hour longer. The entire year for comfortable, out door work. Purer air, purer, softer water, better health, and longer life for yourself and family.

Wild lands $3 an acre. Improved farms $10 to $15 an acre within one mile of Railroad stations. Two or three crops every year from the same land.

You can find all of these in Eastern Mississippi and in Southern Alabama along the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. We are anxious to prove these facts. Come and see. Half fare excursions every two weeks.

Full particulars sent by E. E. Posey, G. P. A. M. & O. R. R., Mobile, Ala., or F. W. Greene, Gen. Agt. M. & O. R. R., 108 N. Broadway, St. Louis, Mo.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 22, 1894.

The weather prophets at present hold different opinions as to whether the ground-hog has returned to his hole or not.

Senator Allen, of Mississippi, a radical tariff reformer, has been so far converted as to declare that the country at present needs more tariff on snow.

John D. Rockefeller's annual income is estimated at $7,611,200. Is there any wrong, either legally, morally or politically, in asking him to pay Uncle Sam the small stipend of two per cent. on that income?

Buffalo is the only city in this country that has furnished two presidents—Fillmore and Cleveland. When the Niagara Falls water power is fully developed Buffalo is destined to become a bigger town yet.

The grand jury at Lansing is after big game now, and as the investigation proceeds, it looks as though they would succeed in their efforts. "Let no guilty man escape" is the motto that should be acted upon in this case.

For the past twenty years, wheat and silver have kept almost on a par in price. Silver took another tumble last week, and wheat went down another notch with it. In the meantime the trusts are raising heaven and earth to keep up the tariff taxes.

The rejection of Judge Peckham's nomination for Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court is an outrage on political decency. When the Senate turns down an unobjectionable candidate for such an important office simply to gratify the spite of one man, senatorial courtesy is sinking to a pretty low level.

This is the way the St. Louis Republic puts it: Senator Voorhees is addressing a great many questions to all classes of people as to their views on the tariff question. Everybody expressed themselves a year ago last November. Does Senator Voorhees think they are tired of their cake before they have eaten it?

A few minor changes in the Wilson bill might do no harm. Raising the tax on whiskey from $1.00 to $1.20 a gallon and placing a tax on beer would be excellent changes. But any attempt to lift customs duties or to curtail the free list should be relentlessly voted down. There must be no "tinkering" with the Wilson bill on these points.

The Springfield Republican says: The average newspaper reader must be about as clear in his notions concerning who is ahead in the Brazilian quarrel as the old lady was about the way to test eggs for goodness. "All you have to do," said she, "is to put the egg in the water, and if it is good it will either sink or swim—I forget which."

This is the way the Courier-Journal puts it: "Conservatives" is the new name for protectionists who have obtained seats in the United States Senate on the false pretense of being Democrats and who want to amend the Wilson Bill to conform to their ideas. A man whose ideas are more conservative than the Wilson Bill's provisions must be covered with moss.

The inheritance tax supplies sufficient income to pay all the expenses of the state of New York (which is out of debt,) and Governor Flower says that the regular state tax levy can be abolished. We believe that many other states could defray their expenses from the same source of revenue, and there is no simpler, more effective and less onerous system of taxing personal property.

There is much to be said in favor of a small tax on sugar—say one cent a pound. It is almost wholly a revenue tax, and it would not be oppressive. One cent a pound would yield thirty millions of revenue. If needed to raise necessary revenue, there would be no serious objection to the tax, but if this scheme is put forward as a substitute for an income tax, it should be buried as quickly as possible.

The fight for an income tax is emphatically a struggle of the masses against the privileged classes, and the people are as thoroughly in earnest in support of it as they are for tariff reform or for any other mode of release from industrial servitude. It would not be wise for the Senate to attempt to deny their demand. The "rich men's club" is not in good odor now, and it will not take much more to make the demand for its abolition emphatic and universal.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

SILVER'S CAUSE.

It Is Great and Will Prove Invincible—The Main Issue.

One objection to the proposition to amend the tariff bill by placing a prohibitive duty on foreign silver and opening our mints to the free coinage of silver, remarks the Denver News, is that the exclusion of foreign silver for the benefit of the American product, could it be effected, would end in disaster to the silver cause. It would practically verify the fraudulent charge of our enemies that the silver cause is a local interest, seeking to be bolstered up by class legislation for the purpose of giving fictitious value to the product of "silver barons," at the expense of the producers of other commodities. It would reduce the silver interest to a foundation of sand and result in alienating the support without which it would soon cease to be a factor in public affairs.

The silver cause is great and will prove to be invincible, because of the indispensable and historic relation of silver to the basic money of the world. The production of silver, and the special benefits accruing to those concerned directly or indirectly in that industry, are merely incidents to the main issue and the fact cannot be too forcibly emphasized. While there is no reason for protecting any American industry, under the plea of favoring American labor, that would not apply to silver production—involving as it does the livelihood of large numbers and immense pecuniary interests—still it would be a fatal mistake to rest the cause of bimetallism upon any basis so contracted.

Large and direct as is the interest of the mining states in the restoration of silver to its rightful position as primary money, the stake involved to the silver section is significant when compared with its relation to the other industries of the country and the sixty-odd millions of working people and their families who are dependent upon the returns from them. The dethronement of silver as money of redemption has given the world's usurers the control of its finances and the mastery of the realm of industry. It has multiplied their possessions by doubling the obligations of their debtors—the consequence of a contracted currency and the depreciated value of the products of labor. A dollar now costs in labor twice what it did before demonetization or would if silver were restored, while it will purchase for the usurer twice as much of the necessities or comforts of life as it would before the ruinous era of contraction and falling prices.

The strength of the silver question lies in the fact that it is a vital issue between the millions and the few—between the producers of Christendom and an international conspiracy of money brokers. Silver as well as gold, with the utmost limit of production, is necessary to furnish a sufficient basis for the world's money supply. The cause of its restoration is inseparably linked with the demand for a circulating medium commensurate with the fullest business life and development and with the welfare of the labor which creates wealth. The fruition of that demand will restore the values of property and of the fruits of labor to a normal standing and terminate the infamous process by which both are now being confiscated to a rapacious moneyed class under color of law.

WHY GOLD?

Is It Necessary to Stipulate Gold Payment of Bonds When One Government Dollar Is as Good as Another?

The circular issued by Secretary Carlisle calling for proposals for five per cent. bonds payable after ten years requires the bids to be made with the distinct stipulation that payment is to be made in gold coin of the United States. It is this apparent discrimination in favor of gold coin as against all other kinds of authorized currency which has much as anything else has aroused the indignation of the opponents of a bond issue, particularly the extreme advocates of free silver coinage. The issue of bonds in exchange for gold, it is claimed will create an artificial demand for gold and must in a corresponding degree tend to depress the commercial status of silver. Confining the call for bond proposals to offers of gold only is due, however, to the fact that the authority is to be exercised under a law which was enacted to meet an altogether different problem than that which now confronts the treasury. The law of 1875 was part and parcel with the resumption policy and was designed to bring the outstanding greenbacks up to par. To accomplish this object the law provided for the accumulation of a gold reserve of $100,000,000 by means of the sale of bonds in the discretion of the secretary. National bank notes and greenbacks being equally depreciated at that time, it was manifest that gold bond purchases alone would meet the requirements of the emergency.

But at the present day, when every dollar issued by the United States government is equal in value to every other dollar, it would be difficult to see the necessity for exacting gold payments were the operation to be conducted under a specially enacted law. We have seen how easy it is for parties wishing to export gold to secure that gold from the United States treasury, which dare not refuse to pay out gold in exchange for greenbacks for fear the latter might be thereby discredited. It will be equally easy for parties wishing to purchase the new bonds to secure gold coin by the same method, so that to the extent that the gold might be drawn from the treasury to be returned to it in payment for bonds the gold reserve would be in no way increased. While all this is possible it is not at all necessary, nor even probable, because the eastern banks have sufficient gold in their vaults to advance all that may be required to take the proposed $50,000,000 bond issue off the secretary's hands. If, moreover, the secretary intends to use the proceeds to defray the current expenditures of the government it becomes quite immaterial whether the bonds are sold for gold or for other currency, so long as all the component parts of our currency are of equal value. To the ordinary government employe or contractor it makes absolutely no difference whether his warrant is cashed with gold, silver or paper.

It is then only the peculiarity of the law to which the secretary of the treasury has been compelled to resort that requires him to confine the proposals for bonds to those who have gold to offer for them. After the gold has been secured by the government there will be no assurance that it will remain in the treasury for any considerable length of time. Should further bond issues be authorized by a new law this point will deserve the careful consideration of congress.—Omaha Bee.

THE VINDICATION OF SILVER.

The Evidence Daily Accumulating Showing the Effect of Debasing the White Metal.

American securities have not suffered alone from the prevailing business depression. English securities have shared the same misfortunes that befell stocks in this country. The London Bankers' Magazine has an interesting article showing the comparative value of a number of representative stocks dealt in on the London exchange during a period ranging from the time of the Baring panic up to the present time. It would be interesting to have the figures previous to the Baring panic, but they are not given.

Three hundred and thirty-four securities are represented, of a par value of £2,747,038,000. The aggregate value of these securities in November, 1891, after the Baring failure, was £2,777,000,000. On January 1, 1893, their aggregate value was £2,837,000,000. At the close of the present year the figures had dropped to £2,753,000,000, a decline of 2½ per cent.

Thus, securities on the London stock exchange have depreciated something like £84,000,000 or $420,000,000 during the past year. This vast amount represents a greater depreciation than that claimed for the stocks on the New York exchange during the same period of time. It shows, too, that the depreciation has not been confined to American stocks. The causes given by the Bankers' Magazine are in order of time, first, the Australian crisis and dearer money caused depression; second, fall in American securities; third, general fall, trusts in difficulties.

It will be remembered that in this country such advocates of the single gold standard as the New York Herald asserted that the fall in values on the New York stock exchange was due wholly to the operations of the Sherman law, and they declared that repeal was necessary in order to save the country. But in London there was a still greater depreciation in values. Certainly the effect there was not due to the operation of the Sherman law. What, then, was the cause of the depreciation in values? The Bankers' Magazine says this: "To some extent the appreciation of gold—in other words, the depreciation of products as compared with gold—has been answerable for this decline in the securities of all but the richest governments and corporations; witness the impoverishment of Greece, of western America, even British India, and other indebted countries which depend on sales of produce for the means to pay twenty shillings in the pound."

Is not that a confession to come from the hot bed of the single gold standard growth? The Bankers' Magazine thinks that the increased share of labor in the earnings of capital has had something to do with the process of depreciation, and that a third cause was distrust of speculative securities.

Silver is daily being vindicated against the monstrous charges that were preferred against it by cunning enemies during the panic days of last year.—Denver Times.

A Relief Suggestion.

Those who can afford to spend money freely may very materially aid in relieving the existing distress by not economizing in their expenditures. The more money in circulation the better it will be for all classes of the community. The man who gives a big dinner or a ball, who refurnishes his house or builds a big addition to it, is a benefactor. He helps to give life to trade, and, dispel the gloom of depression. They who say that when the people are suffering for the necessities of life the rich should curb their extravagances have got hold of the wrong theory. Let the rich drive ahead. The more money they spend the better. They cannot make it fly too fast.—N. Y. Recorder.

Oppressing the Debtor.

It is not necessary to read authorities to show that the increase in the price of gold which would follow from the elimination of silver as a money metal would increase the burdens of indebtedness immensely all over the world, and would put down the price of products, thereby taking away from the debtor the ability to pay with the same amount of property a debt which he had contracted under a different ratio and under a different standard. Even the Herschell committee in justifying the closing of the mints in India to the private coinage of silver, makes a statement admitting it.—Senator Vest.

Caused By Legislation.

In the Brussels conference Mr. Brassevain, the delegate from the Netherlands said: "In my opinion, the chief cause of the fall in the gold price of silver has been the enormous decrease in the monetary use of silver during the last twenty years in consequence of the legislative measures which date from the new monetary law enacted by Germany.

What Is Demanded.

The new magna charta now demanded by the people of the United States is the right of Americans to have coined in American mints American silver extracted by Americans from American mines without asking permission of Great Britain.—Denver News.

The Difference.

A large number of the people of the country are crying for bread, while a small party in Wall street cries for gold. Which should be heeded?

THE BIRDS OF NORTH AMERICA.

In connection with the foregoing report of our Ornithological Chapter, it is only right to call the attention of all lovers of birds to the magnificent work now being issued by the Natural Science Association of America, and entitled "The Birds of North America." Edition limited to 1,000. It is emphatically an original work, original in design and execution, and whether in letter press, illustrations or price, it is unapproached by anything of the kind in existance. It is recommended by the highest scientific, ecclesiastic and educational authority as being the most attractive, meritorious, pure and ennobling exposition of our ornithology yet given to the public. Dr. Elliott Coues, author of "Birds of the North-West," says: "It is a really notable work." Prof. C. J. Maynard, author of the "Birds of Eastern North America," says: "It contains the best pictures of the species which I have ever seen." Thos. G. Gentry, author of "Life Histories of Birds," and "Nests and Eggs of Birds of the United States," says: "It is the cheapest and best publication on ornithology in this country. The drawings are of a very high order, and rivals in beauty of design and finish the more costly works published abroad or in this country. It should be found in our homes and in libraries generally." And, according to Dr. Theodore Gill, a member of the National Academy of Sciences, "It is not only a meritorious volume, but is altogether so handsome as to make it a very appropriate presentation book or ornament for the family table." It is an imperial quarto volume of engraved figures of all our species, artistically reproduced, true in all hues of color to their natural plumage and botanical surroundings. It also includes a copious text description of their habits and characteristics, and embracing in general the observations made by the most eminent writers on ornithology, and a systematic table, arranged according to the classification adopted by the American Ornithologists' Union, includes all the additions and corrections of our North American species which have been made to date, with an index to page, plate and figure of each species according to the A. O. U. number. It is illustrated with one hundred and nineteen full page colored plates, each representing from one to thirty or more species. It is the finest book on American birds issued since Audubon, and is pronounced by some authorities surperior to that now rare and costly work. It is issued in half and full bindings, Russia, seal, or morocco, at the net price of $40 and $45 respectively; but in response to a special letter, the association authorized me to say that a substantial discount will be made to such of our A. A. members and others as are working naturalists. We commend this work especially to members of the Wilson Ornithological Chapter. It is also a very useful and appropriate addition to the home and reference library, and for presentation purposes generally. Address regarding it, the Natural Science Association, 114 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Sample of plates and text can be had by sending twenty-five cents in postage stamps.

A DILEMMA.

My ideal girl has golden hair,
A downcast glance, a modest air,
Her eyes are blue and sweet and shy;
She knows no guile nor coquetry.

Her maiden heart, her soul serene,
In all her words and looks are seen.
The more I think of her, the more
All her perfections I'd adore

If for one hour I could forget
The witch who has me in her net,
Whose dusky hair, whose saucy smile
And gay caprice my heart beguile!

She has each fault which I abhor,
She's not the girl I'm looking for.
Alas! the more I disapprove—
The more I frown, the more I love!

HER LOVE LETTERS.

Jeanie Campbell came back from the tailor's shop where she worked and found a company of boys and girls congregated round the doorstep of the tall tenement house in which she rented one small back room. They were hooting and jeering at a man seated in his shirt sleeves on the doorstep placidly smoking a huge German porcelain pipe. The man did not seem in the least disturbed at their jeers and shrieks, but smoked on with his eyes fixed upon the one strip of sunset sky visible above the grimy roofs.

Jeanie pushed her way in.

"What's the matter?"

"Yah, Dutchy! I'n't 'e a bloomin soft? Give a boy a shillin to go and fetch 'm somethin to eat and is w'itin 'ere for 'm! I'n't 'e a style? Wonder 'ow long he'll w'ite!"

"Who is he?"

"A blooming Dutchy! 'E carn't speak no English, 'e carn't—'as to mike signs—and nobody 'ere carn't speak nothink else. I'n't 'e a softy?"

The girl paused and looked at the man. There was something in his patient attitude that aroused her pity. Some softer remembrance of the days before she came to this great, wicked London came over her. The man's eyes, so blue, clear and bright, and the healthy tinge of his wholesome face smote upon her with a pang of recollection of the honest Scottish faces she had left with contempt for their content when she had started forth to see life in London.

She went up to the man and signed to him to follow her indoors. She tried to make him understand that he had been robbed. The soft, gentle tones that answered her were quite unintelligible. He smiled, shrugged his shoulders, spread his hands and looked at her with that calm trustfulness one sees in dogs and children.

She smiled, nodded, pointed up the stairs and then ran out of the house. She returned with a loaf of bread and a half pound of sausages for him and roll for herself. She would make that do. He was a stranger, alone and friendless.

She put the things in his hand, pointing down the street as if to indicate that she had brought the things from the boy. He seemed to understand, took her hand and raised it to his lips. The action was so simple, so grateful that she felt ashamed and ran up the stairs to her own room.

Her comfortless breakfast of a dry roll the next morning made her a little regretful of her charity the night before. "He must shift for himself, as I have had to do," the thought, and she went out to her day's work.

When she returned in the evening, she found him standing outside his door. He bowed and smiled, opened his door and showed his various purchases on his table. He had evidently found his way round to shops. She went up the stairs, feeling the least little bit disappointed that he did not require her help any more. He seemed different from the jaded, vulgar men and women she came in contact with in her city life. The air of the fields seemed to cling to him still. She thought as she toiled up the weary stairs how sweet the country must be looking now. Was the sun shining on the hills at home and making the waters of the loch sparkle, the bonny hills that she would never see again? Friends were dead, and to a tailoress at 12 shillings a week it was indeed a far cry to Lock Awe.

Something was on her table, a little sketch of a sweep of wide hills, with fir forests clinging to their sides, a little cluster of houses with wide overhanging roofs and shutters to the windows. A figure was standing in the doorway of one of the houses.

"That is his house," said Jeanie to herself. "What a funny thing to do, to give me a picture of it! I wish I could send him back one of Loch Awe and our house up on the braes."

The next day was Sunday. She usually passed the morning in bed, tired out with her week's work. When she came down about the middle of the day, she met him coming in, evidently in his Sunday best. Could he have been to church? Well, it was clear he had not learned the manners of Eureka court yet.

She tried to express her thanks by looks and smiles. He seemed to understand and laughed, and then she felt with a quick touch of dismay that he glanced in surprise at her untidy dress and tousled hair. Jeanie did not "tidy" herself until afternoons; then in an enormous hat and feathers and much becurled head she perambulated the adjacent streets in company with girls of her acquaintance, not yet vicious, only ignorant, vain and craving for a little of that happiness which seems to all girls their birthright.

That same hair was in papers now—she blushed as she recalled the fact—her hands were grimy, her face unwashed. His eyes noted it.

They did not meet again during the week, but next Sunday morning found Jeanie with her hair out of papers and her hands washed. She was loitering at the street corner when he came back in his spruce clothes. She gave him a pert nod. She felt annoyed with him for some unknown reason and that evening made herself as resplendent as possible in her cheap, gaudy finery.

"He shall see that I can be smart, too," she thought, and tossed her head as he appeared.

He stopped, and drawing a notebook from his pocket rapidly sketched a church front upon it. She shook her head. He looked puzzled. Then his quick fingers drew the outside of one of the commonest type of meeting house. She shook her head again and moved off. Somehow she did not like to show him how she spent her Sunday evenings.

The weather became very hot. Jeanie drooped more and more in the unhealthy workroom and stuffy streets. He seemed to notice it, for on one Saturday night she found a drawing of trees and a path and figures walking about, and underneath the figures 2:30. Could he be asking her to go for a walk? She waited in to see.

At 2:30 a knock came at her door. There he was, with his square, ugly, good natured face smiling at her. She felt awkward going down the stairs with him. What could they do during a whole walk if neither could speak to the other?

But that walk did not take place. The smart tie around her neck had been the price of her dinner. She turned faint and reeled, then sat down on the stairs and burst into tears.

She hardly knew if she was vexed or pleased to find herself picked up like a baby and carried up to her own room and laid upon her bed. She sat up and drank some water, while he stood looking perplexedly at her, and she blushed that he should see her untidy, disorderly room.

He went out. In a few minutes she heard her door open and something pushed along the floor. It was a little jug of hot coffee and milk and a plate of German rolls.

The next day another picture was left. It represented a large workshop, with men sitting at tables, all busily engaged over some mechanical work. Underneath was written the figures 30 shillings.

With unskillful fingers she drew an outline of a coat and waistcoat and a needle and thread and posted it at his door as she went out, but she had to come back again, she was so ill, and all day she lay there alone waiting for what was the only friendly signal in the world to her—the scrap of paper of the foreign artist.

She heard it pushed under the door at last and feebly rose and groped for it. Her head was throbbing so that she could scarcely see that it contained a whole line of portraits—an elderly man and woman and younger faces, among which was his own, his family doubtless.

She made a rough outline of her hat, with a sharp oval for a face underneath. She was too ill to get it down to him. She pushed it out and trusted that he would fetch it. She heard him in the morning come up again, and then she heard no more, for the fever seized upon her, and when next she woke to consciousness she was lying on a hospital bed. For days she was too weak to speak or think, but when she was able one of the nurses asked her if she would like to see some papers which had been brought to the hospital for her, and the nurse spread them out before her.

The first was of a man following a stretcher through the streets, then the same man sitting alone in a solitary room with his head bowed upon his hand and weeping; the next, the same man at a door, evidently asking questions of a porter within; the next, the man was beside a bed on which lay a deathlike figure.

"Has he been to see me?"

"Yes; it was when we thought you were dying. he came every day, but we could not tell him anything. No one could speak his language, but at last we found it was Wendish, from the borders of Saxony and Bohemia, and one of the doctors here got him a book in it by which he could study English. You will see by the sketches."

The next one represented the man with the book in his hand.

The next showed the man in a train, and then on board a steamer, and then in another train.

Jeanie dropped the papers.

"He is gone!" she said, with a little weak cry. "Oh, why have I got any better?"

"There is another picture," said the nurse, and she unrolled it for the trembling girl.

The man had arrived at the little village Jeanie remembered in the first sketch; then the interior of a house was shown; a coffin lay in the middle of the room; an old woman, two girls and three men knelt around it.

"His father is dead," said Jeanie. And she turned to the next. The man was at the hospital door.

"Oh, he is coming back!" she cried.

"See, this is the last," said the nurse, and as she held it up she laughed. It was the man on one knee before a girl—Jeanie in her outrageous hat—but there was in a little sketch up in the right hand corner, as if it was yet in the distance, the same little village with the pine forests around, the two figures—the man and Jeanie—walking arm in arm up the village street. The nurse held her sides for laughing.

"It's the funniest thing I ever saw in my life!" she said.

Jeanie gathered her papers together with some dignity.

"I don't call it funny," she said. "I—think it was just the nicest thing that ever was done to any girl."

"My loofe!" said a voice at her side. And there was the man. Jeanie gave a little cry.

"My loofe!" said the man again. "It is my first English to you, and it will be my last. My loofe!" And Jeanie, with all the dreams of her girlhood back upon her, put her arms round his neck, and sobbing said, "And I don't even know your name, but I don't care for anything in the world but you."—New York Tribune.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

An Interesting Interview with Regent Cocker About his Visit to the Eastern Colleges.

A recent issue of the Times gives the following interview with Regent Cocker which will be interesting reading to all who take an interest in Michigan's great University.

Hon W. J. Cocker gave an interesting talk to a Times reporter this morning, concerning the trip through the east recently taken by himself, Regent Levi L. Barbour, of Detroit, and Professors Knowlton and Mechem, of the law faculty of Michigan university.

"The primary object of the trip," said Prof. Cocker, "was to inspect the law schools of the prominent eastern universities, for the purpose of making comparisons; and an additional desire on the part of the regents, to examine into the financial methods employed and observe the manner in which the business of the eastern institutions is conducted. We were also interested in noting the gymnasium equipments of the various colleges, as it is contemplated to soon improve the gymnasium facilities of Michigan university.

"Speaking of gymnastics," went on Prof. Cocker, "I was somewhat surprised to learn that at Cornell college every student on entering is obliged to undergo a year's physical training in the gymnasium. Almost before the other preliminaries are arranged he is subjected to a physical examination, his weakest points are discovered, and a course of training best calculated to strengthen the less developed parts, organs or members is prescribed. In Harvard and Yale, however, physical training is optional with the student.

"In the order named we visited Cornell university, Columbia college, Chase law school and the University of New York in New York city. From there we went to New Haven and through Yale college; then to Boston, where Harvard and the Boston law school were inspected.

"At all of these celebrated institutions the committee was courteously received, and personal interviews were held with President Schuman of Cornell; President Dwight, of Yale, and President Elliott, of Harvard. The views and ideas obtained from these eminent educators were necessarily edifying and of high value.

"But what impressed me more particularly during the tour," said Prof. Cocker, "was a realization of the success with which the university of Michigan, with its income of $362,000, competes with other institutions enjoying incomes of much greater magnitude. For instance, Cornell has an income of $500,000; Columbia college, $700,000; Yale between $800,000 and 900,000; and Harvard over $1,000,000.

"Considering that Michigan university has a larger enrollment than any of these, excepting Harvard, the fact is patent that a dollar has been made to go farther in our university than in any other institution in the country.

"The enrollment of Michigan university is at present about 2,700, while that of Harvard is in the neighborhood of 3,000.

"The observations of the committee during the trip imbued its members with a gratifying sense that Michigan university was fully abreast of the eastern institutions, while the expressions of the gentlemen whom we had the pleasure of meeting, assured us of the kindly and esteemed position which Michigan university holds among the higher colleges of the country.

"One thing which attracted my notice," continued the professor, "is the willingness with which wealthy eastern persons contribute towards the support of their educational institutions. Here in Michigan, people who are amply able to extend assistance of this nature go too much on the principle that the state is fully able to support the university.

"Admitting this, and granting that the state has been very liberal in its appropriations, there is still opportunity for those who might be so inclined to promote and advance the facilities of our state university.

"The tuition fees at Michigan university are much lower than those exacted in eastern colleges, and but little financial support is derived from this source. Here the annual fees are only from $20 to $35, in addition to a matriculation fee, paid but once, of $10 for students residing in the state, and one of $25 for students living outside the state. In the colleges above mentioned they range from 100 to $150 per annum."

Referring to the impressions received on his trip, Prof. Cocker said he was vividly reminded of the wonderful advantages afforded the young men and women of this country for education in branches of learning and varied arts.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The County S. S. Convention held last week at Raisin Center church, was a very interesting and profitable occasion. All sections of the county were represented, Adrian and Tecumseh with large delegations.

A long list of very interesting papers were read on various topics pertaining to Sunday schools, among the most prominent being one by Dr. L. G. North, Tecumseh; S. Milo Dole, Adrian. Mrs. C. D. West, Fairfield; and Mrs. E. M. Whitmore, Adrian.

President—C. A. Slayton, Tecumseh.
Vice Pres.—James Schermerhorn, Hudson.
Secretary—C. T. West, Fairfield.
Treasurer—Rev. George Humphrey, Palmyra.

OBITUARY.

Samuel Bryan, who died at his home just west of this village Feb. 12th, 1894, was born in Connecticut Aug. 31st, 1815. In 1830 Michigan became his home, and since that time he has lived in the vicinity of Tecumseh. Possessed of a strong constitution and wonderful energy he cheerfully endured the labors and hardships of pioneer life and has done his full share to make the then wilderness the fertile fields and pleasant homes we now enjoy. In 1844 he married Laura Smith, daughter of Moses Smith, whose farm he afterward purchased and on which he has lived most of the time for more than forty years and where he died. His wife died in 1856 leaving five small children. These were dark days, and there were times when courage almost failed, but he lived to see his children grown to manhood and womanhood and filling useful positions in life. Three sons and one daughter survive him; one daughter passed on before in 1891. In 1858 he was married to Miss Maria Scout, who has shared his labors and trials as well as joys for nearly thirty-six years, and who, with his children, were permitted to minister to him in his last illness. As he was tenderly carried to and laid in his last resting place by his sons and grandsons and surrounded by a large circle of friends and neighbors, the universal testimony was, a grand man is gone.

James Shepard Allen was born in Franklin, Mich., May 6th, 1839. He was the youngest child in a family of four—two brothers and a sister, all of whom survive him. In June, 1872, he was married to Elvira L. Bennett, of Litchfield, and settled on a small farm near to his parents, where he resided up to the date of his death. Four children were born to them, Anna, who is now Mrs. Elmer Skeese; Inez, Wilfred and a sweet babe who passed away in infancy. In 1889 his beloved wife died of consumption after a lingering illness. The family were not broken up by this sad event, and only since the death of the father has the home nest been deserted. From early youth the deceased has been a great sufferer from asthma, and since his wife's death his health has been failing. He died Feb. 4th, 1894, gently and peacefully, without a struggle or apparent pain. A short time before his death he was in imagination or in spirit with his departed wife, conversing with her, and saying, "Oh, is it not lovely, Vie?" the wife whom he had mourned so deeply. His aged mother, Anna Allen, who at ninety-four is in full possession of all her faculties, also survives him. The funeral services were held in the M. E. church at Tipton, Feb. 7th, Rev. Pierce officiating. Friend and comrade of my youth, farewell.

Died, at the home of his father, J. W. Baker, on Sunday morning at 9 o'clock, Mr. Clarence H. Baker, in the 29th year of his age. He leaves a wife and little girl to mourn his departure, together with the parents, a brother and a sister. His disease was consumption. He came home from Kansas a little over a year since, where he had resided since 1886, thinking change of climate would secure to him his health, but the dreadful disease had seated itself too deeply, and a constant and rapid decline was manifest to all. Not a murmur escaped his lips, but a constant and steadfast trust in God, a faith in His promises, at last yielding himself and his young wife and little daughter to God's care, he fell asleep.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep."

His funeral was attended by a large number of friends and neighbors, who deeply sympathize with the afflicted ones. The pastor was assisted by Rev. Cansfield, of the M. E. church of Ridgeway, and the body was followed to the Ridgeway cemetery by many sympathizing friends, and laid away with due solemnity in a beautiful casket, and laid in a box lined with white cotton, as was also the grave, and nothing was to be seen of the damp, cold earth, to await the Resurrection Morning.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. John W. Baker and family wish hereby to express their thanks to all friends who have so faithfully assisted, by their presence and sympathy, during the sickness and at the burial service of their son and husband. Special mention to the choir for their selections and rendering of beautiful and appropriate music at the house and public services.

Died, in Bay City on the 16th inst., of Bright's disease, Washington Kelly, in the 56th year of his age. He had been a long sufferer, but bore his sufferings with resignation. The deceased was born in Tecumseh, had lived here for many years, and was well known in this town and in Macon. He was a member of the Foresters, and the remains were accompanied to Tecumseh by Mr. Tesch, a member of that order. They were deposited in the undertaking rooms of J. D. Kinney & Co. The funeral services were held at the rooms of Sylvester Erskine last Sunday afternoon, Rev. C. M. Brown officiating, and the burial taking place in Macon. In the absence of the undertaker, H. W. Stevens kindly took charge of the services, performing the delicate duties of that position in a very creditable manner. A beautiful floral memento accompanied the remains from Bay City, a gift from the order of Foresters, which was presented to the family of the deceased.

On Thursday morning, Feb. 1st, the community was shocked by the report which proved true, that Mr. Robert Hendershot had fallen dead upon the street. In the morning he appeared in his usual health, and after being about town for a while started to drive to his farm in Monroetown. He went as far as St. Michael's church, and then turned his horse for home on Fourth St. He tied the horse, and that was his last, as he was stricken down in the act where his daughter, Miss Adelaide, found him a few minutes later. Dr. Heath was summoned and pronounced it heart failure. For many years Mr. Hendershot had been subject to heart trouble, and during the holidays had a serious time. He was also severely troubled with rheumatism and had to use a cane in order to get about. He was born on the banks of the Susquehanna river, Columbia county, Pa., March 26th, 1815. When but a young boy he moved with his parents to Mt. Morris, N. Y., where they remained several years. In 1830 his older brother, Michael, moved to Michigan, the family following two years later and located in Macon, Lenawee county. The deceased pushed out for himself in 1833, and came to Monroe blazing the trees as he walked through the dense forest from Macon. He soon found employment at driving stage, carrying the mail between Detroit, Monroe and Toledo. In 1847 he was married to Miss Sarah Plues, sister of the late Thomas Plues. Mr. and Mrs. Hendershot then located on the farm about 2 1-2 miles west of the city, where he lived until about three years ago, when he retired and moved into the city. Mrs. Hendershot died in August, 1881, and left him a family of six children, two sons and four daughters, all of whom are living. He was one of a family of twelve children, two of whom died in their infancy. He is survived by but one sister, Mrs. John Morgan, of Macon. Mr. Hendershot has been a devoted member of the M. E. church of this city for many years, and has borne the reputation of an honest Christian gentleman. Funeral services were conducted at the residence on Fourth St. Monday, by Rev. Wm. B. Pope.—Monroe Democrat.

Notes from Albion College.

Albion, Feb. 19, '94.

The past month has been one of unusual quiet at Albion College. The banquet, for which the freshmen had made such extensive preparations, did not come off owing to a slight omission in the arrangements. The gymnasium was chosen as a suitable reception hall, the date was decided upon, the caterers were engaged, yes, even weapons of offense and defense were obtained and secreted in the "dens" of the various Sophs and Freshies, but alas, the President's permission was not asked. The banquet did not come off.

The coming week is to be a gala week at Albion college. The new students who don't know which way is east because they have never seen the sun rise, will be obliged to rise with the chickens in order to do any boning. What with concerts, lectures, class entertainments, and oratorical contests, every evening in the week is taken. The fortunate student who has a special friend among the fair coeds is glad of the cessation from study, and thanks his stars that this institution is co-educational; but the confirmed and indefatigable boner—who frequently stays out of the entertainments because he has no lady friend—feels correspondingly miserable on account of the time he will "have to waste."

Hart" are ingeniously utilized to denote the hours.—Adrian Times.

The Tecumseh Fence Co. is a new firm which is starting out very auspiciously. They control the agency for seventeen counties for the Jones Dead-Lock fence. It is heavily galvanized, the stays are steel, stiffened, and the clamps are steel. It is fully guaranteed in every respect. We call attention to their card on the eighth page, showing the fence. S. P. Hosmer is manager of the company.

One of our exchanges requests its correspondents not to abreviate so many words as they are in the habit of doing in their communications. To this might be added the wish that correspondents would endeavor to write proper names more plainly than is frequently their custom. Very familiarity with a name often leads to writing it in a slovenly fashion—a tendency that should be overcome or avoided by every writer.

The Silver Lake Quartette gave a fine concert at the Baptist church Tuesday evening. The club consists of four male voices and they sing home music of the ballad variety. Their programs remind one of the Pixley and Grannis concerts which were so popular a few years ago. Their selections Tuesday evening were nearly all favored with an encore, the Jubilee Song and a Vote of Thanks being especially admired. We can assure the club of a full house should they visit Tecumseh again.

A letter from H. M. Temple, of St. Paul, Minn., indicates that he is doing finely. He has recently designed two books, a Stock Journal and Stock Ledger, prepared with special reference to the laws of the western states, for use by stock corporations. They are something new and will doubtless find a ready sale.

Chase & McKinney have gone into the cigar business together. They have rented the rooms over the State Savings bank which will make commodious quarters for them. They learned the trade of rolling cigars of John J. Freeman and are both skillful workman. We bespeak for them a fair share of the trade in their line.

Next Saturday will occur the opening of a new drug store, equipped with new fixtures, filled with new stock, and owned by the new firm of Orr & Temple. Since the fire which destroyed his former stock, Mr. Orr has been occupying the DeWolf store three doors east of the old stand and has been busily filling the vacant shelves with new goods. Recently he has formed a partnership with F. J. Temple, the Ridgeway druggist. The firm decided to remain in the present location and for the past week have been cleaning out the old shelving and fixtures and replacing them with all the conveniences of a modern pharmacy. The work is being rushed to completion so that everything will be ready for business Saturday morning. Both gentlemen composing the firm are in every sense hustlers, and propose not only to deal with their many old patrons, but by judicious enterprize make it an object for all others to become acquainted with them. If you will go to see them once, they will do the rest.

During the Star Courses of 1892-3, two splendid lectures, entitled, respectively, "Acres of Diamonds" and a "Silver Crown, or Born a King," were delivered in connection therewith, by the Rev. Russell H. Conwell, of Philadelphia. On Saturday evening last, notwithstanding the severe storm, a large and sympathetic audience were present in the opera house, to greet Mr. Conwell for the third time; his subject for this occasion was, "The Jolly Earthquake, or How to be Happy." This lecture was based on the great earthquake which agitated Japan in the early part of the sixteenth century, and which was preceded by the sound of awful laughter which seemed to issue from the depths of the earth and sea. From this occurence many vivid illustrations were drawn of the serious and far reaching power of laughter, many of them of a highly humorous character, and some of much beauty and pathos. Mr. Conwell possesses the rare and invincible charm of entire originality, coupled with an eloquence and dramatic power that is charming, one is fairly filled with new and useful ideas that are to a large extent practical and profitable. We think we give voice to universal public sentiment when say we hope and expect to have the pleasure of hearing Mr. Conwell again.

Robert Cairns went to Clinton last Tuesday.

W. C. Rogers, of Clinton, was in town Tuesday.

The village election will occur on Monday, March 5th.

There will be no lack of skates at the rink, as eighty pairs have been provided. Fifteen cents will pay for the use of skates one evening, or ten cents if one uses his own rollers.

C. E. Williamson is filling his big ice house this week. He has a gang of eight teams, which haul 80 loads a day, and it will require 500 loads in all to fill the ice chest of his refrigerator building. Quite a (n)ice job, taking it altogether.

John R. Clark has so arranged his lecture program that he can be in Tecumseh next Sunday. He will favor his old friends here with a talk on John B. Gough, at three o'clock in the afternoon. Let us all turn out and return the favor by giving him a good audience.

About a year ago Mrs. Mary A. Doke suffered an attack of paralysis and although she partially recovered, she never regained her health. Three weeks ago she sustained a second attack, from the effects of which she died on Saturday last, at the advanced age of 80 years. She had lived in her late residence since the fall of 1860. A further notice will appear hereafter.

The Florida Car was stationed on the side track near the armory Saturday and Sunday, during which time it was visited by a large number of people. It contained a fine assortment of the fruit products of the land of flowers, and also a collection of landscape scenes, showing some of the prominent points of interest in that state. The exhibit was well worth the price of admission.

We hope the Junior Class will be rewarded to-morrow evening with a rousing house. The venture is a new departure, but the idea is a good one and if this exhibition shall receive the patronage which it deserves, others will follow in future years. A literary and musical program will be presented, to be followed by the court room scene in the "Merchant of Venice." Admission, 10 and 15 cents and no extra charge for reserved seats.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

NEGLECT OF DUTY.

A Charge Which Michigan Officials Must Answer.

Grounds for Their Contention That Gov. Rich Cannot Remove Them from Office—Latest Developments in the Salaries Frauds.

ARRAIGNED.

LANSING, Feb. 16.—The most intense public interest was manifest in Thursday's hearing before the governor of the charges of gross neglect of duty preferred by the executive against the three state officials who constitute the state board of canvassers. All the accused were present, accompanied by their counsel. J. P. Lee, counsel for the accused, moved to vacate the citations and dismiss the proceedings for the following reasons:

1. That the governor has no power to remove a board of canvassers.
2. That the power of the governor is confined to official misconduct.
3. That the sole power of impeachment is given to the house of representatives and senate.
4. That the charges against the state officers were wholly insufficient and defective, for the reason that it was not shown that negligence was intended.
5. That the charges did not state what the gross misconduct was.
6. That the notice served on the state officials by the governor was void because it was not in the name of the people.
7. That the board of canvassers was created by the constitution and is not subject to control or interference from the governor and is answerable only to the people of the state.

Arguments on the above specifications were presented by Mr. Lee and F. A. Barker for the canvassers and Harrison Geer for the governor. The canvassers refused to take the stand, but their counsel admitted that none of them examined any of the returns and that no meeting of the canvassing board was ever held. Notwithstanding the latter admission, Mr. Geer offered in evidence vouchers showing that the board collected pay for two meetings of three days each.

The governor was disposed to proceed with the argument at once, but yielded to the request of the defense for time for preparation and adjourned the hearing until Monday afternoon. There is no doubt that he will remove the officials.

The sensation of the day in connection with the amendment scandals is the confession of Postmaster Healy, of Ironwood, relative to his connection with the alterations in the Gogebic county returns of 1892. Mr. Healy's story is said to be that he came to Lansing April 20, 1891, to look after the Ironwood charter in the legislature, and while here was approached by Attorney General Ellis, who called him into his office, where he produced the three returns on the salary amendment. In each return the figure 1 had been placed before the figures 357 and 319, which were the total vote of the county on the amendment and the total affirmative vote, respectively, thus making 1,357 and 1,319. Ellis called Healy's attention to those figures and suggested that as chairman of the Gogebic county canvassers Healey make the writing correspond with the figures.

Healy says he complied with Ellis' suggestion. When seen Attorney General Ellis refused to talk further than to say that Healy's affidavit speaks for itself, and that the latter's latest story is absolutely false.

Fred A. Baker, the principal attorney for the members of the board of state canvassers in their efforts to avoid removal by the governor on the latter's charge of gross neglect of duty, says that the proceedings before the executive were a mere formality, and that there was no doubt he would order their removal and appoint their successors. The next step, Baker said, will be the institution of either quo warranto or mandamus proceedings by the appointees to test their right to several offices, and it is simply as a preparation for the contest in the supreme court that the record before the governor is being made. Baker as well as his clients are confident the court will sustain their position and rule against the governor's right to remove.

DETROIT, Feb. 19.—Fred Marvin, ex-cashier of the now defunct Third national bank of this city, who for more than a week has been a fugitive from justice, appeared before United States Commissioner Graves at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and gave himself up. He is said to have been hiding in Chicago. The charge against Mr. Marvin is of unlawfully converting certain assets of the Third national bank, amounting to $45,000, to his own use. His plan was to take notes from the files, rediscount them, and put up the collateral attached to them. The district attorney demanded that Marvin's bond be fixed at $20,000 and it was so fixed. Bondsmen were expected to be present, but failed to appear, and Mr. Marvin went out with a deputy marshal looking for friends who have both confidence and cash. The crime Mr. Marvin is charged with carries a minimum penalty of five years' imprisonment. Mr. Marvin has used about $60,000 of his friends' money in addition to the bank's funds.

GOT A JUDGMENT FOR SALARIES

Discharged Wayne County Employes Win a Suit in Court.

DETROIT, Feb. 17.—In April, 1891, the Wayne county board of auditors, which was then exclusively democratic, adopted a resolution declaring that every republican employe in the county, seventeen in number, was incompetent, and discharged them on short notice. All of the discharged employes brought suit against the county for their salaries for the balance of the year. The court has directed a verdict for the plaintiffs in a test case and the county will have to pay the men their salaries. Dr. J. F. Clark, who was county physician at the time, brought a personal suit against individual members of the board of auditors for charging him with being incompetent and has been awarded a verdict of $2,000. The other cases pending against the county will be settled, but they will cost the county over $10,000.

An investigation behind closed doors was begun this afternoon. Some merchants have alleged overcharges and the destruction of the manifests does away with proofs on the subject.

CHILLS AND FEVER.

Several years ago a man forty-[illegible] years of age, from a malarious district came a long distance to consult me for a chronic malarious affection for which he had doctored without intermission for over ten years. The treatment which had been mainly relied on by the various doctors he had consulted was quinine and other derivative of chinona bark. Of these preparations he had taken many pounds, and during several intervals he had taken a great many chill cures, but nothing seemed to have any permanent effect.

His complexion was of that dirty yellow so characteristic of ague patients, and his sunken, lusterless eyes, surrounded by dark circles, indicated that completely his health had been undermined. The tongue was heavily coated with a thick brown coating, breath very offensive, and he complained of constant, dull headache. A poor appetite, indigestion, biliousness and constipation completed a tale of woe commonly heard in a malarious locality. The chills came on at irregular intervals. Sometimes he would not have one a month; then again every day for a while.

For this man I prescribed Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin as directed on the bottles, the Man-a-lin to be used until the bowels became regular and digestion good. A few weeks after I received a very enthusiastic letter from him, in which he declared himself nearly well and better than he had been in many years, and had taken no quinine since beginning my treatment. I instructed him to gradually leave off the Man-a-lin which he did, but continued the Peruna a few months longer, and made a complete recovery, continuing to enjoy the best of health.

His case is one of which there are thousands in every malarious district who have been many years and still are searching for something to bring relief to their miserable condition. I am positive that Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin would cure every one of these, for I have watched its effect a good many years and I do not know a single failure.

THE PUZZLE SOLVED.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is among the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the numerous modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

"You seem excited, dear. What has happened?" "Poor Jack Murray! I have just rejected him." "Oh, don't mind a little thing like that. Why, I reject him every six months."

THE DANGER OF NEGLECT.

IN CASES OF PILES AND OTHER RECTAL DISEASES.

There is no class of diseases so difficult to permanently cure when once firmly established as affections of the rectum and lower bowels. The tendency to chronic disease is very marked, and although the first symptoms are unmistakable, yet they are in most cases neglected until deep seated disease is the result. In nearly every case of rectal disease, fistula, ulcers in rectum, fissure and similar troubles the first symptoms are best itching about the affected part finally developing into an ordinary case of Piles.

It may be itching bleeding or protruding Piles it matters not, the end will be the same if neglected, and right here is the point to take time by the forelock and cure the piles, and effectually ward off any further danger. The surest and safest way to remove any form of Piles is to use the Pyramid Pile Cure, a remedy which has been fairly tested by thousands of sufferers and physicians, and it cures every form of Piles rapidly and without pain or inconvenience.

It is not to be confounded with the ordinary ointments, suppositories, pills and salves, so extensively sold and advertised as sure cures for Piles.

The Pyramid Pile Cure differs from all these in that it contains no poison, no opiates, and more over gives results on the first application.

Your druggist will tell you that no pile cure gives such universal satisfaction. A Treatise on Piles, invaluable to every sufferer, is enclosed in each package.

It would be an act of real kindness to Liliuokalani to let her name drift gently out of the newspapers.

It was one of Hudson's wickedest business men who suggested to his wife that the ladies follow the example of the proprietors of stores, and shut up at eight o'clock.

The Tecumseh Herald recently noted the marriage of a Clinton young lady. It proves that she was not married. Let the editor make it right. He can, because he is not married.—Adrian Press.

In Reading a pig ran between the legs of an old gentleman, capsizing him, and broke two of his ribs. It takes a man with a good understanding to cope with the cussedness of animated pork. —Hudson Post.

Seems to us there was a rumor last fall about the organization of a Hudson band, whose melodious strains would be wafted to the skies and mingle with the music of the angels. What has become of the band?—Hudson Post.

Two young ladies at the opera house last evening earned the good will of everybody behind them, by removing their hats during the progress of the play. Their action was highly commendable, and should be emulated.—Evening Telegram.

The project of establishing a canning factory in Morenci is under discussion by certain individuals. The subject was introduced by a gentleman from Jackson, representing a Chicago house that furnishes the machinery and apparatus for such a plant.—Morenci Observer.

A couple of buggy loads of Franklin young people were driving to singing school the other evening when an axle of the forward buggy broke and a rear end collision ensued damaging both rigs and knocking all the flats and sharps out of the scale of general calculations.—Adrian Press.

The forenoon of Candlemas day was clear and the afternoon cloudy. How should the ground hog weather prophecy be interpreted in that case?—Tecumseh Herald.

It is the same harrowing puzzle that is turning the hair of the ground hog grey.—Adrian Press.

A Stockbridge farmer unwittingly assisted a couple of thieves to load one of his own hogs into their wagon the other night. He is talking of having himself arrested as one of the theives and expects to be able to prove that he was caught one night stealing his own oats from his own horses.—Adrian Press.

This morning Sheriff Wilson went to Blissfield and arrested "Jack" King as one of the gang of burglars there. He is now a prisoner in the county jail. This afternoon Deputy Sheriff Jackson will nab Sherman McDonald, another member of the gang. More arrests are likely to follow.—Adrian Times of Saturday.

This first blast of real winter, following as it did so soon after Candlemas Day, will increase the reputation of the groundhog as a weather prophet. If the hibernating little animal possessed a tittle of human vanity he might be expected to come out of his burrow on the next fine day just to enjoy the pleasure of chattering in the choicest groundhog language, "I told you so."

The state census will be taken in 1894 in pursuance of the statute, Act 178, law of 1893. The enumerators will be appointed by the town boards and by the municipal authorities of incorporated cities. Hon. Geo. B. Horton, returned this morning from the dairyman's convention which has been held at Saginaw. Mr. Horton reports that a very profitable time was had. One of the largest cheese making interests in the United States is owned exclusively by Mr. Horton, and is personally managed by him. He owns seven different factories, and his annual output is 1,000,000 pounds of solid cheese. He employs about 50 men in all branches of his business.—Evening Telegram.

Mr. Corbus, trackmaster of the Lake Shore road, states that the storm of last week Monday was the worst one he ever experienced, in his long career as trackmaster of the road. At Air Line Junction he says that ten men kept busy all Monday night trying to keep the snow out of the turntable, and it was all they could do to keep it down. Three locomotives were entirely snowed in, and had to be dug out of an immense bank over ten feet high. The tracks are all clear now, however, and trains running about on time. The snow in the yards here is being carted off and dumped along the road where it will do the least harm when the flood comes.—Evening Telegram.

Frank Dillon had a blizzard experience this week. He started for Jackson Monday afternoon. After a long wait at Lenawee Junction a start was made over the Jackson branch. In Tecumseh the train stuck fast, and after getting free from the drifts at that place there was no trouble until a few miles from Jackson, when the train was firmly stalled in a cut. The conductor was compelled to walk five miles to the station, and having a derby hat, traded it for Frank's cap, the heads of the two men being nearly of a size. All night long the twenty-four passengers (all men) remained in the coach, and the next morning, seeing a house in the distance, they sallied forth to find relief from a nearly famished condition. There was little in the house except coffee and crackers, but this was better than snowballs, so they all indulged. It was half-past eight when they reached Jackson.—Hudson Post.

WINTER AT THE MILL.

The winding lane is filled with snow;
The cold sky wears a frown;
As far as hazy dreamland seems
The warm o'erflowing town,
And everything is white and still
When it is winter at the mill.

The mill wheel with its merry whir,
In icy bands is fast;
No cheery neighbor seeks the door;
No traveler wanders past;
The path is lost across the hill
When it is winter at the mill.

The miller reads his almanac
And wishes it were spring,
When logs come tumbling down the stream,
And larks and veeries sing;
The whole wide world is blank and still
When it is winter at the mill.

The miller's wife, sore discontent,
Sits by the casement low,
And knits and watches the gray smoke
From village chimneys blow,
There's no gossip, good or ill,
When it is winter at the mill.

But to the miller's little maid
Time hastes on rosy wing.
The fairies she could never find
In any haunts of spring
Fill all the firelit chimney nook
Through magic of a story book.

EXILED.

Gilbert de Saumur had just returned to Paris after 10 years' sojourn in America. He had left his country ruined and almost hopeless, a victim to his passion for gambling. He was quite young when he had left France, but he had squandered away a large fortune and so had courageously decided to go into exile and try his luck in a new way—namely, by work! He had started away with £20 in his pocket and had now returned after 10 years' slavery almost a rich man again.

He was once more on the boulevards, once more gazing at the brilliantly lighted shops and at the gay crowd of fashionable loungers who were strolling along apparently without a care in the world. At last, feeling a little tired, he sat down at one of the tables outside a cafe, idly wondering whether any of his former friends would recognize him again now.

Suddenly he felt a hand on his shoulder, and turning round discovered an old acquaintance of his.

"De Saumur, is it possible? Why, old fellow, how many years is it since we met, or rather since we parted?"

"Ten years, Rouval—just 10 years since I started off with my £20 to try my luck over the sea."

"And what sort of luck have you had, old fellow?"

"Very fair—better than I expected. I've come back anyhow with enough of the 'needful' to go along all right now. How have you been getting on all these years?"

"Well, I've had some changes, like every one else. I'm married now and am getting on all right—at least I should if I could only leave the confounded cards alone."

"Take care, Rouval, if you go in for that still. I ought to have been a warning to some of you. Why don't you give that sort of thing up once and for all?"

"That's easier said than done. What is a fellow to do at the club, and then if once you've won from a man you cannot refuse to let him have his chance, and so you go on. I say, you'll come home with me? I want to hear all about your doings and introduce you to my wife."

"I should like to come very much"—

"Well, it's settled then. Now tell me something about your life over yonder. How did you ever get a start?"

"Well, I had a bad time at first, I confess. The motto of the country there is 'Every man for himself.' If one cannot hold one's own in the fierce competition that is waged, then there is nothing to do but give in and disappear. On the contrary, if you've got some grip in you and can hold on and have got just enough money in your pocket to keep you from starving till you get your foot on the ladder, why, there's a chance for you.

"I stood off at nothing, as I did not know a soul in the whole country. As I knew a good deal about horses, I offered my services as coachman to a New York physician and had the honor of driving him about all day to visit his patients."

"De Saumur, is it possible?"

"It was, Rouval; that was precisely how I commenced. When I had got used to the life over there and saw how things went, I ventured on other things, and I certainly had good luck, for everything I touched succeeded. As soon as I had scraped a little money together I put it into some shares in a railway company, and so I went on until I had made what I considered enough to come back with."

"It's been pretty rough on you, Gilbert."

"It has, and I don't mind owning it now. The hardest thing of all was to keep myself from gambling away the money as I made it. It was easy enough to rough it as regards other things, both luxuries and the necessities of life, but it was confoundedly hard to keep away from the gaming tables, which exist there just as much as here. Thank heaven, I did resist though, or I shouldn't be here now."

"Ah, my dear fellow, you won't be long here in Paris before you'll give in to your old habits. What can a man do at the club? But come along. We must start now. I want to introduce you to my wife."

The two men got up and sauntered along the boulevards to the Avenue de l'Opera, where Jacques Rouval lived.

"Do you care to have a look in at the club?" he asked him a little later on.

"No, I don't think I do this evening. You know, it is not cheerful after 10 years' absence to return to old haunts which are filled with strangers and to find all those one knows are no longer there, and after the long list you told me about at dinner time it seems to me there is scarcely any one I know left."

Rouval was not very delighted at this decision. He was in the habit of going to the club every evening and spending some hours at the card tables, and it had become so fixed a habit with him that he felt restless and dissatisfied anywhere else. He would like to ask De Saumur to take a hand with him, but under the circumstances he scarcely dared to. He kept casting furtive glances at the little table in the corner of the room, and at length De Saumur, who had noticed his friend's uneasiness and who from experience guessed the cause, suggested himself "that they should just have a round or two at cards to see how much he had forgotten in 10 years."

"But I thought you had quite given up playing for ever and ever" objected his friend.

"Yes, as a regular habit I have, but it is quite another thing to have a game quietly here like this."

De Saumur played at first carelessly.

He had only proposed it out of consideration to his friend, and he felt rather bored. Rouval kept winning and appeared so contented with himself and had such a triumphant manner that De Saumur found himself getting interested and excited in spite of himself. The more he lost the more persistent he became. It was as though the old passion of former days which for 10 years had been kept in control by his strong will had completely got the mastery of him. At first the stakes had been insignificant, but as he continued to lose he became more and more desperate, until at last the amount was getting so serious that Rouval did not wish to continue.

"But as I have been the loser so far," said De Saumur, "you cannot refuse to go on surely!"

"It is not for my own sake, but I don't like it, Gilbert. You are here at my house, and you are playing desperate stakes."

"Well, that's my own lookout. It's your turn to cut."

Day was beginning to break, and the two men were still seated at the card table. They had played all night, and now their eyes were fiery with excitement, and their hands trembled as they handled the cards.

At last Gilbert de Saumur exclaimed, "There, I cannot go on any more!"

"No, I've come to an end, that's all. I cannot go on, because you have won nearly every cent I possess. I'll give you a check on my banker for it, and that settles it."

A dead silence followed these words. What was to be done? The play had been strictly fair, and Rouval had won it fairly.

"My dear fellow," said Rouval as De Saumur finished writing out the check, "I cannot take it all. Keep something for yourself."

"I have £40 left," replied De Saumur coldly. "That will be enough to get back where I came from. Work is better for me than fortune. I have proved that twice. I thought now I was cured, but it appears I was mistaken. I suppose now I shall never see Paris again. Goodby, Rouval."

And he got up, and opening the door took his hat from the peg in the hall and went down stairs, followed by Rouval, who accompanied him to the hall door, and who, when he had closed it after his friend, went back to his smoking den and paced up and down the room until it was broad daylight.

"Very odd," was the verdict at the club the next evening. "Not quite the thing to take everything the poor fellow had worked 10 years for and so send him back to perpetual exile."—Million.

Pertinent Inscriptions.

It is quite an interesting thing to learn that some of our best known proverbs and mottoes were originally used in connection with sundials. Before the days of watches and clocks, when dials and sun marks were among the rude means of reckoning time, it was a prevailing custom to inscribe them.

Among the maxims traceable to this source are, "Make hay while the sun shines," "The longest day must end" and "All things do wax and wane."

Sundials spoke the truth, as may be inferred from a historic one which was placed on St. Paul's cross, in London, and which proclaimed, "I number none but sunny hours." This no one will doubt who has had occasion to consult a dial on an overcast day.

A famous dial in Sussex, England, bore four famous mottoes applicable to the flight of time and the brevity of life. They were as follows: "After darkness, light." "Alas! how swift!" "I warn whilst I move" and "So passes life."

Another old sundial spoke petulantly about the same subject in the words, "Sirrah, be gone about your business."—New York Herald.

Extenuating Circumstances.

Judge—What, you plead extenuating circumstances? Why, your crime was simply terrible! After robbing the poor family of what little money they had managed to accumulate by almost starving themselves, you murdered them all—father, mother and eight children, pouring kerosene on them and setting them on fire. Then you burned their house and killed eight of the officers who tried to arrest you. And what, may I ask, then, are your extenuating circumstances?

Prisoner—Your honor, it was my first offense of the kind!—Boston Traveller.

The Difference.

The Impecunious—It is just as easy to love a girl with money as to love one without it.

The Heiress—But it isn't so easy to get her.—London Budget.

The New York World.

The most valuable paper that comes to this office is the New York World. Fearless and Independent, working at all times for the best interests of the people, and never for the selfish ends of any ring or individual, supporting the right and condemning the wrong wherever found, it becomes a great power for good throughout the land. Its policy is defined by its well-known motto: "Equal Rights to All, Special Favors to None." The reputation of The Weekly World as an incomparable newspaper is fully established. It reaches for the very best and fullest news of the entire country, and gets it. The celebrated "Tariff Mule" articles are again running in their weekly and are creating widespread attention. Its miscellaneous pages are replete with articles of valuable and interesting information to every one. It is a large 12-page, 8-column paper for only $1.00 a year. We have succeeded in making special arrangements by which we can furnish The HERALD and The Weekly World one year both for only $2.00.

"By Jove!" said Dawson, as he glanced over a copy of the Russian alphabet. "What a terrible thing it must be to be deaf and dumb in Russia! Think of having to make those letters with your fingers!"

PENTECOST POINTERS.

J. S. Pentecost is still in Detroit on jury duty.

The news comes to his old neighbors that Dr. Willard Perkins has married Mrs. Lizzie Weeks nee Hause, since going to Seneca.

Wild geese have been seen flying northwestward says one, another reports a robin in the orchard; therefore spring is near, sayeth the weather prophet.

James Kimball, an old and highly respected resident of this vicinity, lies very ill with heart disease, and his friends almost despair of his recovery.

Pentecost is bound to put on village airs. There will be a social and supper, and after 10 o'clock, dancing, next Wednesday evening, at the hall here. The proceeds to be used building sidewalks.

E. L. German, who recently sold out his interest in the firm of German & Perkins, Onsted, is visiting his parents at his old home here. His health is somewhat improved since giving up business.

Now is the time to look up the sap spouts and buckets, clear away the fallen branches in the maple grove, and make ready for the "sugar season," and some we regret to say will put in a few barrels of muscovado, also for use at that time, in making "pure maple syrup."

Who is it that talks of putting up canning works at Pentecost? There are oceans of peaches already seeking a market near here, the best of soil for raising strawberries, raspberries, tomatoes, sweet corn, etc., excellent shipping facilities; everything in fact, except the man with the pocket book and courage to push the enterprise.

Mrs. L. Daniels is entertaining her aunt, Mrs. Taylor, from the east, a lady over 80 years of age, and a very pleasant person indeed. The lady has visited at Charlotte, Fowlerville and other points, and bears her journey remarkably well. She is accompanied by a niece and nephew. She is a sister of the late Mrs. Arthur Graham, well known to many people of this place.

Last Friday night, from nine till ten o'clock, witnessed one of the grandest displays of the Northern lights, it has ever been our good fortune to witness. At one time it looked, as one lady observed, "as if they were dropping worlds into a great sea of fire," sending the crimson waves rolling up almost to the Zenith. No words could picture the beauty and majesty of the spectacle.

MACON MUSIC.

Meetings will continue throughout this week at the Reformed church.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Sage and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Morgan spent last Saturday night and Sunday at the home of A. C. Green in Raisin.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Osgood went to St. Johns last Friday, where they will spend a few weeks with their son and brother, J. S Osgood and family.

Quite a large number of the Maccabees and their friends spent Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Camburn, and report a pleasant time.

The dancing party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Sage, last Thursday evening was attended by about fifty—both old and young, who tripped the light fantastic until the small hours of the morning.

WHEREAS, Our beloved brother Sir Knight, Chas. Wilkins has, after a long illness, been summoned before the Great Commander of the Universe—before whom all must appear—therefore be it

Resolved, That, by the death of Sir Knight Wilkins, Morden Tent No. 601, K. O. T. M. loses a faithful member; this community an upright citizen, and his family an affectionate husband and father.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Tent be extended to the bereaved family and be it further

Resolved, That the charter of this Tent be draped in mourning for a period of 30 days; that these resolutions be spread upon our records, and that a copy be sent to the local papers, and they be published in the Michigan Maccabee.

Overheard in the Treasury Vaults.—"There's no doubt of it," remarked the Seigniorage with a sigh. "No doubt of what?" said the Gold Reserve scornfully. "That I'm one of 'em." "If you mean one of the biggest nuisances that history ever developed, there's no doubt about your being correct." "And yet I represent the gain on a financial transaction." "Yes." "That's what I am. I'm a profit without honor in its own country."

OUR WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIOS.

Four numbers of our Art Portfolios have now been issued and those taking them are fully satisfied with their bargain. People should bear this fact in mind: That they are receiving the official photographs of the fair, the views taken by the official artist, and authorized by the officers of the local board, and that each view is accompanied by an elaborate description, thus giving not only illustrations, but a history of the Exposition as well.

This magnificent gallery consists of copyrighted photographs, six by eight inches, of the World's Columbian Exposition, the use of which is authorized by the official management, in one oblong volume. The text matter covers the entire page opposite each photograph and expands into an amount of reading matter that surpasses anything of its kind ever before produced.

In "Shepp's World's Fair Photographed," the interior views of buildings, pavilions and exhibits are distinct, definite and beautiful—defying competition. Nearly every country on the Globe has paid tribute to the World's Columbian Exposition. Woman has vied with man in the splendid display made. Anchored within the walls of the "White City" lay a wealth of artistic and industrial treasure, the purchase of which would bankrupt the richest nation on earth.

From snowy Alaska to Cape Horn, from the Isles of the engirdling oceans, from the nations of Europe and Asia, and even from Africa and Australia, glorious treasures have poured in in one generous avalanche. Whatever human intelligence could conceive, or human skill execute, was to be found in these treasure palaces of the world.

Huge trains drawn by palpitating engines, snorting in steam over thousands of miles, bore these inexhaustible riches to Chicago, for many months. We bring them to you in our wonderful book, which will remain not only a souvenir, but a vivid panorama of the most marvelous display of ancient or modern times.

The choicest photographs of the principal exhibits in every case have been selected for this great work.

For the benefit of new subscribers and old subscribers who may have neglected to save their coupons, we will furnish the four back numbers WITHOUT COUPONS, for fifty cents. Call at once and secure these four; then save your coupons and go on with the series.

We received a large invoice yesterday of part five, and we consider it the best number yet issued. It contains the following views, all interior views in the Liberal Arts building:

Austria—
1—Vases, Liberty and Progress.
Denmark—
2—Pavilion, exterior.
3— " interior.
France—
4—Pavilion, exterior.
5—Section of same.
6—Pavilion, interior.
7—Bronzes.
8—Drapery.

ALUMINUM.

We are reminded of the various uses to which Aluminum can be put by the receipt of a neat lead pencil made of that metal from the manufacturers of "Garland" stoves and ranges.

The souvenir is three-cornered, fitting the hand nicely, and being as light as hardwood and as strong as steel is a very acceptable article.

Aluminum was quite costly when first discovered, but is gradually becoming cheaper, and should it ever become cheap enough there is no end of the uses to which it could be put to advantage; for bridges, armor plate, ships, etc., no better metal has been discovered, and while most clay contains Aluminum, the principal cost is in its extraction from the clay.

Experiment has proven that aluminum mixed with iron makes the latter metal pour smoothly, prevents blowholes and liability of cracking and benefits the iron in every way. As "Garland" stoves and ranges are made of this mixture, and as more of them are made and sold every year than any other stoves, it proves that The Michigan Stove Company's methods are the best.—Inter-Ocean, Chicago.

The Oldest Twins.

HILLSDALE, Mich., Jan. 28.—To the editor:—I saw in the Inter Ocean to-day an item headed "Death of the Oldest Twins in the United States." In this city are living Mr. Amaziah A. Bolles and his twin sister, Mrs. Amy Reed, aged 87 years. The health of Mr. Bolles is good and he is often seen on the streets of our city driving a high-spirited horse, and Mrs. Reed until recently has been able to oversee her own housework. For the past forty years they have lived near neighbors.

The husband of Mrs. Reed is also living, aged 91 years, and until two years ago worked at his trade (carpenter and joiner) in this city. They have both husband and wife, been members of the Odd Fellows lodge, or he of the Odd Fellows and she of Rebekah lodge, for the past fifty years. IRA ABBOTT.

The Free Press hit it about right when it defined senatorial courtesy as a new term for total depravity.

Arkansas and Texas were visited with a heavy snow fall last Sunday. The ground hog has been putting in his work down south this winter.

Cleveland's administration has not yet been held responsible for the last blizzard, but every other calamity of the year has been laid to its door.

Only one thing is absolutely certain about the tariff bill, and that is the fact that the Democratic Senators have not yet been able to "get together." Everything else in mere conjecture.

In the light of recent events, senatorial courtesy, as interpreted by David B. Hill, means this: The best appointee must be rejected, if I don't like him: any man can get there if he makes terms with me beforehand.

Out of 17,000,000 workingmen in this country less than 3,000,000 are in the protected industries. United effort in howling makes the latter appear the greater number—to those who don't know or don't want to know what is the matter.

The failure of the Senate Finance Committee to report the tariff bill last week indicates that some of the monopolies are attempting to "tinker with the tariff" for their own benefit. Report the Wilson bill, gentlemen, and then pass it promptly.

The potteries at East Liverpool, Ohio, have reduced the wages of their employes, but they are selling their goods at the same list prices as heretofore. This is a sample of the methods used by the beneficiaries of protection to bulldoze Congress into keeping up protective taxation.

There is no record, in the history of the [illegible] '40 and '56," of destitution and abject poverty so terrible as that presented by the protected Philadelphia mill hands after 30 years of increasing tariffs, and the worst of the matter is that the workingmen have voted continually for this result.

Senator Gray, of Delaware, is entitled to the credit of having made the best defense of the administration's Hawaiian policy. He spoke during a portion of two days and unquestionably made the most of the materials at his disposal, but it must have occurred to him several times that some of it was "mighty poor" material.

The common sense, as well as the democratic, method would be to leave sugar on the free list, lift the tax on whiskey and put a tax on beer. Whether the plutocratic club, however, will consent to this arrangement remains to be seen. If the necessary revenues could not be raised without taxing sugar, then tax it of course. But wouldn't an increased tax on whiskey and an income tax be abundantly sufficient? The sugar, made free by the McKinley bill, should not be taxed by a democratic Congress.

The speech of Senator Jones, of Nevada, against the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law, which was delivered in sections during the debate on that measure at the extra session, has just made its appearance in the "Congressional Record." It takes up 99 pages of that publication and was issued in a special number. Copies are in great demand among those interested in the science of finance, Senator Jones being generally recognized as high authority on the subject, even by those who do not endorse his conclusions.

Attorney General Olney played a trump card in the game against silver when he, in reply to a formal request of the Secretary of the Treasury, delivered an official opinion that the silver certificates, millions of dollars worth of which are in circulation throughout the country, are not lawful money in the meaning of the acts of June 20, 1874 and of July 12, 1882. It is putting the case mildly to say that this opinion was a great surprise to seven-tenths of the House and Senate, and that it aroused much indignation among the friends of silver, many of whom do not hesitate to characterize it as another administration move for the further debasement of silver.

What is troubling the country now is not tariff reform, but tariff uncertainty. Congress should stop fooling, get down to business and pass the Wilson bill without delay.

The whiskey trust and the sugar trust each have a big lobby in Washington. Will they be permitted to shape the tariff bill? That is the question the people are interested in now.

The grand jury at Lansing have found ten indictments against persons engaged in the salary amendment frauds. Four of the parties implicated are now State officials. There will be music in the air before these trials are over.

When the silver men attempted to filibuster against the repeal of the Sherman act, the Eastern democrats called it a political outrage; now they are engaged in the same petty business to prevent the consideration of the Bland bill. What a difference it makes, whose ox is gored.

The Outlook takes off senatorial courtesy in this fashion: That august body, the U. S. Senate, is not without occasional flashes of humor. Senator Hoar, it is said, objected to Mr. Peckham's nomination on account of that gentleman's irritability of temper, Senator Lodge on account of his connection with machine politics, and Senator Morrill, who is over eighty years old, because Mr. Peckham had reached the venerable age of sixty.

The Senate has directed the committee on Printing to investigate the charges of crookedness in the awarding of the contract for the publication of the Patent Office Gazette, which have been widely published. The members of this committee are Gorman, of Md.; Ransom, of N. C., and Manderson, of Nebraska. The investigation will be commenced at once. Politics, business, and "boodle" were mixed up in it, and some of the testimony may be sensational, if the right witnesses are summoned.

Two evils have grown up in in Congress of such a character as to demand heroic measures for their suppression—filibustering in the House, and senatorial courtesy in the Senate. These two causes are continually delaying necessary legislation and they frequently defeat it altogether. They make a bear garden of the House and an old fozy club of the Senate. The people are becoming heartily tired of both evils, and in choosing their Congressmen in the future, they will have an eye upon rectifying these two wrongs.

The Wilson bill as it is today is much better than when it left the hands of the ways and means committee, and its improvement is due to the small band of free traders who have led the fight on the floor of the House. They have not only reduced duties, but what is better still, they have shown the country that the ablest protectionists are no match for real free traders in debate. It is now conceded by both parties that the Democratic victory in debate is mainly due to the brilliant leadership of Tom L. Johnson.—A. H. Stephenson.

The rejection of Wheeler H. Peckham's nomination for the Supreme Court Justiceship is rightly termed by the Free Press as the degradation of the Senate. Many plausable excuses were urged, of course, by those who voted against confirmation, but the bald fact remains that the real reason was because Senator Hill was not "consulted" beforehand. The haste shown in confirming Senator White without referring to a committee, compared with the puerile fight over Peckham, only serves to place "Senatorial courtesy" in a more contemptible light than ever.

Congressman Bryan says: "The protective tariff is so framed that the large consumer gets out while the small consumer pays, in which it differs from a fish net. The protectionist wants a high tariff to make high wages, when he talks to the employer; he wants a high tariff to make low prices, when he talks to the consumer. The rainmaker has trouble to collect his fee even when a rain follows his efforts. If he were a protectionist, and the rain failed to come, he would demand his reward for bringing a drought, and would argue that it was more desirable than a rain."

The Populists in Congress regard the action of the St. Louis convention as an indorsement of their attitude. Jerry Simpson of Kansas says: "We said from the start that we would not vote for the bill unless the income tax were attached to it. Until that was added, as the Record shows, we refrained from voting to make a quorum. The income tax is the saving clause of the bill, because it is a step towards free trade, being direct taxation. We believe in free trade and we do not believe in this 'tariff for revenue idea.' Before we can get free trade the system of indirect taxation must be abolished. The tariff for revenue is a tax on what the people consume. We do not believe in a protective tariff either. The laboring man does not need protection. He has the means to protect himself if he would only realize it. Labor is the only wealth in the country; there is no such thing as stored-up wealth."

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

A National Currency Redeemable in Gold Coin, or its Equivalent in Silver Bullion.

The business of the country cannot recover from its present paralysis until Congress has defined by legislation the exact meaning of two words—"dollar" and "tariff." Of the two a definition of the "dollar" is by far the more important.

The repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law did not settle the silver question: it merely terminated a compromise. It put an end to a truce between two conflicting opinions, and brings us face to face with the enquiry: What shall the American dollar represent? Like the repeal of the old Missouri compromise it clears the deck for action. But the battle is still to be fought. A majority of Congressmen are avowed bi-metallists. They believe that in this they represent a majority of the American people. The advocates of a gold standard have demonetized silver. A satisfactory settlement of the silver question can be effected on the following basis:

Gold bullion to be received and coined as at present, and paid for by government, when desired, in national paper currency. All silver bullion of American production to be also received by the U. S. Treasury from day to day at average gold market value during the preceding thirty days in the principal money centres of the world—say in New York, Paris, London, and Berlin. National paper currency to be issued in payment for said silver bullion, of denominations from one dollar to one thousand dollars, as preferred by the seller of silver, payable on demand either in gold coin or in silver bullion of equal value with gold coin on the day of redemption, at the option of the government.

The advantages of this system are these:

1. It would establish a permanent use for all silver of American production on an equality with our present gold coin, and a permanent use for gold on an equality with silver bullion, as the joint bases of American currency.

2. It would keep all the gold and silver mines of the country at work, with the guaranty of a permanent cash market for both metals and of a permanent use of metals as money—the ratio of one metal to the other, in the absence of an international agreement, being left to regulate itself.

3. It would preserve the existing gold standard.

4. It would establish a permanent national paper currency based upon gold and silver bullion actually in the hands of the government, a currency incapable of fluctuations in value or of sudden expansion or contraction.

5. With the development of our mines of gold and silver this representative National currency would grow more abundant, keeping pace with the growth [illegible] no longer used or needed except for small change in the daily transaction of business, gold coin or silver bullion would never be called for except in limited amounts, occasionally, for the settlement of international balances. The government guarantee backed by the metals themselves would be absolute security, and the gold and silver would remain in the government vaults, while the representative paper currency would circulate in their stead.

6. Under this system no large permanent gold reserve and no new issue of government bonds would be needed. The option of redeeming its currency with gold or with silver bullion at its market value would protect the government against any combination to advance or depress the relative value of either metal.

This is the only plan by which practical bi-metallism can be obtained. The objection of merchants, manufacturers, and bankers to the free coinage of silver at any fixed ratio to gold, is the belief that there cannot be two legal standards in operation at the same time without thereby creating a practical monometallism of the cheaper metal, thus reducing the value of the dollar and at the same time excluding the other metal. But there should be little or no opposition to a system which, while maintaining the existing gold standard, establishes practical bimetallism in the shape of a national currency payable either in gold coin or its equivalent on the day of redemption in silver bullion.

Let all who approve of the above simple and reasonable settlement of this most important and controverted economic question write at once to their Congressman urging its adoption.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever: nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Anarchy in Congress.

Mr. Bland is quite right in denouncing as Anarchists the turbulent minority who persistently defy the authority of the House of Representatives and block the progress of public business. That Mr. Bland is himself wrong in urging his mistaken bill for coining the "seignorage"—which Mr. Hewitt wittily likens to coining a vacuum—does not relieve his opponents of their responsibility and duty to meet the measure manfully, defeat it if they can, amend it if they can, or let it pass with their own votes recorded against it.

It is the very essence of representative government that the will of the majority, duly ascertained and lawfully expressed, shall prevail. The course adopted by Speaker Reed was revolutionary, because he undertook to assume the concurrence of a majority by his own arbitrary count. This usurpation contributed to the overthrow of his party, and he is now engaged in a campaign for his personal vindication as well as for destruction of the Democratic party and is seeking to compel the House to adopt his rule. His course, in which the Republican members support him, is consistent with the political methods he represents; but what do the Tammany members and other professing Democrats mean by assisting him?

Party interest as well as all patriotic considerations must condemn the course. The country is suffering more from the incapacity of Congress at this time than it would suffer even from foolish legislation, and the passage of Mr. Bland's bill would do vastly less harm than a continuance of the present anarchy in the House. For this the Democratic party will justly be held responsible, if the majority in Congress cannot quickly find a way, in accordance with constitutional right and parliamentary order, to carry on its business with decent dignity.—Philadelphia Times.

Good for Cleveland.

Mr. Cleveland's nomination of Senator White for the Associate Justiceship adds cogency to the proverb that genius is nothing but concentrated common sense.

He has repaid the Senators who rejected Hornblower and Peckham, with a graceful compliment to their own body. Democrats who have attributed to him the fault of being absorbed in New York politics are disarmed by the frank readiness with which he has left the list of New York eligibles to confer the coveted honor upon a born and bred Southerner. In this appointment he has displayed a capacity to perceive great qualities and a disposition to admire them. He has forever swept away the insinuation, incessantly breathed before by Republican mercenaries, that he is prejudiced against the Catholic or any other form of Christianity different from his own.

Mr. Cleveland has been a statesman of conviction. Adherence to what he believed to be right is so clearly an unchangeable feature of his character that his detractors have seen in it the opportunity to call him narrowly stubborn. This appointment sheds light upon that quality and shows him to be magnanimous in conception and a general in action—shows that he is not actuated by mere willfulness, when he steadily battles for an object in the range of his duty.—St. Louis Republic.

SONG.

There's beauty in the dawning light,
And twilight fairer than the night
Has each its charm and grace,
But lovelier still on earth to me,
The fairest thing my eye can see—
The beauty of thy face.

There's calmness on the ocean's breast,
As deep and blue it seems to rest
'Neath liner heavens above,
But deeper, calmer, still to me
Than ever sea or sky can be,
Thine azure eyes, my love!

There's music in the running stream,
And music when the woodlands seem
Awake with songs of birds,
But sweeter, dearer, still to me
Than nature's voice can ever be,
The music of thy words.

—G. Rexby in Chambers' Journal.

A QUAKER JULIET.

In the beginning of the present century Philadelphia was a quaint and picturesque city. Commercial greed had not obliterated old landmarks, and picturesque features were protected alike by municipal ordinances and public sentiment. Rows of fine trees bordered the streets, and these were tended and cared for by householders. This was especially the case on Third, near Walnut, which was made beautiful by a line of sycamores reaching to Spruce street.

On the Walnut street side were three two story brick houses, each having gardens on the street, and in the one nearest Dock at the close of the eighteenth century lived Richard Pennell, an Englishman and a Quaker. He was tall and strongly built and so austere in face that it was generally believed he had never laughed in his life and was regarded as an excellent illustration of the popular opinion as to Quaker babies. But although dry and saturnine in manner Pennell was an upright Christian man and did many kindly acts in a quiet way. But all the same it was an instance of the caprice of nature that he should be the father of a girl so peerlessly beautiful as Polly Pennell.

She was now 19, his only daughter, her two brothers were at sea following their father's calling, as he had been a mariner the greater part of his life. Polly's mother was a member of the Church of England in her youth, and although her daughter was ostensibly a Quaker she secretly rebelled against the narrow, colorless life that pervaded and ordered her father's household.

It goes without saying that Miss Polly did not want admirers, but the father was unceasing in vigilance and repulsed advances with a bluffness unmitigated by an conventional civility.

At this time there was but one family in the state that, tried by recognized standards, could claim to be aristocratic, and that was the Hamiltons of the Woodlands.

The eldest and most beautiful of the Hamilton girls was Rebecca. This young lady regarded the usual social conventions as restraints made for common people and so disdained them, made friends with whom she pleased and yet was every inch an aristocrat and grande demoiselle.

After much persuasion Mr. Pennell had permitted his daughter to take lessons in music from Mme. Genet, and here Polly met Becky Hamilton, who at once became the beautiful Quaker girl's fast friend, and not long afterward, just as the Arch street meeting was dismissing on Sunday, after enjoying an exhilarating period of silence for two hours, they were amazed by the appearance of Miss Hamilton of the Woodlands sailing down Arch street in the dress of the time—a beaver hat two feet in the brim, crowned with feathers, like a bunch of broom corn, leg of mutton sleeves, muff and gloves laced to the elbows, attended by her colored groom in laced hat and coat. The dauntless young lady folded Polly in her ample embrace, kissed her, and in her usual resolute voice proposed then and there that she come out to the Woodlands to dinner.

Like a flock of startled hens the Quaker matrons rescued Polly from the wilderness of tulle and india muslin, the fashionable dress of the time. Miss Rebecca laughed joyously as she resigned her friend and walked away, and then poor Polly was taken in hand, warned, entreated to avoid the world's people and their vanities, etc., and reached home upon the whole not displeased with the adventure.

Before the week was out she had visited the Woodlands, had seen the pictures and was led in to dinner by a very handsome young gentleman from Virginia described by Miss Becky in her curt speech as a "Jimmy Jessamy from the Tidewater," name Francis Dulaney. The dress of this gentleman would surprise a nineteenth century belle, although it was de regle 100 years ago. A canary waistcoat rigged with flowers in red silk, claret colored coat with deep cuffs, laced steel buttons big as toy saucers, claret breeches and stockings, buckled shoes and steenkirk cravat smartly laced. Very commonplace people looked like stately gentlemen in such apparel, while in the hideous uniform of today the Apollo Belvidere might without discrimination be taken for the butler or undertaker.

Mr. Dulaney made himself very agreeable. He told of his life in London when he had been a student, of his lonely plantation in Virginia, his widowed mother and sister who had married in England, and Polly, to her surprise, felt as if they had been friends for a long time, and then Becky carried her off, warning Mr. Frank that he must not go philandering about Third and Walnut, as it would make trouble. On the road home the girls had a long talk, and Polly made up her mind that the first era in a girl's life had opened for her. She had a lover, and, as is always the result, such knowledge gave her, with a sense of responsibility, a new feeling of self confidence and respect.

It was a fact. Mr. Francis Dulaney was in love with the beautiful Quakeress, and Becky Hamilton took charge of the courtship with characteristic energy.

After three months spent in alternate hopes and fears Francis Dulaney proposed and was accepted by Mary Pennell, and at once Frank announced his intention of calling on her father.

Next morning that gentleman found himself standing in front of an utter stranger, handsome and well dressed, who announced himself as a suitor for the hand of his daughter. The old sailor had never been so taken aback, but after many earnest words and entreaties declared himself as firmly and unalterably opposed to such a union, and his visitor departed.

And now the hardest was to come—to see and reproach his daughter for her infraction of duty and respect to her parent. He sent for her. Never had she seemed so beautiful, but there was something matured, a quiet firmness in her eyes he had not noticed before, and to his amazement he learned that she had pledged her faith and would keep it. He had bent refractory men to his will, but knew that he was powerless here, yet resolved to try.

He had a maiden sister in New York, and he at once sent for her. Aunt Patience was not a bad woman according to her lights, but looked on a love affair as a device of the evil one, to be met and baffled at any and all risk. Her niece met her with firmness and refused to give any pledge of renunciation whatever, and with her hand on her lover's last letter declared her fidelity to him while life lasted. She was forbidden to leave the house unless attended by her aunt, who had begun to rule like a she Torquemada and made every one, including her brother, weary of life.

But an arrangement for action was made. Mr. Pennell had never yielded in his life and, moreover, believed he was promoting his daughter's temporal and spiritual welfare in hindering her marriage with a worldly person, and he had resolved to take passage for England, accompanied by Polly, and this arrangement he supposed to be entirely secret.

In the early part of October, 1800, he left the house on some business errand, while Miss Patience, after giving every one a blowing up, retired to her room to arrange it. She had not sooner entered than the watchful Creeshy locked it on the outside. Gid, Mr. Pennell's own black servant, a crusty old fellow, was sent into the cellar and secured by the padlock, and then Polly, looking charming, but rather pale, came down stairs, paused a moment on the threshold, and then bade farewell to her old home.

Followed by her maid, she crossed into Third street, and there under the big Buttonwood that was standing at the corner of Willing's alley until 1851 was the Hamilton tilbury, and in a moment her hands were clasped by her lover and Miss Hamilton.

"Drive like the deuce, Solomon," was the command, and in half an hour they reached the Woodlands. It was a joyous party. Becky and her two sisters ordered everything done at once, John Inskeep, who had been inaugurated mayor of Philadelphia a few days before, performed the marriage ceremony. Andrew Hamilton gave away the bride, and all were happy.

Mr. Pennell returned to find a crowd in front of the house, attracted by the yells of Aunt Patience and Gid, seeking release. He went to England shortly afterward and died unreconciled to his child.

After a few years' residence at Curl's Neck, in Virginia, the Dulaneys removed to England. Rebecca Hamilton married unhappily, and the sad story of her life is told in the suit at law brought in our courts by her husband, O'Beirne, to break the prenuptial agreement made between the hapless pair at the time of their marriage.—Philadelphia Times.

Shad Flies.

"You can talk about the mosquitoes of New Jersey or Florida," said C. T. Tappan of Oswego, "but they will not compare with the shad flies on the St. Lawrence river in the month of June. The shad fly will neither bite nor sting, but he comes in greater quantities than the locusts of Egypt. Dogs have to be closed, and boys stand in the hotels to sweep the insects off the guests as they enter. They come like a cloud, or more like a blinding snowstorm, and when they first swarm objects cannot be distinguished across the street.

"I went boating on the river at one time when they made their appearance, and soon I was covered with them, the bottom of the boat was hidden from view, the surface of the river was strewn with their bodies, and the air was dark with them. I attempted to row back to Prescott and pulled hard in the direction I supposed it to be, but when I finally reached the shore I discovered that I was five miles away, and it took me several hours to get to my destination. I have heard of being lost in snowstorms, but this was the only time I ever experienced being lost in a cloud of flies."

Wisconsin's Spanish Named Town.

Probably the only town in Wisconsin that can boast a name of Spanish origin is Boscobel. This is how it happened, according to Mr. Ed Meyer of that place: During the summer of 1855 Mr. John Mortimore, a civil engineer in the employ of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad company, drove here with his wife through the sand deserts from Muscoda—there was no town here then. When they came within view of the present site of Boscobel, Mrs. Mortimore, who was a lady of culture and understood something of the Spanish language, exclaimed: "Bosco-Belle, what a beautiful grove!" After that Mr. Mortimore and C. K. Dean surveyed and platted the city and chose the name Bosco-Belle at the suggestion of the former's wife.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Modern English Gentleman.

This recipe to make "a modern English gentleman" is offered by Mr. Labouchere: "Wash a large, red stock jobber, brush and trim, baste all over with money, arrange in a luxurious west end house, surround with puff paste, then serve up hot. Will keep for months."

THE JUNIOR EXHIBITION.

The members of the Junior class were on their mettle last Friday evening. They were to inaugurate a new custom in connection with the Tecumseh High School, and they entertained a laudable ambition to make an auspicious beginning. To say that the experiment was crowned with success would be stating the truth very mildly indeed. Notwithstanding the inclement weather, an appreciative audience filled the opera house, and they were richly repaid for their trouble. Space will not permit us to rehearse the program in detail. The first part consisted of music, recitations and essays, all of which were well rendered. The declamation by Henry Calhoun, and the Boys Chorus deserve especial mention. The review of the Merchant of Venice by Lovina Schreder was well written and finely spoken. It formed a fitting introduction to the court room scene of this play, which constituted the second part of the exercises. Costumes, made especially for this play, were obtained, and the scenery was adapted to the court room scene. The characters were all very handsomely carried, especially Bassanio, Shylock and Portia.

At the close of this scene, Dr. L. G. North favored the audience with a brief address, which might properly be called diamond setting, or a plea for better physical training. The mind is the diamond that we polish: the body is the setting upon which the diamond depends for both use and safety. We should give the mental development no less attention, but we should give the physical more care. It is an evidence of physical superiority in the Irish race that they have developed so many prize fighters. The graduates from West Point and Annapolis must be perfect men, physically. The state should take this matter in hand also, and hence the college gymnasium is a step in the right direction. The time is coming when every High School will have a gymnasium of its own, and every pupil examined and put through a proper course of gymnastic training. In this advance Tecumseh must be in the van.

The program closed with the Gypsy Chorus. Although the expenses were quite heavy the net proceeds amounted to about $30.00, and what was better still the first "Junior Ex" was a grand success.

Will be a Big One.

The eighth annual convention of the Christian Endeavor societies of Michigan will be held in Detroit, March 21 and 22. Preparations are being made to entertain, free of cost, fifteen hundred delegates. These, with two thousand Christian Endeavorers in Detroit, will make the largest convention of young people ever held in Michigan. The Auditorium, which will hold five thousand people, will be used for these meetings.

An interesting program, covering all lines of Christian Endeavor work, has been prepared by the State Committee. Copies of this program will soon be sent to all the societies in the state. Several noted speakers will be present. Among them are Rev. Francis E. Clark, president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor: Rev. J. A. Rondthaler, D. D., of Indianapolis; Judge C. B. Grant, Justice Supreme Court of Michigan; Rev. C. H. Beale, Lansing; Rev. J. L. Jackson, D. D., of Grand Rapids, and others. All the railroads of the Michigan Traffic Association, covering nearly every point in the state, have granted a one and one-third fare for the round trip from March 20 to 23, inclusive.

Young people expecting to attend this Convention are urged by the Detroit Christian Endeavor Union to send in their names as early as possible.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Sarah Miller was born in Seneca Co., N. Y., June 10, 1840, and died of pneumonia at her home in Macon, Feb. 15, 1894, aged 53 years, 8 months, 5 days, after an illness of only one week. Her maiden name was Sarah Ganoung. She came to Michigan with her parents in 1849. She experienced religion in 1858 under the work of Rev. Burch and joined the Methodist church, of which she has since been a faithful member. In September, 1860, she was united in marriage to Henry Miller. To them two children were born—Estella and Edward. She was a shining light in the community and has been a great laborer in the church where she has been prominent in every good work. She was always present at the weekly prayer meeting. No opposition could change her toward what she considered was right or wrong. She was a generous giver to both the church and the poor, while her services among the sick and suffering will long be remembered. Her last visit from home was to aid the poor. She died in the arms of Jesus, and, the smile that greeted the angels that came to bear her home remained on her face in death and made it beautiful to all beholders. She had her mind to the last, and before expiring asked that the hymn "All to Christ I Owe" be sung to her, saying, "If it be God's will she wished to live, if not all would be well." Her funeral was largely attended at the church where she so constantly labored and worshipped. Her own nephews tenderly bore her remains to the grave. The altar was draped in mourning, and beautiful floral offerings were furnished by the many friends, the church presenting the golden altar. Her pastor, Rev. Ramsdell paid tender tribute to her memory. She leaves an aged mother, three sisters, and one brother, besides the husband who loses an affectionate wife, the children a kind, loving mother. The church meets an irreparable loss. Many are saying since she has departed, "we must increase our energy."

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. Henry Miller and family hereby wish to express their heartfelt thanks to the many sympathizing friends who so kindly assisted during the sickness and burial service of their loved one.

Six Persons Sent Over the Road.

Judge Lane had a hard task to perform this afternoon in dealing out justice to the gang which operated at Blissfield, and made a wholesale burglary in Brown & Carpenter's clothing store, last September.

The gang all pleaded guilty to the charges brought against them, and there was nothing else to do but to give them their sentences. This was done this afternoon as follows:

Ralph Miller, the man on whose premises most of the stuff was found, received the heaviest dose, and will remain in Jackson for four years for burglary.

Henry Meisner, also received eighteen months at Jackson for burglary.

John King, who is guilty of the same charge, also goes to Jackson for eighteen months.

Hezekiah Cole, colored, who pleaded guilty to receiving stolen property, was sentenced to the Detroit house of correction for six months.

All of them will be taken to prison just as soon as possible.—Monday's Telegram.

At the Congregational church Sunday morning funds were raised for putting in fixtures for incandescent lights. The effect will be to make the church much pleasanter for evening services. —Hudson Gazette.

The Lake Shore road has made enemies of nearly all the business men in Morenci, by reason of its economy, and now Morenci merchants are hauling all their freight to North Morenci, in order to do business with the old reliable Wabash road. A petition is being numerously signed, praying the postal authorities to discontinue their service on the Lake Shore road, so far as Morenci is concerned, and have it carried by the Wabash.—Evening Telegram.

On account of the special service at the Baptist church next Sunday morning, the Sunday school will be omitted.

Charles Skinner, formerly of Macon, who now resides in Hudson, paid this village and vicinity a flying visit last week.

The Sholes memorial mantel has been placed in position in the reception room of the armory. It is an elegant piece of workmanship.

C. F. Patterson is putting a new counter and shelving into the Lilley House office to accommodate the news stock bought of A. E. Kennedy.

We are requested to ask all persons, who have bills against Co. C, to present the same to Capt. Will H. Hayden before Saturday evening next.

We call attention to the ad. in another column, called Bimetalism and Monometalism. The book is both readable and instructive and ought to be read by every voter in the land. We have a quantity on hand for sale. Call at once before the supply is exhausted.

The "Old Reliable" is on deck for 1894 and has already pre-empted a front slip in the business synagogue. Our World's Fair Portfolios are going off at a lively rate and this week we add two other attractions—illustrations of prominent men and events, and the Ferris Wheel portfolio. Look them up.

We have another new business firm in town, Kennedy & Rogers. Mr. E. C. Rogers has bought an interest in A. E. Kennedy's business and they intend adding a line of groceries to the stock already kept. New shelving is now being placed in position and the firm will soon be ready for business. The news stand has been sold to C. F. Patterson, who will transfer it to the Lilley House office, and their stationery stock will be closed out at cost. We wish all the parties success in their new venture.

The fire sale of Dry Goods and carpets at the store of A. B. Park, in Adrian, is one of the largest sales ever held in that city. The one-third off on dress goods is an unheard of reduction, as three-fourths of the stock is practically uninjured. It is evident that the opportunity for bargains is one that seldom, if ever, occurs at a private sale. The carpet stock, occupying the entire third floor, escaped with slight injury, but is being closed out at from ten to twenty cents per yard less than regular prices.

The formal opening of Orr & Temple's new drug store to the public took place last Saturday, and from eight o'clock in the morning until late at night, both visitors and buyers paid their respects to the new firm. They have an elegant store, with late style shelving, lots of show cases and a very large prescription case, which is arranged with shelves on the front side. A registry book was kept which received 250 signatures and there were many callers who neglected to sign their names. A cigar was presented to every caller who smoked and a nice button hole bouquet to those who did not. The firm opened their business most auspiciously, and they intend to keep at the head of the procession.

The March number of The Forum (which, by the way, will begin Volume XVII.) will contain the sharpest and, it is believed, the most helpful discussion of the Income Tax that has anywhere appeared. The Hon. Uriel S. Hall, member of Congress from Missouri, who has made himself a great authority on this subject, will write in favor of it, and Mr. David A. Wells against it. The same number of The Forum will contain the first of a series of articles on different systems of Socialism or Communism that are favored by different groups of agitators in the United States; Mr. Edward Bellamy will explain definitely the progamme of the Nationalists, and Professor William G. Summer of Yale University will criticise this programme, showing its impractibility. Another striking article that will appear in this number, will be a searching inquiry into the causes of Railroad failures in 1893, by Mr. Simon Sterne.

The suit against John Cook for assault and battery, on complaint of Lt. Sam McClure came to trial last Friday before Justice Frazier. It was hotly contested on both sides and resulted in a disagreement of the jury.

The Baptist lecture course has been a superior one thus far and it will be fitly closed by a lecture from Dr. James Hedley. Dr. Hedley is an orator and scholar, and people who failed to invest in a course ticket had better attend this lecture.

We publish elsewhere a prospectus of Scribner's Magazine. This magazine now ranks with the very best of our monthlies, and its circulation is rapidly on the increase. It ought to find a place on the center table of every well regulated household.

Henry B. Blackwell, of Boston, whose article on finance appears in this issue, is the husband of the late Lucy Stone, and publisher of the Woman's Journal a paper of wide influence and national circulation. The method which he suggests for using both gold and silver as money is a novel one, but it is worthy of serious study and consideration.

A copy of the Proceedings of the Michigan Press Association for the session of 1893 is at hand. We were somewhat surprised, upon opening its pages, to see that Secretary Slocum had appropriated the HERALD'S account of the meeting in Detroit and the trip thence to Chicago, as an introductory chapter. However, as he gave proper credit and this is his first offence, we will forgive him this time, if he will promise not to do so again. Barring the introduction, the report is an excellent one, and the book is also a fine specimen of work typographically.

John R. Clark, the well known lecturer, who was formerly a resident of our village, was billed to lecture in the opera house last Sunday at 3:00 p. m., and fulfilled his appointment to the satisfaction of a large number of his old friends. He was greeted by a full house, and his subject, "Two hours with John B. Gough" was handled as only John R. could handle it, being sufficiently sprinkled with humorous naratives to relieve the monotony, if any existed, of the sentimental parts. At the end of his address, which was highly appreciated by all in attendance, a collection was taken up which netted a goodly sum to defray the expenses of Mr. Clark. All considered it two hours profitably spent, and we hope to again sometime have the pleasure of listening to John R. in his masterly oratory.

OUR FERRIS WHEEL PORTFOLIO.

The Best Offer Yet, which Needs Neither Dimes nor Coupons.

Among all the World's Fair Portfolios which have come under our notice, there is nothing finer than the one containing views taken from the Ferris Wheel. There is only one number, and that one is a beauty. It contains a portrait of Geo. W. Ferris, the engineer and constructor, a full and detailed description of the wheel itself, and thirteen views taken therefrom. Any person can obtain this art gem on two conditions.

1st—He must be a paid subscriber to the HERALD.

2d—His subscription must be paid in advance to the end of the year 1894.

New subscribers can obtain it by paying till Jan. 1st next. Old subscribers can have a copy by paying arrearages and in advance through 1894. Old subscribers, who have promptly paid already for this year, can have a copy by taking the trouble to call for it.

How long will this offer run? Just thirty-one days, ladies and gentlemen, and not five minutes longer. It begins to-day, March 1st, and will end on Saturday, March 31st, the night before All Fool's Day. Now, hustle up and take advantage of it forthwith. Don't wait until the last day in the afternoon and then forget it. We have a large invoice of the books on hand and there are plenty more where these came from, so there is no danger of the supply becoming exhausted.

W. H. Spalding is working into quite a hardware trade; as he is an expert tinsmith, this fact is not at all surprising. He intends to extend his lines during 1894 and gives a few particulars in a new card elsewhere.

It is no exaggeration to say that C. A. Wright has now the largest and finest assortment of wall paper ever shown in Lenawee County. His shelves are crowded with the latest designs and at all prices from 4 cents a roll upwards. He is fully equipped to meet all demands upon him during the season of 1894. Read his new card.

"Dr. James Hedley appeared for the second time in the Boston Star Course at Tremont Temple last night. He delivered a most eloquent and enjoyable lecture on 'Heroes and Heroism.' The doctor is endowed with a clear, musical voice, a remarkable gift of impersonation, and a power of expression which made every point in his discourse intensely interesting, and kept his great audience thoroughly entertained till the close."—Boston Daily Globe.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

HELD BY THE JURY.

Indictments Returned Against State Officials.

Secretary of State Jochim, Treasurer Hambitzer, Attorney General Ellis and Others Give Bail on Charges of Complicity in Election Frauds.

THE GRAND JURY'S WORK.

LANSING, Feb. 20.—Indictments were found by the grand jury in the election frauds case against Attorney General Ellis, Secretary of State Jochim Treasurer Hambitzer, Land Commissioner Berry, Clerks Warren and Potter, Sergeant-at-arms Bussey, Marcus Peterson, ex-clerk of the board of state officers, and William May, clerk of Wayne county. These indictments had been prepared with great care during the last two weeks by ex-Justice Edward Cahill of the supreme court, ex-Justice M. V. Montgomery of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, Richard A. Montgomery and Russell C. P. Ostrander, of this city, counsel for the state, and are ironclad in every respect. They were made to cover all phases of the case, blanks being left for the insertion of the names of the persons indicted. The indictments found are authoritatively reported to be as follows:

First—An indictment charging Attorney General Adolphus A. Ellis with forgery in connection with the Gogebic county return.

Second—An indictment against Secretary of State John W. Jochim, State Treasurer Joseph F. Hambitzer and Land Commissioner John G. Berry for making false public record of the vote cast for the constitutional amendment of 1893.

Third—An indictment for the last-named offense against Clerks Frank A. Potter and George B. Warren, who did the clerical work on the canvass.

Fourth—An indictment for conspiracy in connection with the frauds of 1893 against Ellis, Jochim, Hambitzer, Berry, Potter, Warren, ex-Clerk Marcus Peterson, of the board of state auditors; County Clerk William May, of Detroit; Sergeant-at-Arms George H. Bussey, and Bill Clerk James G. Clark, of the senate.

Fifth—An information charging Ellis and May with the destruction of Wayne county records while they were in the custody of May in this city.

Most of the persons against whom indictments were voted were notified by their counsel Friday night and five of them—State Treasurer Hambitzer, Land Commissioner Berry, Attorney General Ellis, Sergeant-at-Arms Bussey and Frank A. Potter—went to Mason Saturday morning, accompanied by friends, who were prepared to become sureties on their bonds.

Attorney General Ellis was arraigned on three indictments for forgery, conspiracy and destroying the Wayne county records. He waived the reading of the indictments, as did all of the others save Potter, who pleaded not guilty. In each case where the accused refused to plead a plea of not guilty was entered by the court. State Treasurer Hambitzer and Land Commissioner Berry were arraigned on indictments for felony in making a false public record, conspiracy and willful neglect of duty. Ex-Clerks Potter and Warren answered to indictments charging the making of a false public record and corspiracy, and Sergeant-at-Arms Bussey to a charge of conspiracy.

Bail was fixed as follows:

Ellis, for forging, $5,000; Ellis and May, for destroying the Wayne county records, $1,000; Potter and Warren, for making a false public record, $2,000; each of the persons charged with conspiracy, $1,000; Jochim, Hambitzer and Berry, for making a false public record $5,000; Jochim, Hambitzer and Berry, willful neglect, $1,000.

Ellis' bonds were signed by George W. Webber, A. F. Kelsey, Frank A. Session and Josiah E. Just, of Ionia; S. W. Webber, of Lyons, and N. B. Hayes and Chauncey J. Rumsey as sureties. Treasurer Hambitzer's bonds were signed by Mayor A. O. Bement and James B. Judson, of Lansing. Commissioner Berry's sureties in the same sum are James D. Berry, his son, Alexander Cameron, Wyatt B. Brown and A. M. Dobbelaire, of Lansing, and Henry L. Henderson, of Mason. Potter gave two bonds, with Lester S. Hudson and Alexander Blair, of Lansing, as sureties. Warren's sureties are his father, W. G. Warren, and Horace Wilcox, of Charlotte. James B. Judson and Washington G. Wiley, of Lansing, signed the bond required of Bussey.

All of the defendants announce their intention of making a vigorous defense and have counsel of more than ordinary ability retained.

The cases will be tried before Judge Person, in this city, and several of them will probably be heard at the ensuing term of the court, which will convene upon the 12th of March.

On March 6 the governor's right to remove the members of the canvassing board for gross neglect of duty will be argued in the supreme court, and a decision is expected not later than March 15.

Another life-sized sensation has developed in connected with the official actions of Secretary of State Joachim, Treasurer Hambitzer and Land Commissioner Berry. An examination of the books of the board of state auditors, of which they are the members, shows that they have been making illegal charges and allowing their own bills therefor ever since they were inducted into office.

Each of these officials is a member of several state boards and the latest shortcoming to be discovered consists of charges for services, mileage, etc., for attending meetings of these boards in the face of the constitutional provision that they shall receive no fees or perquisites therefor. It is charged, among other things, and figures taken from the books of the board of auditors sustain the charges, that meetings of two or more of these boards would be called for the same time and the several members would collect from the state full pay for mileage, etc., for each meeting as if they had been held at different times. It is openly charged that the three officials have made a regular and systematic practice of robbing the state. Their only defense is that they simply followed a long-established custom, but an investigation shows that this is not the case.

[The frauds to punish the perpetrators of which indictments have been voted were of the gravest ever committed in any state of the union, north or south. In 1891 an amendment to the constitution increasing the salary of the attorney general was submitted to a vote of the people. The board of state canvassers declared it adopted by a majority of 1,287, whereas by a correct canvass of the votes cast in the state it was easily defeated. The changes which had been made were not discovered until about six weeks ago, when the revelations regarding another falsified canvass came to be made. It was then found that the affirmative vote upon the amendment in Wayne county had been fraudulently increased nearly 5,000 votes; that of Gogebic county increased 1,000 votes, and the returns from Gratiot county giving an adverse majority of 630 thrown out altogether. The amendment had, in reality, failed of adoption by over 5,000 votes. The attorney general had drawn an increased salary under it for nearly three years.

The frauds perpetrated in connection with the salaries amendment of 1893 were even more enormous, if possible, than those carried out in 1891, but a conspiracy in which nearly a dozen persons were engaged had been formed and it was therefore inevitable that the secret should come out.

To Gov. Rich belongs the credit of exposing the shameful plot. The proposed adoption of the amendment of 1893 either directly or indirectly resulted in the salaries of Secretary of State Jochim, Treasurer Hambitzer, Land Commmissioner Berry, Attorney General Ellis, Lieut. Gov. Giddings, Superintendent of Public Instruction Pettingill and Auditor General Turner being raised. The first named three constitute the state board of canvassers, and as such it was their duty to compare and verify the canvass made by their clerks. The fraudulent canvass consisted in altering the returns upon the amendment from twenty-six out of the eighty-four counties of the state so as to increase the affirmative vote, and the prefixing and altering of figures in Wayne county increased the vote cast over 5,000. Altogether sufficient alterations were made to change an actual majority of about 15,000 against the amendment to a fictitious majority of 1,827 in its favor, when the total vote cast was a little over 190,000.

The board of canvassers when it was found the canvass had been falsified claimed that they had failed to compare and verify it as required by law. The governor, upon this admission being made, removed the derelict members of the board for gross neglect, and they are now resisting his authority to remove them in the courts. The grand jury now indicts the members of the board not only for willful neglect but for conspiracy to falsify the returns and also for making a false public record.]

The result of the alleged carelessness or willful misconduct of these officers who compose the board of state canvassers was the increasing of the state officers' salaries, as follows: State treasurer and superintendent of public instruction, from $1,000 to $2,000 each; secretary of state and land commissioner, $800 to $2,000 each; lieutenant governor, from $3 per day during actual service to $1,200 per year; attorney general, $2,500 to $3,000 per year. The latter officer's salary was also raised from $1,000 to $2,500 in 1891, but the returns of the vote on that amendment were also doctored, supposedly after they reached Lansing.

CHILLS AND FEVER.

A Case of Long Standing Finds a Cure.

Several years ago a man forty years of age, from a malarious district came a long distance to consult me for a chronic malarial affection for which he had doctored without intermission for over ten years. The treatment which had been malaly relied on by various doctors he had consulted was quinine and other derivative of cinchona bark. Of these preparations he had taken many pounds, and during several intervals he had taken a great many chill cures, but nothing seemed to have any permanent effect.

His complexion was of that dirty yellow so characteristic of ague patients, and his sunken, lusterless eyes, surrounded by dark circles, indicated that completely his health had been undermined. The tongue was heavily coated with a thick brown coating, breath very offensive, and he complained of constant, dull headache. A poor appetite, indigestion, biliousness and constipation completed a tale of woe commonly heard in a malarious locality. The chills came on at irregular intervals. Sometimes he would not have one a month; then again every day for a while.

For this man I prescribed Peruna and Man-a-lin as directed on the bottles, the Man-a-lin to be used until the bowels became regular and digestion good. A few weeks after I received a very enthusiastic letter from him, in which he declared himself nearly well and better than he had been in years, and had taken no quinine since beginning my treatment. I instructed him to gradually leave off the Man-a-lin which he did, but continued the Peruna a few months longer, and made a complete recovery, continuing to enjoy the best of health.

His case is one of which there are thousands in every malarious district who have been many years and still are searching for something to bring relief to their miserable condition. I am positive that Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin will cure every one of these, for I have watched its effect a good many years and I do not know a single failure.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Regular Session.

On the 19th the Hawaiian resolution was called up in the senate and Senator Daniel (dem., Va.) spoke in support of it. The nomination of Senator Edward D. White, of Louisiana, as associate justice of the supreme court was received from the president and was confirmed .. In the house the effort to secure a quorum to order the previous question on Mr. Bland's motion to close debate on the silver seigniorage bill was unsuccessful.

The session of the senate on the 20th was devoid of special interest. Senator Daniel (Va.) concluded his speech on the Hawaiian question, and while supporting the course that has been followed by the administration, he declared that now there was nothing to do but recognize the new government and wish it godspeed .... In the house the deadlock on the Bland seigniorage bill was not broken.

On the 21st the Hawaiian resolution was further discussed in the senate after a lively debate between several members on the tariff question. ..In the house Mr. Bland again failed to secure a quorum on his motion for a vote on the seigniorage bill, and after four hours of fruitless roll-calls the house adjourned.

In the senate on the 22d a resolution was offered to instruct the finance committee to prepare a bill for the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. Also a resolution directing the judiciary committee to prepare a joint resolution, providing for the election of senators by a direct vote of the people. Adjourned to the 26th .... In the house a bill was introduced to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada and one to repeal that part of the act of 1875 which authorizes the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds. Exciting events growing out of the wholesale arrest of members for being absent led to disorder and tumult, which, after continuing for hours, was suddenly terminated in an adjournment.

The senate was not in session on the 23d .... In the house the members under arrest were finally discharged from custody by dispensing with further proceedings under the call. Mr. Bland, in another futile effort to secure a vote on the silver seigniorage bill, called the filibusters anarchists, and said: "We were sent here to do our duty, and a time when the cities are thronged with mobs and the people cannot go to bed in peace and comfort is not the time when mob law should obtain here." At the evening session to consider pensions the lack of a quorum prevented the transaction of any business.

LATER.

There was no session of the United States senate on the 24th. In the house roll call followed roll call, the opponents of the seigniorage bill throwing aside all pretense of not filibustering and boldly injecting motions to take a recess and to adjourn in order to prevent a vote on Mr. Bland's motion. Finally Mr. Bland said: "It is quite evident that the bondholders have control over this country and I, therefore, move that the house adjourn." The motion prevailed.

THE DANGER OF NEGLECT.

IN CASES OF PILES AND OTHER RECTAL DISEASES.

There is no class of diseases so difficult to permanently cure when once firmly established as affections of the rectum and lower bowels. The tendency to chronic disease is very marked and although the first symptoms are unmistakable, yet they are in most cases neglected until deep seated disease is the result. In nearly every case of rectal disease, fistula, ulcers in rectum, fissure and similar troubles the first symptoms are heat itching about the affected part finally developing into an ordinary case of Piles.

It may be itching bleeding or protruding Piles it matters not, the end will be the same if neglected, and right here is the point to take time by the forelock and cure the piles, and effectually ward off any further danger. The surest and safest way to remove any form of Piles is to use the Pyramid Pile Cure, a remedy, which has been fairly tested by thousands of sufferers and physicians, and it cures every form of Piles rapidly and without pain or inconvenience.

It is not to be confounded with the ordinary ointments, suppositories, pills and salves, so extensively sold and advertised as sure cures for Piles.

The Pyramid Pile Cure differs from all these in that it contains no poison, no opiates, and more over gives results on the first application.

Your druggist will tell you that no pile cure gives such universal satisfaction. A Treatise on Piles, invaluable to every sufferer, is enclosed in each package.

John Y. McKane, the election boss of Brooklyn, is now clad in a striped suit, and is known as convict 119—three.

President Cleveland has gone to North Carolina to shoot ducks and recuperate. Meanwhile the dilatory "tinkering with the Wilson bill" still proceeds in the U. S. Senate.

If Senator Hill has concluded to fight the Wilson bill, he will be compelled to do so in the open Senate. He cannot commit this treachery under cover of an executive session.

Public interest in the Hawaiian muddle has about petered out. The four reports from the Senate finance committee revived the question temporarily, but it was only a fleeting revival.

Gentlemen of the Senate: Stop fooling and pass the Wilson bill. Tariff uncertainty is injuring business more than tariff reform. What the people want is less log rolling and more legislation.

The St. Louis Republic puts it in this way: The Democratic Congress has secured a quorum without counting one. The Democratic party never counts its chickens before they are hatched. But this has been an awful strain on the old hen.

Advices from Washington state that the Senate finance committee is having much trouble with whiskey and sugar. On which the Chicago Dispatch observes that nothing can cause more trouble within a given time than that combination.

The Tariff Mule of the N. Y. World is kicking livlier than ever this spring. The author of these articles is a vigorous writer and is thoroughly posted on the tariff question. They alone are well worth the price of the Weekly World.

Representative Taylor, a democrat from Indiana, has introduced a resolution in the House charging employes of the medical division of the Pension Office with making false reports to their superiors in order to secure unjust decisions, and directing the committee on Invalid Pensions to investigate.

Congressman Hall, of Missouri, is the leader of the income tax men in the House. The March number of the Forum contains an article from him giving his reasons for favoring such a tax. Those persons who are so flippantly poking fun at the effort to make the millionaires pay their share of the taxes should read this article and get their eyes opened.

Congressman Bland has reaped the reward which generally follows perseverance in well doing, as his seigniorage bill was passed last week. Finding that he was determined to keep his bill before the House until some action was taken thereon, some of the Democratic filibusters concluded that discretion was the better part of valor and voted. Justice was vindicated and the filibusters were put in a hole.

It is reported that Senators Hill, of New York, and Brice, of Ohio, are playing the role of assistant Republicans in an effort to keep up the tariff on raw materials and hamstring the Wilson bill. People who are posted on the means by which they obtained their Senatorial seats are not surprised at this. They are acting outside of the party lines and pledges, however, and if they succeed in blocking the wheels of tariff reform, they will find themselves "out of a job," when their present term expires.

The returns of Tuesday's election show very clearly that the Pennsylvania Democrats were under the command of that favorite old leader of theirs, General Apathy. It is only in Philadelphia that the Republicans appear to have polled more votes than they had. Elsewhere they turned out in very fair strength, but the big majorities came from the collapse of the Democratic vote. People who voted for tariff reform in 1892 and find the same old paralyzing McKinley tariff in operation in 1894 are not exerting themselves to vote for another Democratic Congressman to swell the ranks of the quarreling incompetents at Washington. Congress has only to keep on as it is going, or not going, in order to put the Democracy of the whole United States under the control of General Demoralization.—Philadelphia Times.

Boss McKane, the Brooklyn vote counter, has got his deserts by a sentence of six years imprisonment. If the Lansing counters wish any pointers on this subject, they can address him at Sing Sing, New York.

If the New Yorkers want men from that state in important positions their U. S. Senators must cease their petty, boyish wrangling over senatorial courtesy and vote to confirm first-class appointees when the opportunity is offered.

"Taxation in proportion to benefits received" is a fundamental rule that ought to lie at the foundation of all tax laws. Any system which raises the necessary revenue on consumption alone is therefore unjust. The income tax is fair and impartial. It would relieve the laborer of a part of his burden and would make wealth stand its legitimate proportion.

Senator Sherman has flopped on the income tax question. In a speech made March 15, 1882, he used this language: The public mind is not yet prepared to apply the key of a genuine revenue reform. A few years of experience will convince the whole body of our people that a system of national taxes which rests the whole burden of taxation on consumption, and not one cent on property and income, is intrinsically unjust.

Representative Bryan, of Nebraska, this week introduced a bill in the House that provides for what many people consider an important court reform—that three-fourths of a jury in civil cases shall constitute a verdict. Mr. Bryan says of the bill: "I have favored such a change for several years, and my attention was called to it anew by a suggestion made by Judge Brewer at the Union League banquet. In civil cases there is no reason why the litigants shall be compelled to fight until one can secure a unanimous verdict."

Members of the House are under obligations to Hon. John M. Allen—"private John Allen"—of Mississippi, for the speech he made last week. This speech, although containing some hard hits at the Democrats who were blocking the business of the House by refusing to vote to make a quorum, was on the whole so full of quaint humor that it resulted in getting the ill humor which had been so apparent for several days on the floor laughed out of everybody. Which shows that a big hearted humorist can sometimes do more to hasten legislation than a bull headed statesman.

Prof. R. E. Thompson, in his late work on Political Economy says: The most modern, and theoretically the fairest form of taxation, is the income tax. It makes everyone contribute to the wants of the state in proportion to the revenue he enjoys under its protection. While falling equally on all, it occasions no change in the distribution of capital, or in the material direction of industry, and has no influence on prices. No other is so cheaply assessed or collected. No other brings home to the people so forcibly the fact that it is to their interest to insist upon a wise economy in the disbursement of the national revenue.

In commenting upon the delay of the Senate in acting on the Wilson bill, President Smith, of the New York Chamber of Commerce, says in the March number of the North American Review: There is nothing that commerce fears so much as change and uncertainty concerning the laws which affects commercial transactions. The delay in the Senate in passing the silver-repeal bill practically ruined trade last fall or deprived it of all profit. It is now greatly to be feared that a like delay in settling the tariff question will seriously damage the commercial prospects for the coming season. Whatever may be the ultimate fate of the Wilson bill, it should be decided promptly, in order that commerce may know what the law is, and adapt its operations at once to the changed situation.

In an able article in the March number of the North American Review, Edward Kemble, President of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, has this to say about the causes of the business depression: In periods of depression men look for a cause, and are very likely to jump at a conclusion. The cause of the present depression in business—now long continued—was at first said to be the purchasing of silver by the government: so the purchasing clause of the act of 1891, commonly called the Sherman act, was repealed. Then the financial panic—or semi-panic—was said to be the cause. That soon passed. Then the trouble was attributed to the scarcity of money. Later the cause was said to be the expected new tariff bill. This bill has been before the public for weeks, and the worst is known. These so-called "causes" have all disappeared, but their disappearance has not put a wheel in motion nor a hand to work. It is not, perhaps, within the scope of the greatest intelligence to account satisfactorily for the present state of affairs. It is world-wide. Its beginning may be traced to the time, three years ago, marked by the failure of the Barings. Next came the crisis in Argentine affairs. Then, shortly, the panic in Australia; and later, this wave of depression over the United States, which does not yet recede, although the supposed causes have been eliminated.

BIMETALLISM IN THE EAST.

The Outlook is one of the ablest family newspapers published in New York. It is edited by Dr. Lyman Abbott and is a conservative but consistent friend of both gold and silver. A recent issue contains a letter from President Andrews of Brown University, which ought to be good seed sown in a missionary field. We append the comments of the Outlook upon this letter and the letter itself:

PRESIDENT ANDREWS ON SILVER.

The price of silver has fallen so rapidly since last June (from 83 cents an ounce to 69 cents an ounce), although the production of silver is no greater than a year ago, that it seems no longer possible to deny that governmental action can most powerfully affect the price of a commodity for which governmental action creates the largest demand. It seems singular that any one in this country should have doubted this, when under the Bland Act, we saw that every dollar of silver coined immediately had the same value as a gold dollar. These dollars, we have frequently stated, were never redeemable in gold. Last week the Attorney-General rendered an opinion restating the Goverment's position regarding the silver certificates. He rightly holds that they are not even money in the sense that any creditor can be compelled to take them in discharge of a debt; they are simply certificates for a certain amount of coined silver, which the Government agrees to receive for public dues. Yet the fear that the free coinage of the present silver dollar, by several nations even, would result in a dollar not at par with gold is so widely prevalent that we most heartily welcome to our columns a remarkably clear letter from President Andrews, of Brown University, showing in what manner the world's uncoined silver bullion could be added to the currency without producing anything approaching inflation. Indeed, we quite agree with President Andrews in his opinion that it would not, in the long run, give to the world that expansion of its currency which its increasing commerce demands.

BOSTON BIMETALLISM.

In a paragraph favorably noticing the organization recently formed in Boston for the promotion of international bimetallism, The Outlook for February 17 expresses the view that "were it an immediate question whether the mints of three or four great nations should be open to the free coinage of fifty cents worth of bullion into legal-tender dollars, they (some members of the organization) would probably shrink from it and accept the opinion that it was dishonest inflation." This statement conveys an entirely erroneous impression, implying that part of the gentlemen leagued to promote international bimetallism would deprecate the immediate adoption of that system. No sentiment of such tenor has been expressed in any meeting of those gentlemen, nor has one of them even suggested the necessity or the propriety of a change in the ratio between the metals when the nations begin again the free coinage of silver. All those gentlemen well know that were a bimetallic league formed containing England and the United States the bullion in a silver dollar would be worth much more than fifty cents before a single silver coin could be struck. Nor, phenomenally low as the gold price of silver is, would there be any danger that inflation would follow international free coinage, provided Great Britain were a party to this. Outside the Treasury of the United States no large stock of silver bullion exists anywhere. Were international free coinage to begin to-morrow, most of the silver demanded would have to be first mined and then coined before it could become part of the effective circulation. And when the full force of the new regime had come into play in the working of mines and mints, the sole effect that silver would exert on prices would be, I believe, to prevent them from falling any more. No one who has carefully examined the question longer fears a "flood" of silver. This metal, like gold, is under the stern law of diminishing return. My own belief is that, while the international free coinage of silver, along with the new suppliesof gold now coming in sight, would sustain prices at about their present level for a very long time to come, perhaps a century—the total gold and silver of the world both together will ultimately be unable to do this.

That silver could be freely coined by several nations without a rise in prices seems incredible only to those who do not allow for the immense spur and enlargement to industry which an arrest of the fall in prices would bring. Let prices cease to fall, let investments in enterprises for producing wealth again become safe, as before 1890, let the stockholder again have a chance to make something as well as the bondholder, let the loaning of European and United States capital in China, Japan India, and Mexico cease to be a form of gambling, as the destruction of the par of exchange with those countries has made it, and the world will enter upon a period of business prosperity such as has never yet occurred. So vast an expansion of business will be involved in this that the utmost amount of money which the coinage of both the precious metals can afford will be too small rather than too large.

While criticising in this way the above incidental statement, I beg to thank The Outlook for its lucid, truthful, and informing treatment of the silver question in general.

E. BENJAMIN ANDREWS.
Brown University, Feb. 19, '94.

THE TARIFF AND THE CAUCUS.

The Senate caucus on the tariff accomplished nothing, except to show that the majority of the Democratic Senators are in accord with the finance committee in support of the Wilson bill. Of this, however, there has never been any doubt. The uncertain element is that represented by such Senators as Hill and Brice, together with certain feeble Senators who will still regard the tariff as "a local issue."

The men are, of course, a minority in the caucus, but if they will not be bound by the decision of the caucus the bill might as well be thrown into the open Senate and left to take its chances. There is no use trying to conciliate men who are fundamentally hostile to the party to which they profess adherence.

The country will be reasonably patient with Mr. Voorhees and his committee, knowing what a hard task they have on hand, but it will not be wise to try its patience too far. Action is what is needed, and unless there is some assurance that time lost now will be saved at a later stage it would be best to give up trying to harmonize everybody and report the bill at once.—Philadelphia Times.

COMING TO BIMETALLISM.

Europe is uneasy about silver. The debtridden and tax-bled nations of the Continent are wondering whether they can stand a greater appreciation of gold. England has for many years congratulated herself on the gain she has reaped as a creditor from the gold standard, but since her trade with India has become demoralized and her exchanges with all silver-using countries shaky, her exporters are asking questions of the bankers who have taught the statesmen all the finance of the past hundred years.

One of The Republic's financial correspondents, who has always been conservative in making predictions, writes that a European war, forced by the intolerable trade depression of the gold standard, is almost certain to come very soon. The discontents of all classes are pressing the Governments into war, because the expedients of peaceful finance have all been exhausted. The war will end, he believes, in a general reconstruction of the money standard on a bimetallic basis.

War or not, the Europeans are realizing, as they have not before since the short-sighted action of Germany in 1871, that the business of the world cannot get along without silver. The alternative before the European nations is silver legal tender with free coinage, or an enormous issue of paper currency. The latter might be a temporary relief, but it would be soon felt as a terrible strain on credit, and at the first convulsion the impossibility of gold redemption would precipitate panics of unparalleled magnitude.

In reality there is no alternative. Europe is not rich enough to retain monometallism much longer without revolution and repudiation.

We have followed the blunder of Europe, and the bimetallist has not been admitted into the councils of the nation. But to-day the bimetallist has the satisfaction of seeing that the intellect of the whole world is with him.—St. Louis Republic.

FUNCTIONS OF MONEY.

The Views of Senator Stewart on the Money Theory—What May Constitute Legal Tender.

Money is a medium of exchange and a measure of deferred payment. In the early stages of civilization the function of facilitating the exchange of the property of one man for the property of another was the most important use of money. But at the present time, the measurement of time contracts, so as to do equity between debtor and creditor, is the paramount consideration.

When, by custom, agreement or law, a common representative of things useful has been selected, such common representative may be exchanged for any property, because, by such custom, agreement or law, it is made representative of all property. The representative of all property may, or may not, be composed of material useful in itself, without regard to the function of representing other useful things; but it cannot be money, unless it is made an order for all things for sale, by some law, custom or understanding, which the people observe, either voluntarily or by force of sovereign authority. It must be an unquestioned order or warrant of attorney, in the hands of its owner, for everything offered for sale, and for the discharge of all obligations payable in money.

Neither gold nor silver can be used as a commodity, and at the same time in its representative character, as an order for all things for sale, and a legal tender for the payment of debts. Anything which is clothed with the money function of a dollar, will pay a debt amounting to a dollar, and buy a dollar's worth of property—no more and no less—no matter of what material it may be made. It is the money function which makes it a dollar, not the paper, the gold or the silver. If there were no law, custom or understanding, by which the money function could be conferred upon anything but gold and silver, and gold and silver could only be converted into money without loss or charge, the amount of gold required to make a dollar, would be worth a dollar, and the amount of silver necessary to make a dollar, would also be worth a dollar.

Rude nature never has, and there is no probability that she ever will, yield too much from the mines of either gold or silver, or both, for use as money; consequently it has always been and still is safe and expedient to confer the money function upon all the precious metals offered for that purpose by coining them into money.

This limitation of nature is called the automatic theory of money. From time immemorial the great commercial nations have furnished their people with full legal tender money by coining all the gold and silver deposited at their mints for that purpose. But the case is very different where paper or any other material, which may be obtained in unlimited quantities, is endowed with the money function. While the precious metals are both used, a law providing how much of each should be required for a dollar, or other unit of money, and with a provision for the unlimited coinage of both, was all that was required. But where paper or other material of unlimited quantity was used the law must not only provide how paper shall be converted into money, but must also determine what quantity of money shall be created from paper. In the former case nature determines the quantity of money; in the latter the quantity must be determined by law. In other words, in using paper in the place of gold and silver the law of man must be substituted for the law of nature.

The automatic theory of limiting the volume of coin, by the quantity of the precious metals, is not a perfect system. When the mines are productive, coin is more plentiful than when the output is diminished from exhaustion of the mines or other causes. In every age of the world, when there has been an abundance of coin, there has been prosperity as well; and when there has been a scarcity of coin there has been adversity. Thus the automatic theory works well when the precious metals are abundant, and badly when they are scarce. It is not a scientific system, because such a system would furnish an adequate supply of money at all times, without regard to the accidents of mining.

For 1,400 years previous to the commencement of the sixteenth century it worked badly, because very little gold or silver was produced. For 300 years previous to 1810 the automatic system worked well, because during that period mines were reasonably productive. Between 1810 and 1850, on account of the Spanish-American wars, which nearly destroyed mining, the system produced ruinous contraction and hard times. From 1850 to 1873 there was a copious yield of the precious metals and the progress of civilization was marvelous. In 1873 the automatic system was abandoned and a scheme was inaugurated to regulate the volume of the standard money of the world by gold alone.

This undertaking has not been fully accomplished, but, in its approach to consummation, it has produced disaster. It was the most radical financial revolution ever undertaken in the history of the world, and one which, if finally consummated, must end in ruin. If the automatic theory had not been abandoned in 1873, the prosperity of the preceding twenty-three years would have continued, because the output of the two metals would have maintained a reasonable supply of money. The restoration of the automatic system, by the remonetization of silver, would secure future prosperity indefinitely, if the discovery and development of gold and silver mines should furnish an adequate production of the precious metals.

If modern civilization is to be maintained, the automatic system must be restored, or a more scientific system devised and established in its stead. Education and habit of thought favor the automatic system, which, as we have seen, consists in the use of both gold and silver, without discrimination against either.—Senator W. M. Stewart.

THE CONSPIRACY.

The First Blow at Silver—The Necessity for a Bond Issue.

But for the striking down of silver, the contraction of the currency supply by $60,000,000 a year, and the treatment of all our silver money as mere token money, to be redeemed in gold, Mr. Carlisle's necessity for borrowing $50,000,000 in gold would not now exist. It is the first direct result of the silver repeal act of last November.

It was intended, too, by the gold standard ring. Senator Jones, of Nevada, spoke prophetically on October, 30, 1893, as follows: "The repeal of the Sherman law, if accomplished, will be but one-half of the scheme of the banks. They desire to get silver first out of the way. The project is, and the determination of the banks is, that they must be permitted to have a monopoly of the issue of money. They insist that the government shall cease the issuance of money, and hand over the prerogative to them. By the constitution the right to coin money was given to congress. The bankers do not believe that was a wise provision on the part of the framers of the constitution, who should have devolved this duty upon the banks. When silver is out of the way they will acquiesce in the views of the producers of the country that more money is necessary, and will demand an issue of several hundred million dollars of bonds in order that the country may be enabled to have a sufficient volume of money to do its business and maintain some degree of prosperity. They hope and expect that by the time they are ready to push this demand the distress of the country will be so great for want of money that their wishes will be complied with."

The hope and the expectation of the bankers' gold ring, thus described with exactness three months ago by Senator Jones, have been fully realized.

Silver's demonetization has done its intended work—created a deficit in the gold reserve fund, helped to enlarge the hole in the revenues, and made the whole country feel the pinch of hard times as it never felt it before.

And now the proposal is to borrow more gold, from the gold ring of course, pay it more interest—in gold, of course—and do it, too, without the consent of congress.

There are are too many friends of silver in congress to allow this latest plot of the gold ring to go through unchallenged.

It will be blocked, and it ought to be.—N. Y. Recorder.

THE SILVER MOVEMENT.

Let this Country Stand Firm for Bimetallism and All May Yet Be Well.

It is now evident to England that the Indian silver policy is a failure. In a recent article the London Times says:

"We do not suppose that all hope of making the Indian government silver policy a success has been abandoned by the initiators, but their whole scheme appears to be doomed. It is more than likely that the mints will be reopened sooner or later. It is now evident that their policy could be made effective by an import duty on silver, but the government naturally shrunk therefrom because it would have ruined India's export trade. The Indian government will probably maintain its present attitude for a short while longer, but the best judges are of the opinion that it will fail."

When this failure comes England will again be under the constant pressure to do something to prevent the further fall of the price of silver, and it can do nothing because the so-called fall of silver is in fact nothing but an appreciation of the purchasing power of gold that cannot be stopped by anything but universal remonetization of silver. Germany also is feeling the pressure, and last week Minister von Heyden made a speech in the Prussian landtag in which he said that something must be done in the direction of bimetallism, as that was the only possible remedy for the business depression of the entire gold standard world. There is a strong movement at Berlin for another monetary convention. At the same time there comes from Berlin a proposition on a gold standard basis similar to that proposed by Rothschild to the last monetary convention. It is, in brief, a proposition that the United States shall purchase $10,000,000 silver annually; France to purchase $4,000,000, and England and Germany to withdraw all their gold coinage and paper money under the value of $5, and buy annually $4,000,000 worth of silver, and all the nations to issue notes yearly against the full equivalent of the silver purchased. The price of silver is to be fixed by a commission representing the different nations, and to be alterable only at the beginning of each year. All this country has to do is to refuse to accept any such proposition and insist on universal free coinage at the ratio of 15½ to 1. The European nations will be obliged to accept these terms if the United States stands firm.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Needs Scrutiny.

We are unable to see why Secretary Carlisle should not coin the silver bullion now in the treasury which is ample in amount to relieve the present pressure, instead of issuing bonds, upon which the government would have to pay interest. The scheme of Secretary Carlisle pleases the capitalist immensely, and as it has been satisfactorily demonstrated that the interest of the common people cannot be harmonized, we may well scrutinize the merits of this alleged ultimatum.—Queen County (Ga.) News.

Low Silver, Low Wheat.

There was recently considerable discussion on Wall street, according to a New York dispatch, about silver and the effect of the India council's latest action. It was generally thought that it would mean eventually lower prices for silver and for wheat, inasmuch as with improved trade conditions silver would drop in the London market and Indian wheat would be brought into competition with the American product.

An Interesting Description of the Sights and Scenes Around and In San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 24, '94.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—Although it is some time since I promised to write you a letter from this land of sunshine and flowers, I think it is not too late to redeem my promise.

Having been in the city over two months I consider myself more able to give you a good, or passible description of the place and the people. For, I have found that one cannot see all that is to be seen here in a short time. I find every day some new feature that is novel and interesting to me.

I arrived in San Antonio the Saturday before Christmas, and for the first time in my life saw yards full of rose bushes in full bloom beside innumerable other flowers, in mid winter. Bananna palms with great bunches of ripening fruit were a common sight. In fact it was more like a day in June than a day before Christmas. The warm and balmy breezes were not much like the icy blasts we had left in Illinois but three days before. There every one muffled up to keep from freezing, here boys were wading barefooted in the river, catching craw-fish for fish-bait. There ice and snow, here flowers, flies and mosquitoes.

San Antonio is a quaint old town, more Spanish than American to this day. A population of fifty or sixty thousand is claimed, and when one sees the evidences of the fruitfulness of the greasers and negroes, and their ability to crowd large families into small quarters one does not doubt the figures.

In the older parts of the city the streets are narrow and very crooked, and it is very easy to distinguish the Mexican from other abodes. In many places throughout the city one can easily imagine himself in some foreign town. Low adobe houses built flush with the side walks, with eaves so low that an ordinarily tall man can touch them with his hat; narrow streets bordered with sidewalks about thirty inches wide, where there are sidewalks at all, give a decided foreign appearance to some parts of the city.

San Antonio is about equally divided by the river that bears the same name. This river rises in the Northern limits of the city, and has its source in a series of marvelous springs. The city water works company supply the city with water from the same springs, and a number of wells driven near them. This water supply is a veritable gold mine to this merciless corporation, who charge the extortionate rate of $1.50 per month for each faucet in use. Therefore if a house has more than one faucet the water rate mounts up very rapidly. At that rate the water supply of an average flat of six rooms in Chicago, would cost about $125 per year. As it is there the cost is about $7.00 per year. Quite a difference.

The river runs through the city in a very zig zag course, is crossed by a large number of bridges, which make a very picturesque part of a picturesque place. From any one of the bridges beautiful views up and down stream are seen.

The soil here is a black limey clay that, when wet, sticks to the shoes like a strong glue. I have had to take a hatchet to chop it off my shoes before I could step into the house. I have seen horses puffing like locomotives in pulling a small vehicle with wheels augmented by mud until they looked like the wheels of a steam road machine. The soil is also plentifully mixed with great flinty stones, that make it look like mighty hard land to cultivate. I have raked from the surface of the yard where we live flints enough to make walks around the house and to the distant parts of the lot, and yet there are many stones left.

The historical interest of San Antonio centers in the famous old Alamo, which stands in the business center of the city. I cannot express the emotions I felt when I stood for the first time on the spot where David Crockett, fell, and as I entered the room where Col. Bowie was murdered by the bloodthirsty minions of the fiendish Santa Anna. I had read the history of the Alamo but a few days before I visited the building, and it was all fresh in my mind; the heroic conduct of the 171 Texans who held the Alamo against the army of Santa Anna, which numbered 7,000, until their amunition gave out, when the walls were scaled by the Mexicans and every man was murdered. The Alamo was one of the many missions built by the Spanish monks from Mexico. It was built in 1718, and soon became the most important stronghold of the Catholic church. Two miles south of the center of the city is the ruin of the old mission of LaConception, built in 1735, by Franciscan monks, or rather by poor Indians under the coercion of the monks. A chapel in LaConception is still in use.

Two miles still further south is the ruin of the mission of San Jose, the most extensive of this series of ancient churches and fortresses. The main entrance to San Jose was a very fine piece of sculptured architecture, but it now shows the havoc of age and vandalism. Within a year or two the magnificent carved doors have been torn out and destroyed by the ignorant greasers who know little and care less about historical treasures. The natives are too lazy to take care of such things and so make no effort to preserve the remaining evidences of Spanish invasion. Another two miles south takes the visitor to the ruins of the mission of San Juan, and so they go, two miles apart. One cannot conceive of the idea the old monks had in building these great missions at such short intervals, but they built them, and could the old walls tell their stories what tales of wrong doing, force and human brutality they would be. There would be repetitions of the stories of the days of Torquemada and the Spanish Inquisition.

Those old Spanish monks knew how to make the rich soil of this section most productive, and had a most elaborate system of irrigation, as is shown by the remains of their acequias, or irrigating ditches. They are to be seen in every part of this region, now dry and useless. Where once were fertile fields now are dreary stretches of mesquite brush and cactus.

Standing on the hills that surround the city, whichever way you look you see acres of this same pest, the mesquite brush, with here and there a Spanish dagger palm. I cannot see how they can let such verdure grow, to kill out other kinds of vegetation. Still it is about the only kind of thing that will grow where they have such long seasons of drouth, without irrigation. That and the cactus.

The population of San Antonio is very cosmopolitan. You will see nearly every race represented on her streets, but I think that some of the most villanous faces that I ever saw I have seen in San Antonio. For ignorant, brutal, crafty, treacherous, vindictive visages the greasers take the palm. I pass faces every day that make me shiver and involuntarily step out of the way, and cast a furtive glance to see if there is not the point of a stilletto visible under the edge of the blanket thrown over the shoulder.

I think that honesty is a virtue that never is to be found in a greaser. They will cheat you if the slightest opportunity occurs, and if discovered will grin and tell you that it is all right and that everybody cheats. I have found that I have to be on the alert all the time, and am getting so that I doubt everybody I have any dealings with. I went down to the market the other day to buy a load of wood. I saw one that I liked the looks of and stepped up to the Mexican and asked him the price. I thought it very reasonable, and was about to conclude the bargain when something prompted me to examine the load. I peered under the row of sticks that rested on the edge of the wagon box and made the discovery that the box was empty. Sticks were fastened across the box about an inch from the top and the wood was piled on them, making it look as if there was a good load, when it was all in sight on top of the box; as if the box was turned upside down and then a few armsful of wood rounded up on top.

I immediately called the Mexican a cheat and asked him if he thought that was right to cheat people that way. He merely grinned and said that his load was cheap anyway, and that everybody did the same. I then examined every load on the market and found that he was right. I then went to a wood yard and after asking the price of a load of wood, ordered one delivered at my cottage. The dealer was a Texan. When I came to pile up my wood I found that there was not more than half what was shown me as a load for the price at the wood yard. The Mexican was right. They all do it.

San Antonio is the Paradise of the money lender, for here they get from ten to fifteen per cent. per month. 'Tis a sorry day for any unlucky wight who is obliged to get into their clutches. The Shylocks easily find ways to evade the usury laws, and do not hesitate to do so at all times.

One of the most unpleasant features of life in San Antonio is the vast number of dogs. It is the fashion to own at least one, and the more vicious the canine the better. But the majority of the citizens do not stop at one or two, many have yards full, and such dogs! Not only has LaVern Jr., been bitten, but they have tasted the flavor of my calves, and I have a deadly enmity to San Antonio dogs. A man passing quietly along one of the streets a few days ago was nearly torn to pieces by dogs that flew upon him from a door yard he was passing. The incident inspired the following:

DOGS.

Palermo has her brigandage
It seems she can't abate;
And Rome, too, has her Pontine marsh
Where thousands meet their fate.
Old Naples has her beggar hordes,
And Florence has her fleas;
Vienna has her parasites
That bleed your purse with ease.

N. York is cursed with thievish rings
Chicago is the same;
New Orleans has her Mafia,
And how she hates the name.
New Jersey has her "skeeters" and Old London has her fogs;
Brazil is cursed with fevers, but
Old San Antone has dogs.
Until my next, adieu.

LAVERNE F. WHEELER.

WILLIAM ASTOR CHANLER.

Explorer Chanler who is returning from a successful expedition to parts of Africa heretofore unvisited by white men, is only 25 years of age. He is a New Yorker, a graduate of Harvard, and a great grandson of the first John Jacob Astor. He paid all the expenses of his expedition and discovered among other things the Jombene mountains.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Julia G. Brown, mother of our former townsman, Millard P. Brown, died, after a brief illness at the home of her daughter, Lillie E. Brown, at 1059 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, on Wednesday evening, Feb. 21st 1894.

The maiden name of deceased was Julia Gates. She was born in Livonia, Livingston Co., N. Y., October 10th, 1824, and her early years were passed in that place. On the 1st of September, 1847, she was united in marriage to John C. Brown, at Rochester, N. Y., where they lived about five years. In 1852 they came to Michigan and settled in Raisin where they resided many years and reared a family of children. The remains, accompanied by her daughter Lillie and her sons Albert and Fred, were brought to Raisin Valley for burial, and the services were held at the Friends' Church at the Valley on Saturday forenoon, Feb. 24th. Her husband was buried in the Valley cemetery 28 years ago and it was her request to be laid by his side. The venerable Richard Harkness officiated, who also preached her husband's funeral sermon twenty-eight years before. The services were exceedingly impressive and were listened to by a large gathering of the old friends and neighbors of the deceased.

During her son's residence in our village she was a frequent visitor here and formed many friendships in Tecumseh. She was a woman of intellectual tastes and very decided convictions on all subjects. Though her earthly life was spent in a humble sphere, she had fitted herself, by her faithful discharge of every duty as neighbor, wife and mother, and by her faithful service of the Master, to enter the better Kingdom when the summons came. A mother in Israel has passed on to her eternal reward.

Mrs. Maranda Neely died at her home in the town of Cambridge, Feb. 15th, 1894, of quick consumption, aged 33 years, 8 months and 7 days. She was ill about eleven months and bore her sufferings with great fortitude. She was the daughter of L. D. Dewey of Raisin Valley. Her childhood was passed in that town, where she had many old friends who will sincerely mourn her departure.

Oh how little may we reckon
On the fleeting joys of life;
But little do we know what
To-morrow will bring forth.

Sad indeed, to dwell upon it,
When the rain was falling fast,
And upon that stormy Saturday
Not a word of mirth was passed.

In the household where the husband
Mourns her loss, for she hath fled,
And her rocking chair is empty,
And the world pronounced her dead.

Say not dead; her spirit liveth,
Faith she had to anchor well,
And of her glad, safe arrival,
Methinks angels love to tell.

How he wished he could have been there
O, if he had only known
That kind and loving father,
Consolation might atone.

Not a little for the anguish
He is striving to endure,
Had he but that farewell token
From that daughter's lips so pure.

And that long, long watch is over,
And her weary feet at rest,
And her tired hands are folded
Across her peaceful breast.

All her pain and suffering ended;
She has heard the Master's call;
She is not dead, but sleeping
In her casket on the hill.
So, my friends, now cease your weeping,
For it is the Father's will.

The Fire Department in every city could not do better than to keep a dozen bottles of Salvation Oil at each station. It instantly relieves all burns, scalds and bruises, and in a few days makes an effectual cure of the wound. 25 cents.

OBITUARY.

Mary A. Jones was born May 22d, 1814, at Monmouthshire, England. Crossing the ocean with her parents, she came to America when eight years of age. She first settled with the family in Philadelphia, Penn., but moved from there to Rochester, N. Y., where she was married to Wm. Franklin Doke in 1833. After residing there a few years, Mr. and Mrs. Doke moved to Owosso, Mich., and in 1845 they came to Tecumseh, making this their permanent home. To them were born eight children, five of whom are still living. Mrs. Doke was received a communicant of St. Peter's church in Dec., 1863, and since that time has been a member of the congregation, receiving communion privately the last time two months ago. She was a woman of rare qualities and industrious habit. Being very fond of reading, the latter part of her life was mostly spent in this way. Her chief study was the Bible, which she read through twenty-four times. She was a very generous and sympathizing woman and a kind and loving mother. After living to the advanced age of nearly 80 years, she departed this life on the 17th of February, leaving many loved ones to mourn the loss of a good and noble woman.

Those who fall by the wayside do not get credit even for the mileage they earned.

The Rev. J. Phelps preached for Mr. Blachford last Friday evening. The sermon was on the text "we will not have this man reign over us." In explanation of the words the preacher showed it is the baptized who are willing to have Jesus reign over them and to place themselves as subjects under Him.

If you want painting or papering done this spring call on Geo. Matteson. He is an expert in both lines, having thoroughly learned his trade. The personality of a famous man can at times be brought delightfully close to us, and this is particularly true of the picture we get of Nathaniel Hawthorne in his youngest daughter's description of "My Father's Literary Methods" in the March Ladies Home Journal. Truly is the curtain that has so long hidden Hawthorne from view gently raised.

The report of Marshal Stevens, presented at the Council last evening contained these items. One hundred and ten tramps were given lodging in February. One hundred and eighty-seven have applied for lodging since Dec. 7th. Seven were fed during the snow blockade by order of President Smith. Twenty-five were fed at the expense of the township. Ten were arrested for vagrancy and served from 20 to 30 days in jail.

The Friends church has taken about twenty new members since their revival meetings began in January, and last Sunday morning a special service was held to welcome them as new communicants. Rev. Fistler gave a very fine discourse in the nature of advice and admonition to those who had assumed the church vows and then extended to each one the hand of fellowship. The edifice was crowded and the services made a deep impression upon the auditors.

A special service was held at the Baptist church last Sabbath morning which will long be remembered by those present. Thirty-six new members, who have united with the church since January 1st, were formally welcomed as communicants by the pastor. After preliminary services and an address to the new members, Mr. Smith welcomed each one in a few effecting remarks, extending to them the right hand of fellowship. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was then observed by the communicants of the church. The services throughout were very interesting and deeply impressive.

The lecture by Dr. Hedley, at the Baptist Church on Monday evening, fitly closed a most successful entertainment course. The central thought of the lecturer was that man's true happiness is found within himself, regardless of station or circumstance, that genuine happiness is to be found only in contentment. His talk was interspersed with many happy illustrations which kept his audience in the best of humor. It was a fine literary effort and served as a treat to an audience that filled the church.

Eastern Star Installation at Adrian.

A chapter of the Eastern Star, Masonic, order was instituted at Adrian last Tuesday evening, and upon invitation thirty of our Tecumseh members of the order visited that city to take charge of the installation of the new officers. The following Tecumseh members made up the party: Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Avery, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bryan, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Orr, Mrs. A. Hardenburgh, Mrs. E. B. Wood, Mrs. M. E. Corey, Mesdames R. A. Heesen, Geo. Knapp, R. M. Boyd, A. R. Boyd, Richard Gillespie, S. Catlin, H. Osborn, T. R. Kyle, B. Cozier, W. R. Blachford, Misses Hattie Conklin, Ella Chilson, Sena Hosmer, Linda Hall, Grace Gillespie, Messrs. J. H. Smith, B. J. Garlinghouse, W. D. Reed and G. B. Garlinghouse; just thirty in all. They went to Adrian on the Jackson train and upon their arrival were taken in hand at once by a committee of Adrian Masons, and conveyed to the Lawrence where supper was served. At the installing ceremony, Mrs. E. B. Wood acted as Worthy Matron and Mrs. A. Hardenburgh as instituting officer.

At the close of the exercises, the invited guests and Adrian members to the number of nearly 100, were escorted to Major Howell's residence, where a banquet was served. Carriages were then in waiting, and the Tecumseh visitors were conveyed to the depot and took the night train for home, which had been held for them. Mr. and Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Hardenburgh, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. A. R. Boyd and Mrs. Blachford remained over night to complete the installation of the new officers. The Adrian Chapter starts out most auspiciously with about fifty charter members. The Tecumseh visitors were captivated with the cordial and hospitable manner in which they were entertained, and hope they may have an opportunity some time to return the compliment.

A BANK ROBBED.

Bold Thieves Rifle the Vault of a Dexter Savings Institution.

They Sandbag the Assistant Cashier After Forcing Him to Open the Vault—After Stealing $3,200 They Escape, Leaving No Clew.

LOCAL CROOKS SUSPECTED.

DEXTER, March 3.—O. C. Gregory, assistant cashier of the Dexter savings bank, was sandbagged and the vault robbed of $3,200 at 7:10 o'clock Thursday morning. The bank stands facing the principal street in the heart of the town. At a few minutes to 8 ex-Representative Newkirk, the cashier, entered the bank. Not seeing Gregory he supposed he had stepped out before opening for business. A moment later, noticing the vault doors partly open, he went to investigate, and found Gregory lying inside in an unconscious condition. Money was scattered loosely about the vault. Newkirk immediately gave the alarm. It was some time after assistance was called before Gregory was restored to consciousness, and then he was in a nervous condition. He told the following story:

"I reached the bank at 7 o'clock as usual and began sweeping out and preparing things for business. I had emptied the ash pan in the back yard and was returning through the rear door when the front door opened and two masked men with revolvers appeared. They called to me to make no outcry or they would shoot, and when they reached me I was ordered to open the vault. The vault lock is a time one and ran out at 7 o'clock, and the thieves evidently knew that the time had expired. They threatened to shoot if I did not open the lock and I did it. Just as the bolts were sprung one of the men hit me over the head and I lost consciousness."

Gregory could not give any description of his assailants. He says he was taken completely by surprise and as his back, after the first moment of meeting, was turned to the burglars, he had no chance to note any peculiarities about the dress or person of his assailants. Gregory is a young man of model habits, and is ambitious and a hard worker. No suspicion attaches to him.

Cashier Newkirk says it looked as if the men had been frightened away before securing all the funds. There was fully $5,000 in currency in the vault and of this $1,800 was dropped on the floor. It was not the dropping of a single package, for both coin and bills were scattered all over the floor. The time lock was fixed to run out at 7 because the bank opens soon after that time.

There is not the slightest clew. No one was seen either entering or leaving the bank. Exit was made by way of the back door. Careful inquiry fails to reveal trace of strangers having either entered or left the town for several days. The fact that all the talk and investigation have led to nothing to show the presence in the town or on the country roads of strangers is fixing the idea more firmly in the minds of Dexter people that the job was worked by local crooks.

A DOCTOR'S SUICIDE.

He Cut the Arteries in Both Legs, Stabbed Himself and Cut His Throat.

He severed an artery at the heel, cut the arteries in both legs above the knee, stabbed himself in the breast and then cut his throat. McKillop was a clever physician. He was unmarried. The night before he disappeared he called upon some of the citizens and said persons were after him for the purpose of taking his life. Circumstances show that he was deranged.

SLAIN BY A THIEF.

Terrible Tragedy Enacted in a Michigan Home.

Burglars Enter the Residence of a Tax Collector Near Dundee—They Kill His Wife, Badly Wound Him and Escape with $780.

BURGLARS BECOME MURDERERS.

DUNDEE, March 1.—About 11 o'clock Tuesday night two men entered the house of Henry Geierman, township treasurer of Exeter township, through a window in the dining-room and entered the bedroom. The noise aroused Mrs. Geierman, who got up to see what it was, awakening her husband at the same time. As she rose up she was shot through the head and instantly killed.

Mr. Geierman seized one of the men by the arm and was shot through the leg. He then grappled with the man and threw him against a window, knocking it completely out, sash and all, when he was knocked in the head by the second man, the blow knocking him senseless. When he recovered consciousness he started for neighbors for assistance, but the murderers had flown, leaving no trace behind. They secured $780, which was in the bed. There was also $375 that was hid in another part of the bed they did not find.

The mother leaves two small children, one 4 years and the other 15 months old. The robbers must have been local talent, as they seemed to know the time to do the deed, as Geierman had just finished collecting the taxes for the township that day. They also knew the lay of the house. Geierman will recover.

The Republican's Best Newspaper.

The N. Y. Tribune's party is now in a minority in the national administration, but The Tribune makes a brave showing for the Republican and continues to advocate their principles with its historic ability and earnestness of purpose. Any Democrat who wants to know what the Republicans think and intend, and wishes to obtain the best information from a paper whose utterances are authoritative, can get Republican doctrine, pure, undefiled, and fresh from the fire, in the columns of The New York Tribune. As an agricultural weekly The Tribune is an excellent newspaper. Its market reports are especially accurate, complete and reliable, and they commend it to all who want current prices and the views of the trade. There are reasons why a daily or family wishes (in addition to the home daily) a weekly newspaper, which it will certainly have, whether it takes a daily or not) to enjoy the perusal of the best editorials, foreign letters, book reviews and special articles of a newspaper which is edited for the country at large and devotes its attention to matters of national and general moment. In the choice of general newspapers, this winter, our readers will do well to consider The New York Tribune. Its price is low, $1 a year; and its columns are crammed with strong, brilliant and entertaining matter. It is announced that the paper will continue to print the writings of Roswell G. Horr, of Michigan, on the tariff, Reciprocity, Coinage and Currency, and The Tribune's strong editorial page and many special political features of interest, including two pages a week of Agricultural papers on special branches of Farming. The Tribune has undertaken to illustrate the news of the day and has an excellent Art Department. An illustrated Premium List and a sample copy will be sent, free, to any applicant.

be local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Jas. B. and John Hause were both in Adrian Tuesday to attend the suit of J. B. against the Lake Shore road for killing his horse last summer.

James McDermott, who has been in the far west for several years, returned Saturday last and expects to spend some time with his mother, Mrs. Frank McDermott.

The last entertainment of the Lecture Course was given by Rev. Con. Haney, and was largely attended. The best of satisfaction was given. Subject, "Ireland and the Irish."

The mid-week service at St. John's Episcopal church this Thursday evening, Rev. W. R. Blackford will be assisted by Rev. Mr. Channer, of Adrian, who will preach the sermon.

James B. Hause has a suit in the Circuit Court this term against the Lake Shore road for killing a horse in the summer of 1893. Several Clinton people were in Adrian last Friday as witnesses.

Richmond, Gadd & Hogan made a shipment of stock Saturday, Ted Codling going with them. He returned home Monday night accompanied by his brother, Will, who is convalescing from a severe illness.

The woolen mill was shut down Monday forenoon for want of oil, as they supposed, but a large quantity was discovered in their reserve tank, the pipes of which had become clogged. This was speedily overcome and the mill run as usual in the afternoon.

Con Haney closed the lecture course Monday evening with a powerful lecture on "Ireland and the Irish." The lecture committee are entitled to the thanks of the community, for they have given our citizens one of the best and most instructive courses ever had in Clinton.

The services at St. John's Episcopal church last Sunday were of more than ordinary interest. There was a large congregation present, and many communed. At the close of the morning service, before Sunday school, the sacrament of baptism was administered to 26 children, the largest number at one time in the history of the church. This was a beautiful sight, and the ceremony was most impressive. During morning service next Sunday baptism will be administered to adults.

The corporation caucus was called to meet at the Town Hall Monday evening, at 7 o'clock, but owing to the lecture it was decided to hold it in the council room. It was found to be altogether too small, so after selecting a chairman and secretary, they adjourned to meet in the hall at the close of the lecture, and such a caucus was never known in Clinton's history. It was most exciting yet the best of feeling prevailed. The following candidates were nominated:

President—W. D. VanTuyle.
Trustees—F. D. Lancaster, M. F. McClure, B. G. Woodard.
Clerk—J. B. McAdam.
Treasurer—C. H. Thompson.
Assessor—J. V. Amspoker.
Street Com'r—Henry Starrett.
Constable—M. D. Lancaster.

The village caucus held last Monday evening to put in nomination a corporation ticket deserves more than a passing notice or a six line item. When a simple caucus calls out nearly every registered voter in the village there must be some cause at the bottom of it. The "Huntington clique," as it is known here, resolved to capture the primary and thus control the corporation election. Owing, perhaps, to a misunderstanding of the law no call for a caucus was issued, but Mr. H. was on hand with his retainers at seven o'clock sharp, prepared to run the caucus in Boss Tweed fashion. Many of our citizens who are quite as much interested in the welfare of the community as our portly friend Huntington, who have lived here all their lives and always contributed liberally to public improvements do not take kindly to having a man who has but recently become a tax payer, control wholly our municipal affairs. These citizens were also on hand to assert their rights. Enough of them crowded into the council room to perfect a legal organization, and as the room would not hold half the crowd, an adjournment was taken to the Town Hall at the close of Con Haney's lecture given that evening. Mr. H. was violently opposed to taking an adjournment, but he was finally overruled by wiser heads. The caucus reassembled at the close of the lecture and the Town Hall itself was none too large to accommodate the crowd. A red hot contest ensued. Both factions put up a full ticket and the friends of fair play and opponents of "one man power" selected their ticket from top to bottom. The ticket is non-political in character, but a better ticket was never nominated in Clinton, and it will be elected next Monday. The "one man power" faction was so strongly outnumbered, thanks to the management of Ed Van De Mark and others, that after the second nomination they gracefully beat a retreat. The outcome has cleared the municipal atmosphere of Clinton very thoroughly.

The Colorado beetle, or potato bug, has waked up early this year, and what he proposes to subsist upon until after the farmers get through planting is a mystery. Friday night at Marshall two tramps on the passenger train going west were stealing a ride, and turned the stop cock of the air breaks. The train ran two lengths beyond the station before it could be stopped. The tramps were arrested and brought to Jackson Saturday afternoon. They will be prosecuted to the extent of the law. Luckily no damage resulted from the turning off of the air brakes. It will be remembered that one of the theories of the cause of the great accident on the Michigan Central at Jackson was that the stop cock of the air brakes had been turned by tramps.

Mr. Sovereign should add to the force of his remarks by having them expurgated before making them public.

It will stand at the corner of Chicago and Evans street across Evans street from the Lilley House. Alfred James the owner of the site, will build the first story and one-half of the second story. The Masons will construct the north half of the second story and the whole of the third story, and own that part of the block. Their part of the second floor will contain a parlor, kitchen and banquet room and the third floor will be used for a main lodge hall and ante rooms. The $5,000 required for their portion has been pledged and work will begin very soon.

Scribner's Magazine for March opens with the second article by Joel Chandler Harris on 'The Sea Island Hurricanes'—this one dealing especially with the great relief work which is being conducted by Miss Clara Barton and the Red Cross Society. The distress in these islands is likely to increase until the first crop shall be gathered in the late Spring, so that the necessity is apt to be direst at a time when the public has, for the most part, lost interest in the catastrophe. Mr. Harris, in his tour for Scribner's Magazine through all these islands, has presented not only the distressing part of the catastrophe but the humorous side of it which the sea-island negro so plentifully furnishes.

The Outlook.

The Outlook (formerly the Christian Union) will in the year 1894 give its readers more matter than ever before, and will extend its scope and variety in many ways. This weekly journal, now about twenty-five years old, remains under the editorship of the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott (who is Henry Ward Beecher's successor, both in the pulpit of Plymouth Church and the editorship of this paper) and of Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie, who is familiar as that of the author of several books of charming literary and social essays, and as that of a lecturer on similar topics and an experienced journalist. They are assisted by an editorial staff which has just been enlarged and by many specialists in the lines of theology, political economy, literature and other subjects, whose services are called upon as circumstances require. It publishes also each week many signed articles by writers of ability; follows with care all the important philanthropic and industrial movements of the day; has an excellent department of religious news under the especial care of the Rev. Dr. A. H. Bradford; maintains a Home Department which is rich in suggestion and entertainment for women readers; prints stories and sketches for the young in every issue; reviews and comments upon current literature; furnishes constantly bright and cheerful table talk about men and things—and in short, aims to give the family, the student, the preacher, and the general reader fresh information, original and sensible observation and reasonable entertainment. In our beautiful GUIDE for the year ninety-four.

While the artist and typo its riddles unfold.

'Tis the amateur's joy and the gardener's delight.
All of Vick's latest novelties here you will find
To gladden the eye and enoble the mind.
The Hibiscus Sunset, the Sweet Charmer Pea,
Florence Eddy Carnation, New Anemone,
Morning Glory (Brazillian), which heralds the dawn,
And Vick's Branching Aster, the queen of the lawn,
The American Wonder and the Murphy potato,
The Bright Royal Red and the Buckeye tomato.
And dozens of others these pages disclose,
From the "mum" and the hop to the poppy and rose.
While the pioneer standards, that always appear
In the message we've sent out for many a year,
Which our patrons have trusted and tried heretofore,
Are crowding these pages as never before.
And this marvel of beauty (now mark the expense),
Can be bought with an outlay of only Ten Cents;
And even this trifle—as proof of good deeds,
We return to the sender when ordering seeds.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

E. Tindall, of Tecumseh, was in the village Monday.

Born, to Rev. and Mrs. Canfield on the 6th inst., a girl.

Mrs. Ed. Palmer is under the doctor's care at present with heart difficulty.

Mrs. John Arner has been under the doctor's care during the past week threatened with pneumonia.

Rev. J. P. Varner, of Tecumseh, will occupy the pulpit here next Sunday morning, nothing preventing.

The subject next Sunday evening at the M. E. church will be "Fasting as illustrated in the life of Elijah." All are welcome.

Mrs. Edith Montgomery and children left last week Wednesday for an indefinite stay with Mrs. Minnie Bowers, of Warren, Pa.

The next meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. Ed. Baker near the Grange hall, Macon, on Wednesday of next week.

Christopher Pocklington after being sick a week with pneumonia died Saturday morning. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at his late home. His wife's funeral was held the Saturday morning before.

A week from Sunday being Easter, Rev. Cansfield will present an appropriate discourse for the occasion at the morning service, and the Sabbath school will furnish a very interesting programme for the evening service.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

A little son to Mr. and Mrs. John Thielan. Congratulations.

How many eggs have you hidden in the hay-mow, for Easter, boys and girls?

H. C. Daniels and wife are at present enjoying the Mid-winter Fair, but expect to start for home about April 1st, we understand.

J. S. Pentecost still tarries in Detroit, and his "better half" will need to go and look after him soon if he continues "courting" much longer.

The robins and blackbirds are here, especially the latter, in large numbers, and they literally make the woods ring with their saucy chatter.

W. B. German started two plows Tuesday, plowing for oats. They will get a pretty early start, if they dont happen to get frozen before they get up.

Albert and Willard Vanderpool will be remembered with calls and visits by their friends these days, no doubt. For why? Because they are making first rate maple syrup, of course.

If the present high drying winds continue much longer, it will have a tendency to affect "the visible supply of wheat," much more disastrously, we fear, than all the "bull and bears" of Wall street or Chicago, but it is also dimishing the mud "in sight."

One of the most fruitful subjects of discussion now-a-days is the mud, and it is a topic about which a great deal can be said without exhausting it, for it is a deep subject in every sense of the word, at this writing, March 12th.

Our burg received a surprise the other day. A resident, on his way to the post office, last week, met two women on the railroad track, enginering for Pentecost, and it was found they had just passed through the place, and never suspected it. They then came back and tried to rent the hall for the purpose of enlightening the people, on the subject of their new sect "The Flying Roll." One of them called herself the wife of Prince Michael. The people refused to entertain them, so they shook the dust of Pentecost from their feet, and continued counting the ties toward Toledo.

Raisin Valley Seminary.

Spring is here.

A public auction at the Stanley farm, occurs Tuesday.

Otis Hoadly is in school again, after two week's absence.

Miss Mable Graves was not able to attend to school work last week.

A declamatory contest will take place next Friday evening, at the Seminary. It will be worth anyone's time to attend.

We invite women, who suffer from periodical headaches or other nervous troubles peculiar to women to write Mrs. Lena Cooper, 1534 Lorain Street, Cleveland, O., with stamp, to hear how terribly she suffered and Doctors could not help her, but was cured by Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer. Sold by Orr & Temple.

"He has no more influence", said a Hartford wit, "he has no more influence than 'p' in pneumonia."

It is by all odds the best liniment. Mr. Chas. Metzger, 217 Geyer Ave., St. Louis, Mo., is of the same opinion. He says: "Salvation Oil is the best remedy we have ever used in our family. It is the best remedy on earth."

FRANKLIN FACTS.

G. W. Allen drove to Manchester Monday.

Sam Tripp has been bailing hay for Wm. Burtless.

There was a big crowd at Walter Osborne's auction, Thursday.

Pat Blair, a colored gentleman has taken some land of Ezra Simmons, to work and will live in the R. Langdon house.

At the school exhibition at Hampton's hall, Friday night, the house was packed, and many people were unable to gain admittance.

Remember the Lyceum at John Van Tuyle's, a week from Saturday night. The discussion of the question promises to be interesting.

Arthur Joseph was at work in Ed Wisner's well the fore part of the week; the pump was repaired, but when fixed, quicksand alone resulted.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Geo. Clark is able to be out again.

Frank Brown is able to be out again and is talking of going fishing.

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say, that in regretting her removal from our midst, we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our love and esteem.

Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to the family so deeply afflicted and that these resolutions be spread upon the records of the society and a copy of the same be sent to the bereaved by our secretary.

A GREAT ENTERPRISE.

Thousands Afflicted with Chronic Catarrh Find Cure Free.

In order to bring his great remedy for chronic catarrh in reach of everybody, Dr. Hartman invented the following method: Any one wishing to become one of his regular patients should send their name and address, when complete directions for treatment will be sent free of charge. Every patient is expected to report once a month. At no time is any charge made. The medicines can be obtained at any drug-store. The result has been a great beneficence to thousands of catarrh sufferers. The following is a sample case:

Patient, No. 1,627. Name, Lucius B. Cooper, of Biddle University, N. C. Commenced treatment December 16th, 1893. Writes February 21st, 1894: "I am thoroughly cured of my catarrh, which had been troubling me 8 years. I waited two weeks after I stopped the medicine to be sure I was thoroughly cured. I think that I would be doing wrong to keep such a wonderful cure secret. I shall do whatever I can to make it known wherever I go. I do not know how to express my praise for Peru-na or thanks to you."

Any one wishing to become a patient should send in his name and address at once, giving a list of the principal symptoms and the length of time the disease has run.

A BOOK SENT FREE.

A medical book, treating of chronic catarrh, la grippe, cough, colds, and consumption, will be sent, prepaid, for a short time to any address, by The Peru-na Drug Manufacturing Co., of Columbus, Ohio.

A HOUSEHOLD TREASURE.

Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follows its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable, G. A. Dykeman, Druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

A few gallons of maple syrup will be taken on subscriptions at this office. We want this year's make however.

The T. & F. Farmers Club will meet to-morrow evening, March 16th, at T. C. Payne's. The program arrived too late for insertion.

G. W. Mead, Agt. of I. O. O. F. Mutual Aid Accident Ins. Co. of Piqua, Ohio, received to-day a check for $30.00, and also one for $40.00 for Vern M. Smith.

Rev. F. C. Fistler has gone to Gobleville to assist in a series of revival meetings. He expects to return next week. Regular services Sunday in the Friends church will be conducted by Mary C. Wood.

E. N. Coller sold a sewing machine last week. There is nothing strange about that for he sells lots of sewing machines, but the manner in which it was paid for made it a peculiar sale. It was a new Goodrich machine, price $30, and the pay was wholly in copper cents. He had a shoe box full of coppers, which weighed just twenty pounds.

Michigan School for the Blind.

This School, located at Lansing, is maintained by the state, and affords a comprehensive education for those who are blind or of such defective vision that they are prevented from receiving instruction in the public schools.

Board and tuition are free to all pupils whose parents or guardians are residents of the state.

In all, ten teachers are employed. The literary work comprises all the branches usually taught in the common and high schools of the state.

In music, instruction is given in voice training, and pupils learn to play upon the piano, organ, flute and violin. Brass instruments are used by many. Piano tuning is one of the trades taught and a large number of graduates of this school now earn a comfortable living by means of a trade acquired at the school. Plain and fancy sewing, by hand and on the machine, knitting, crochetting and similar work are taught the girls, and many are highly proficient in this difficult art. Broom-making is at present the only manual trade taught; an appropriation was made by the legislature of 1893 which when available will enable the introduction of other trades, such as carpet and rug weaving, hammock, fly-net and fish-net making. It is expected that through the advantages afforded by the generous provision of the state each pupil will acquire such an education as will, in a great measure, enable him to support himself.

If any of our readers know of a child who may be entitled to admission to to this school, they will confer a favor by sending the name and address to the Superintendent of the School for the Blind, Lansing, Mich.

Table Talk.

It is a generally admitted characteristic of the Americans that they are always anxious to excel in every direction, hence it is not so surprising that 'Table Talk,' comes to us this month very full of new ideas and worthy of its reputation as the American authority upon all culinary and household topics. The menus for the month are practical and economical, and the Housekeeper's Inquiry Department will be a delight to every woman interested in her home, as will also an article on 'Healthful Dwellings.' Those interested in 'Irish Laces and Linens" will be glad to read the short sketch of Mrs. Ernest Hart's struggle to give to Donegal its present well-deserved fame. Published by Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia. Price, $1.00 per year. Sample copy free.

The new forage plant Lathyrus, introduced recently from Germany, has produced according to the report of the Michigan Experiment Station, four tons of hay per acre on light sandy soil at one cutting. It affords excellent pasturage. Will stand the severest drought and extreme cold. Lasts fifty years without re-seeding. Three sample packets of seed with full particulars concerning this new plant and complete 100 page catalogue can be had for twenty-five cents by addressing Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago and New York. OUR FERRIS WHEEL PORTFOLIO.

The Best Offer Yet, which Needs Neither Dimes nor Coupons.

Among all the World's Fair Portfolios which have come under our notice, there is nothing finer than the one containing views taken from the Ferris Wheel. There is only one number, and that one is a beauty. It contains a portrait of Geo. W. Ferris, the engineer and constructor, a full and detailed description of the wheel itself, and thirteen views taken therefrom. Any person can obtain this art gem on two conditions.

1st—He must be a paid subscriber to the HERALD.

2d—His subscription must be paid in advance to the end of the year 1894.

New subscribers can obtain it by paying till Jan. 1st next. Old subscribers can have a copy by paying arrearages and in advance through 1894. Old subscribers, who have promptly paid already for this year, can have a copy by taking the trouble to call for it.

How long will this offer run? Just thirty-one days, ladies and gentlemen, and not five minutes longer. It begins to-day, March 1st, and will end on Saturday, March 31st, the night before All Fool's Day. Now, hustle up and take advantage of it forthwith. Don't wait until the last day in the afternoon and then forget it. We have a large invoice of the books on hand and there are plenty more where these came from, so there is no danger of the supply becoming exhausted.

THE EXCHANGE COLUMN.

We have concluded to try the experiment of running an exchange column for a few weeks, on trial. It will begin the first week in April. It will afford, we believe, an admirable medium through which farmers and all other persons can buy, sell or exchange personal property to advantage. If Mr. A. has a horse to sell and wishes a good milch cow let him make his wants known through the exchange column, and the chances are nine out of ten he can make the change desired. Small articles of little value, household furniture, live stock of all kinds, farming utensils, can readily be sold, bought or exchanged by this method at a nominal cost. The rate will be only five cents a line for each insertion, but no notice will be inserted for less than fifteen cents. Below are a few sample notices to show how the scheme may be utilized:

I wish to exchange a good cow for a few bushels of clover seed. Address John Peters, Ridgeway, Mich.

A good bookcase, capable of holding 500 volumes, will be sold at half price if taken before May 1st. Write to Jack, Macon, Mich.

I want a good span of work horses suitable for farm work, for which I will pay either wheat, oats or corn at the regular market price. Call on or address Rustic, Tipton, Mich.

A bicycle, which I have outgrown, will be exchanged for anything you think I would like. I am 14 years old. The machine is all in good order. Write for particulars to Chas. French, Tecumseh, Mich.

I have a black and white goat, broken to harness, which will easily draw a child of ten years. Will sell for $10, or exchange for a melodeon. Make me an offer. Address, Goat, Box 14, Clinton, Mich.

I will exchange a bow and violin (both in good order) for a flute in the same condition. The violin when new cost $15. Address C. R. J., Onsted, Mich.

A dozen selected Brahma eggs will be exchanged for the same quantity of Leghorn, or will sell for $2.00. Address Henry A., Box 403, Adrian, Mich.

An uninjured copy of "Ben Hur," will be given for a copy of any other work by Lew Wallace. Write to Harry Sullivan, Britton, Mich.

Reduced rates will also be made for three "Land Seeker's Excursions," as follows: On Feb. 8th, March 8th and April 9th, 1894, round trip Iron Clad tickets, limited to continuous passage, with final return limit, 20 days from date of sale may be sold at One Lowest First Class Fare for Round Trip to all points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and points in Georgia as far east as Augusta and on and west of a line drawn from Augusta to Millon, Eastman, Abbeville and Albany; then down the Flint River to River Junction, including points in Florida west of River Junction; also to New Orleans, La.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 15, 1894.

The Senate finance committee have finally reported the tariff bill, and "senatorial courtesy" can now proceed to talk it to death.

The opinion is growing among thinking men that some method should be devised to take the tariff question entirely out of politics.

The trusts had their own way under the McKinley law, and it makes them madder than hatters that they cannot have their own way under the Wilson bill.

It is estimated that the proposed sugar tax will take $30,000,000 annually out of the people. Isn't this a pretty high price to pay for Louisiana's two votes in the Senate?

Now that Attorney-General Olney has rendered a decision to the effect that silver certificates are not money, he ought to go on and say that gold certificates, gold and silver coin, nickel and and copper are not money, if he is to be the judge.

"Once on the free list always on the free list" is good democrat doctrine and it is common sense too. It would be very poor policy to tax sugar when the necessary revenue can be raised by an income tax and an increased tax on whiskey.

The sugar barons have not yet given up the fight. As the prospects for continuing the sugar bounty are rather slim, they are turning their attention to the tariff, and making a big fight to put sugar back to the dutiable list. Time will tell whether they can succeed.

The Boston Herald says: Gladstone steps down, but Pope Leo still holds on at the Vatican, and his eighty-fourth birthday and the sixteenth anniversary of his coronation have found him in a condition to receive the congratulations of Christendom. The Pope now stands solitary and alone among the world's distinguished octogenarians who are still in harness.

We are glad the Bland bill has passed the House, and we hope it will pass the Senate, and receive the signature of the President. Under its provisions the Treasury Department is allowed to coin the silver seigniorage, which amounts to nearly $60,000,000, and then to go on and coin the bullion as fast as the mints of the country can do it; thus, it will not be long before the claims of the silver advocates can be either verified or disproved.

The champion mean man now hails from Connecticut. He courted a handsome schoolma'am for two years and then told her he could not afford to marry her "because he needed all his money to buy fertilizer with." The young woman was at first amazed and then indignant. She walked into court, and obtained $750 damages. The wretch who preferred dead bones to a live and pretty girl was served right.

"We believe that with absolutely no protective duty, the American Sugar Refining Co. can compete with the world in the manufacture of sugars and pay 6 per cent dividends on its $37,000,000 of common stock, which represents nothing but water." So says the Boston Commercial Bulletin in one column, and then in another it proceeds to lecture the Republican for hinting at the possibility of American competition with the world, under reduced rates, when labor here is so highly paid.

Senator Brice, of Ohio, is said to be working against the Wilson bill. The following item in a telegram from Washington under date of March 8th, may throw some light upon his strange position: "The story of Senator Brice's visit to Henry O. Havemeyer at the Arlington Hotel last night attracted much attention here to-day and was generally commented upon by the Senator's colleagues in both houses. Some of the comments were of a kind to disturb the peace of mind of the Senator from Ohio, but he paid little or no attention to what was said and declined to make any statement in his own defense.

The New York World, in commenting on the dilatory tactics of the Senate upon the tariff bill, says: "Everywhere among business men the feeling is that it matters comparatively little what the outcome of the struggle over the tariff schedules is to be, but that so long as the outcome is uncertain it is necessary to do business with extreme caution and only for the immediate present. Business men can adjust their operations to fit any known conditions, but in unknown conditions they see breakers ahead. Under the influences of this feeling the otherwise hopeful spring trade is being killed in advance.

A NEW FINANCIAL TEACHER.

He Is Smoked Out by a Colorado Friend of Silver.

Prof. Keasbey, of the university of Colorado, has an article in the Forum for January, explaining his view of the origin of the silver movement and how it has secured such a hold on the south. Prof. Keasbey's educational associations have been such as to make him "sound" on the coinage question, in the Wall street orthodox sense, and he has thus far escaped the silver craze, which is so deep-rooted in the west that it reminds him of the belief in religious dogma in the early Middle ages—the period of the densest ignorance known to Christendom.

"One hears it often said in the east," this writer tells us, "that the silver problem is strictly a business problem, to be decided along strictly business lines, by strictly business men. As far as the west is concerned there never was a more fatal delusion. That all-important question, whether gold has risen in value or silver has gradually fallen in comparison with our staple commodities, has, oddly enough, scarcely been considered by the western people." They know as a fact, he tells us, that the price of silver expressed in gold has fallen and to them it has seemed self-evident that the depreciation has been caused by the diminished demand for silver because of its demonetization. Hence, we are told, from the true single gold standard view, that "little credence has been put in the converse theory, that the decline in the price of silver is due to the continual cheapening in its cost of production."

Prof. Keasbey traces the silver movement to the self-interest of the silver miner and to his ability, by plausible but fictitious reasoning, to impose upon the gullibility of the hard-working but innocent farmer. The latter finds himself in debt, but the harder he labors and the more self-denial he exercises the greater the difficulty—or seeming difficulty—to get a decent living for his family and pay interest on the eastern mortgage. This condition becomes more and more apparent as the years pass and though the farmer discusses it vigorously with his neighbors, it is beyond their comprehension. This perplexity lasts until the silver miner comes along and realizing his inability to fight the money power of the east single handed, resolves at once "to enlighten his suffering brother and to draw him over to the cause of silver."

The miner assures the farmer that while he has been slaving on the prairies and enormously increasing the products of the United States, his eastern creditors have secretly stricken down one-half of the legal tender circulating medium granted by the fathers and have left "that particular half which has appreciated in value and which must in the future continuously appreciate in value;" that while the productions and business of the country have been multiplying in volume, the medium for making exchanges has been so reduced that there is not half enough of money left to carry on legitimate business transactions. The farmer is told that as a consequence of the reduced currency what he sold some years ago for a dollar he must now sell for fifty cents; that although he toils much harder he grows no richer, while the eastern creditor not only holds his own but also secures the fruit of the farmer's extra toil.

The farmer is "far too shrewd at first to be caught in any circle of reasoning so palpably vicious as this." But when he is reminded that he cannot pay the interest he owes the eastern creditor with "fifty-cent bits," and that the creditor has not remitted the indebtedness one-half to correspond with the reduction in the value of the farmer's labor or its products, the latter begins to see his relation to the silver question, or to use the language of Prof. Keasbey, "a ray of light then began to pierce the darkness of the farmer's understanding." Still he is a trifle incredulous as to the disinterestedness of his would-be ally in the cause of free coinage. He sees that its success would give the miner "a steady though fictitious price for his product. We are to support you in comparative idleness," he tells the miner, "receiving in payment for three days' labor by us an amount of your silver at the old fictitious ratio, which will cost you but one day's labor to extract." Finally the farmer is completely won over by the assurance that the miner will assist in augmenting the volume of the currency so that there will be sufficient to facilitate the business transactions made necessary by the productive and business developments of the last twenty years and so that farmers would receive profitable prices for what they have to sell and be able to release their homes from debt. The farmer, obtuse to other forms of reasoning, surrenders to self-interest. The miner clinches his victory by statistical tables showing that the decline in staple farm products for two decades paralled the decline in silver, thus proving that silver has steadily maintained its relation to these commodities and that the divergence between the present and former values of silver and gold has been mainly due to the appreciation of the latter, because of legislation that has given it a monopoly as money of redemption—legislation which has greatly increased the demand for gold and correspondingly diminished the demand for silver.

Self interest has at last so unified the silver miners and the farmers of the west on this question that Prof Keasbey hardly thinks it worth while to puncture the logic of the westerner's financial policy or prove his statistics to be fallacies and misleading, since it has, now become a sectional force rather than an abstract question of finance. Admitting the soundness of the financial views of the east, he is somewhat uneasy lest her apathy in the matter may have placed her in a critical position. There is danger of an alliance between the west and the south, the latter being yet undecided on the question, but the east is warned that for months past the west has had her emissaries hard at work drumming up recruits for the cause of silver, using much the same arguments as were so successful in hoodwinking the ranchmen of the plains. "Before the south, too, becomes solid on the silver question, should not the east bestir herself? * * * To the east we must look for the wisest solution of the monetary problem," is Prof. Keasbey's conclusion.

The professor's theory of the rise of the money question as a political and possible sectional factor is not correct. The agitation commenced with the farmers and not with the silver miners. Farmers have for the past fifteen years, in their own organizations, discussed the effects of adverse silver legislation in contracting the currency and inaugurating an era of falling prices; they produced able expositions on the subject, incontestably tracing to that cause the cruel increase of the burdens placed upon them in augmented indebtedness, occasioned by lessening the value of their labor and its products, long before the miner figured in the discussion. The latter was not heard from in a political way outside of congress until the price of silver fell to a point that materially interfered with the legitimate profits of mining—which was not until within three years. Prof. Keasbey has a mistaken conception of the western farmer, his character and the measure of his intelligence. He is also wrong about the south. Silver and its relation to the money supply have been live questions in the south for a dozen years. On the test vote in the lower branch of congress last summer ten southern states gave congressional majorities for free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1, and on that question the southern people are far stronger than their representation in congress would indicate.

The effect of cutting off the world's supply of primary money by about one-half, as outlined in the argument by which the astute miner mystified and imposed upon the rather dull-witted husbandman—as the issue is gauged by Prof. Keasbey—is concurred in by the most distinguished students of finance in the world, including the political economists of greatest note in the educational institutions of England. The fall in the price of commodities which has paralleled the period of silver's demonetization is rightfully charged to the enhancement of the unit of value and to the contraction of the medium of exchange resulting from the debasement of silver. Prof. Foxwell, of University college, London, places the appreciation of gold at fifty per cent. and is sustained in his estimate by very high authorities; while according to the index numbers of Dr. Soetbeer and Mr. Sauerbeck, exhibited at the Brussels conference, silver, despite increased production, has depreciated scarcely any, measured by its relation to fifty-odd of the most useful commodities.

The theory of over-production as an explanation for the fall in silver and for the disastrous general decline in the price of staple products is fallacious. The increased production of silver has not even kept pace with the enormous expansion of commerce for the last twenty years, nor can there be such a thing as over-production of the necessaries of life while millions in every nation of Christendom are not more than half fed and are insufficiently clothed and housed. The real trouble is under-consumption due to diminished purchasing power, and when it is analyzed in the light of the science of political economy, as interpreted by its most illustrious exponents, from Locke to Mill, it can be traced only to a supply of money that is wholly inadequate to the requirements of business, having in view the general welfare and not merely the pecuniary interests of a class.—Denver News.

The Precious Metals.

The annual report of Wells, Fargo & Co., just made public, shows the product of gold and silver in the states and territories west of the Missouri river (including British Columbia) to have been for the year 1893, gold $34,202,692; silver, $58,491,521. The net product of the states and territories west of the Missouri, exclusive of British Columbia and west coast of Mexico, was of silver, $34,491,521, and of gold, $33,948,523. The exports of silver during the past year to Japan, China, the Straits, etc., have been as follows: From London, $55,975,825; from San Francisco, $11,741,660. Total, $67,715,485, as against $67,342,524 last year. During the year 1893 the product of gold in Mexico was $16,514, and of silver $552,895,000. In Mexico there was coined during 1893, of gold dollars, $361,672; of silver dollars, $27,169,876.

Senator Jones' Warning.

Senator Jones, of Nevada, says that the solution of the present industrial problem is to give employment to every willing hand. This may be accomplished through the free coinage of silver. This expresses the whole situation in a nutshell. The world needs an increase in the circulating medium. A falling rate of interest, according to Senator Jones, indicates that money is becoming scarcer and dearer. The present conditions bear out this view. The government can float three per cent. bonds, but the people cannot obtain money with which to pay their debts. "If the people do not destroy the gold standard," says the Nevada senator, "the gold standard will destroy them." Surely the situation is such that the people must open their eyes to the truth of this warning.—Denver Times.

Silver a Legal Tender.

A learned contemporary offers as a panacea for existing trade troubles that a law be passed making silver a legal tender for all debts and dues. Silver is now by act of congress legal tender for all debts and dues, unless by special contract gold or something else is specified. The repeal of the Sherman law did not take away any legal tender quality from silver. It is just as good as gold as a common circulating medium, is so in fact as well as in law, with the sole exception of a contract, to the contrary, the validity of which no legislative power can violate. Silver is money, not a token or a substitute, and there is no use in denying the fact.—Salt Lake Herald.

DON'T NEGLECT

A Common Case of Piles—It May Lead to Serious Results.

When people generally understand that all such fatal diseases as fistula, ulcer of the rectum, fissure, etc., almost invariably begin in a simple case of Piles, they will learn the wisdom of taking prompt treatment for the first appearance of trouble in this quarter. The Pyramid Pile Cure will certainly cure every form of piles, itching, bleeding, protruding or blind piles, and hundreds of lives have been saved by using this cheap but effective remedy right at the start, because at such a time a single package will affect a cure, while in old chronic, deep seated cases, several packages are sometimes necessary before a lasting cure is affected. Physicians are using the Pyramid Pile Cure in preference to surgical operations and with uniform success. The remedy is prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Albion, Mich., and for sale by druggists everywhere.

This firm receive hundreds of testimonial letters from cured patients and publish a fresh list every week. This week we take pleasure in presenting the following: From Mr. M. A. Wilson, Peabody, Kansas: Your Pyramid Pile Cure received and I have received more benefit from two applications than from all other medicines I have ever tried. I have been troubled with piles for 30 years. They would come down every day and have to be worked back but have not been down since the first application of the Pyramid. I am a convert to the merits of the Pyramid Pile Cure.

From C. D. Edgerton, Atty. at law, Northfield, Vermont: Send me two packages of your Pyramid Pile Cure. My father, who has had piles for 40 years, says your remedy is the best he has found and he has tried everything. From W. H. Goodman, Greenville, Texas. Gentlemen:—I have had wonderful relief from the Pyramid Pile Cure. I would not be without it. From Ira Shockey, Long, W. Va: The Pyramid Pile Cure has cured me. I have been waiting to see the result before writing and I can honestly say I am well of the piles and feel under many obligations to you.

Fresh letters will appear from all parts of the United States, all testifying to the wonderful effects which invariably result where this splendid remedy is used. It is the cheapest, safest and most effectual pile remedy ever placed before the people and if you are subject to piles in any form this remedy will remove them.

It is on sale at all drug stores; each package also contains a treatise on the cause and cure of piles, which will interest and benefit any one so afflicted.

Just a guess: The Coughlin jury will disagree by a vote of eight to four.

Mr. Dunphy and Judge Barrett appear to be practically in accord in the opinion that Paddy Divver ought to follow McKane.

Hood's Sarsaparilla a Godsend to A Whole Family.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—My mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Wolfe, at the age of 72 years, was attacked with a violent form of salt rheum; it spread all over her body, and her hands and limbs were dreadful to look at. At the same time, my little daughter Clara, who was just one year old, was attacked by a similar disease, like scrofula. It appeared in the form of large sores under each side of her neck; had the attendance of the family physician and other doctors for a long time, but seemed to grow worse. A little book fell into my hands, in which were numerous testimonials from people who had been

by Hood's Sarsaparilla. As soon as we gave Hood's Sarsaparilla to Clara, she began to get better, and before the first bottle was gone, the sores entirely healed up and there has never been any sign of the disease since. She is a healthy, robust child. Her grandmother took Hood's Sarsaparilla at the same time, and the salt rheum decreased in its violence and was soon effected. It took about three months for her cure, and she ascribes her good health and strength at her advanced age to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has certainly been a Godsend to my family." MRS. SOPHIA WOLFE, Zaleski, O.

LOVE AND THOUGHT.

What hath love with thought to do?
Still at variance are the two.
Love is sudden, love is rash,
Love is like the levin flash—
Comes as swift, as swiftly goes,
And his mark as surely knows.

Thought is lumpish, thought is slow,
Weighing long 'tween yes and no.
When dear love is dead and gone,
Thought comes creeping in anon
And in his deserted nest
Sits to hold the crowner's quest.

Since we love, what need to think?
Happiness stands on a brink
Whence too easy 'tis to fall
Whither's no return at all.
Have a care, half hearted lover;
Thought would only push her over.
—James Russell Lowell.

AN OLD MAID.

Everybody wondered how Mlle. Angeline Majolin happened to be an old maid. They all admitted that she was charming. Her head was bound with heavy braids of glossy hair, and her beautiful black eyes were full of a pathetic gentleness. She lodged in the fourth story of a tenement on the Rue Boursault alone with her blind mother, whom she attended constantly. These ladies received no company, but although they sought to attract no attention at any time whoever met them could not help feeling interested in them and that some sad mystery surrounded their seclusion.

The family of Majolin was 30 years ago one of the richest and most influential in the province. Unhappily M. Majolin was a gambler. He engaged in all sorts of speculations in order to recover the money which he had lost in play.

When he saw ruin staring him in the face, he killed himself. Mme. Majolin was doubly stricken by the loss of fortune and the violent death of her husband, whom, although he had caused her much suffering, she still loved dearly. And, alas, her misfortunes did not end here. Her eldest son had inherited the unfortunate failing of his father. At last, in order to evade justice, he fled to the colonies and was never heard from again. The only other remaining son perished in a hunting accident.

The poor lady then had left to her but a single child, her daughter Angeline. They removed to a small farm, which was attached to the grand castle in which they had once lived. There they managed to subsist on the produce of the place and a few rentals, all that remained of their once ample fortune. Here grief and tears soon caused Mme. Majolin to lose her sight, which day by day grew duller until she became blind.

Notwithstanding the isolation and sadness in which these two women lived, the beauty of Angeline, in spite of its somewhat serious and melancholy character, could not fail to attract attention. As she approached her twentieth year two young men began to show a marked admiration for her. One of them in particular was very assiduous.

It was their cousin, Maxime de Grandlieu, a young man of noble presence, a delightful companion, talented, strong and high spirited. He had just finished his studies and had come to the country for a season of rest before entering upon the brilliant career which he had marked out for himself and which his great fortune rendered possible.

The innocent and tender heart of Angeline responded at once to the young man's evident affection. A mysterious but delightful bewilderment would possess her after a waltz upon Maxime's arm. Enchanted by the music and their own happiness, they loved to linger for a moment's talk by themselves in the embrasure of a window, or they would exchange the flowers that they wore, she taking hers from her corsage and he his from his coat.

They had still other joys together. Among these not the least were their rambles among the fields, bathed in the delicious light of sunset. When they were tired or desired to study nature more attentively, they sat down at the base of the great trees and rested under their heavy shadows. Since their souls were simple and united, they spoke little.

At other times, when the sick mother gently complained that she was left alone too often, they remained together in the parlor, where the majestic portraits of their ancestors looked down upon them with a sort of grave indulgence. If he delayed to come, she would advance as far as the stairway, holding in her hand a bunch of white roses. When he began to climb the steps, she would playfully pelt him with the white petals.

Smilingly he would advance under this snowy avalanche, happy in the knowledge that he was beloved.

However, a shadow invisible to Angeline menaced her happiness even while she was in the first bloom of her new felicity.

Maxime, naturally averse to everything that was dolorous and dismal, gradually conceived a strong aversion for Mme. Majolin. The sight of her melancholy face spoiled all his joy. He was one of those who are chilled and repulsed by grief and infirmity, as if a deadly contagion lurked within them. The young girl, entirely wrapped up in her love, was slow to perceive the dislike which Maxime evinced toward her blind mother. Even if she had observed it, she would have called it simply the natural neglect resulting from his utter absorption in his love for herself.

At last one evening an explanation took place. They were on the terrace. Maxime de Grandlieu had taken Angeline's hand and for the first time had kissed it very tenderly and passionately.

"My dear one," he said, "it is time that our lives were blended together, for our hearts are inseparable. Will you accept my name and my fortune? We will travel. Your sad childhood has been full of mourning. You will perhaps forget your sorrow in my love. For the remainder of your life you shall know no deprivation. We will go all over the world, rejoicing in our affection. Then we can make our home in Paris. Your mother can live here on her property, and we can watch over and see that she wants for nothing. Of course she would be out of place in the midst of our elegant life, where her infirmity would be a blot and a shadow. You will be fitted to adorn society, and I shall be a constant worshiper at your shrine."

The pale moon shed its perfidious rays upon the face of the young man as he uttered these words. Far away the trees, grouped together among the shadows, resembled spirit beings pretending to caress and press close to each other.

Deeply moved, Angeline remained quiet. The hour seemed very solemn to her. Finally she raised her head and responded in a low voice: "Maxime, I will reflect on what you have said and will answer you tomorrow. Adieu."

She passed a wretched night. Her mother went to bed and to sleep, breathing with the regular respiration of age, which resembles so much that of a child, but the young girl in her little chamber burst into sobs. Her emotion was stronger than she was, and for awhile she allowed it full sway. A veil had been torn from her eyes—a veil which for 20 years had covered from her sight her own heart. She had not realized before the shocking selfishness which filled it.

Ah! Her beautiful, simple dream! How it disappeared in the awful sternness of real life, never until now wholly revealed to her! In the first place, she was poor. She had felt it keenly this evening from the way in which Maxime had spoken of his own wealth. Until now she had thought little of it, for she had but few wants. The beauty of the earth—its skies, its trees, its flowers, its birds, its free air—sufficed for her.

If she married him, she must, as an obedient wife, follow his own gay, active life. The requirements of marriage with him appeared distinct and hard. It would be necessary for her to leave this poor, infirm mother—the victim of so many misfortunes. She could no longer comfort her with tenderness and daily ministrations. Her mother, who could barely endure her child's absence for an hour, would in solitude become more and more unhappy and would end her days in the charge of some impatient and mercenary hireling. Certainly there could be found no one to replace the affection and attentions of a daughter.

Angeline wept for hours, and sometimes in the midst of her tears there would appear to her her father, with a revolver in his hand. Ah! Did all men resemble each other, and were they all executioners of their wives? "Unhappy those who desire the joys of Hymen!" she thought. "The best destiny for women is to live solitary or devoted to another of their own kind, far away from men!"

Day dawn still found her a prey to these lugubrious thoughts. Calm came, however, slowly and frightfully.

Angeline had taken a decided resolution. She would never marry. She would remain as she was, having but one object. She would never leave her mother, ill and blind. She would remain a maid, satisfied with the joys of an approving conscience and cheerfully performing the gentle charities which came to her hand. Perhaps some day the wounds of her heart would heal. She would regret nothing, and she could after saying her prayers sleep with clasped hands, thanking heaven for according to her peace of body and mind.

Quickly she wrote some words of refusal which would admit of no reply. Then she occupied herself with gathering together some effects and with persuading her mother to remove to Paris.

No; she wished no more to live in the country, where she had suffered so much and where every object would remind her of the past. Mme. Majolin yielded to what she thought a caprice of her daughter and conformed without much complaint. She never knew the sacrifice of Angeline in her behalf.

This is why the young girl has always shut her heart to things without. Her first and only love is the seal of her solitude.

Her mother, whom she never quitted and whose eyes she closed in death, has long ago passed beyond this life. And now, her last duty accomplished, Angeline Majolin continues to live alone—an old maid.—From the French.

Saved by a Dog.

The sagacity of a dog saved a Woburn family from being burned to death. Fire started in the house of John Rooney on Poole street, North Woburn, about 2 o'clock in the morning, and the family, consisting of five persons, barely escaped with their lives. They were saved by the instinct of the house dog, who rushed up stairs and aroused Mr. Rooney by barking. Escape by the stairways to the lower part of the house was cut off by the fire, and the upper rooms were fast filling with smoke. Mr. Rooney succeeded in tying some bed covering together, and with this lowered one of his sons to the ground. He obtained a ladder and rescued the others, but not until they were nearly overcome by the smoke. Afterward the dog was found crouching in a corner of one of the rooms nearly suffocated.—Boston Transcript.

Buckles For Hats.

Oblong buckles, curved more or less, are a most approved decoration now for hats. When intended for this purpose, they have rather formidable pointed tongues, which pierce the ribbon or drapery drawn through the buckle. Frequently they measure six or eight inches in length and will go nearly half round the crown of a sailor hat. But their use is not confined to this shape of hat. They deck broad brims and toques equally well. Similar buckles are made in cut jet, but that in imitation diamonds is the favorite.—London Milliner.

To Ward Off a Cold.

If you keep sneezing and have sensations of chilliness, it is a fair sign of coming cold. Sometimes it can be broken quite effectually by a hot lemonade. Get the lemon and sugar ready and set the water boiling. Then bathe the feet in hot water or take a hot bath all over. Retire immediately and have brought to you the glass of lemon and sugar over which the boiling water has been poured. Drink it down as hot as possible. You won't have a symptom of cold in the morning.—Washington Star.

HOPE FOR THE DEAF.

A New Scientific Discovery that Will Bring Relief to Hundreds of People.

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 3, 1894.

The wonderful discoveries of science multiply so rapidly that the average mind fails to comprehend them. And thus, when one, by reason of some physical ailment for which relief is sought, suddenly steps into the private office of a professor in the medical department of the University of Michigan, he stands awed at the sight of the great array of surgical instruments which confront him. Ten-fold is his wonderment increased when he learns that all these different appliances,—some of which are as small and fine as a veritable needle,—are employed in treating only a certain organ of the body, such as the eye or ear.

Surely the human body is a wonderful piece of mechanicism, but the human mind, which conceives and applies so many methods of relief for the body, is beyond all power of comprehension.

The purpose of this article is to tell those who are afflicted with deafness what science, in the past few years, has done to restore the hearing.

It is readily conceded by the authorities that the ear is the most difficult of all the organs of the body to treat, and therefore the results the most uncertain and unsatisfactory. Over and over again physicians of the most extensive practice, have examined patients who were deaf, told them there was no hope, then sighed and sent them away.

Meanwhile the busy brain of science has been diligently at work trying to solve this knotty problem of human deafness, and in many instances, the happy solution is a complete restoration of the hearing.

Hundreds of people are afflicted with catarrhal deafness and usually in these cases the hearing may be almost, if not entirely restored. To understand deafness one must understand the construction of the ear, nose, and throat, as an inflamatory condition of either the nose or throat will affect the tubes and membranes of the ear, and thereby cause deafness, although the nerves of the ear may be in perfect condition.

Strange as it may seem, the difficulties causing catarrhal deafness, are oftener than otherwise, found to exist in the nose.

Situated in the back part of the nostril is the opening of a small tube which leads to the ear, and whenever an inflamed condition of the nostril arises, from the grip, catarrh, or any similar disease, this opening oftentimes becomes closed. Again an "enlargement," or "false growth" is often found in some parts of the nostril, sometimes directly in front of the opening of the tube leading to the ear, thus closing it entirely and causing deafness. Frequently the growth is attached to the septum (a Latin word meaning the wall that divides two cavities—in this case the bone of the nose) and it is then called a "spur."

These "enlargements" and "spurs" are now found to be a very common thing with people who are deaf, and they have to be removed with instruments before the hearing can be restored. Following this operation, a treatment is given every day or every other day, as the case may require, called "spraying," which is a local application of several different medicines administered in vapor form through the agency of compressed air.

Following this is applied the newest and most wonderful discovery science has yet made in the interest of the human ear,—the Vibrometer.

You won't find the word in any dictionary (it is of too recent origin for that), and you will only find the instrument in the office of one of all the medical professors in the University of Michigan,—that of Dr. D. A. McLachlan.

To the research, perseverance and superior skill of this capable and most successful physician, scores of people owe the restoration of their hearing; and to the aid of this newest scientific discovery does the Dr. himself, owe the success of some of his most recent cures.

The Vibrometer is an instrument fastened to a table about as large, and something of the appearance of an ordinary sewing machine with the "leaf up." On one side of the table extend strings and a key board like those of a guitar, having all the gradations of tone the same as any musical instrument. From this the "tone" or degree of roaring in the head is obtained. After finding this tone a rubber tube connecting with the instrument is placed in each ear and the machinery started with electricity.

This is merely a glimpse of the Vibrometer. The principle involved is that of applying the system of massage for the cure of deafness.

Massage is the application of motion to disease.

In most cases persons who are partially deaf do not hear ordinary sounds because the drum of the ear does not vibrate, and as the drum has to move in order to vibrate, and as it is necessary for it to vibrate in order that people may hear, it is readily seen that by restoring the mobility of those parts so that ordinary sounds can set them in motion, other causes, such as inflammation of the mucous membrane, "spurs," etc., being removed, the hearing may be restored.

One of the professors here in the University, who was very deaf, went east last year and consulted the best medical authority in Boston in relation to his condition. He was told that there was no hope for him. That in a few years he would have to use a trumpet.

Not willing to become deaf he decided to try this new treatment under Dr. McLachlan and his hearing is now almost entirely restored.

In answer to the many eager questionings from those who are suffering from deafness, I will explain that this treatment cannot be had at the hospitals or at the clinics. The cost, too, depends upon the condition of the patient.

Sometimes a few day's treatment will accomplish the most wonderful results. Those who are afflicted with "noises in the head" will welcome this new discovery as the greatest blessing that has yet been placed within their reach, while all who are deaf from any of the causes herein mentioned may look forward to the day when the hearing shall be fully restored, providing the treatment is availed before the disease becomes incurable.

THE SONG OF THE LINNET.

A Wayside Sketch.

The bells of Los Angeles are chiming, the sun is shining, the shadows of the pinnated palm leaves lie deep—almost realistic,—on the yellow sands of the broad walks. Only the wanderers and idlers are here in the park at this hour. Those who have homes are busy and happy this morning: the sweet Christmas bells find an echo in their hearts: they speak of prayer of hope, and fireside pleasures.

What is there for the wanderers? Ah, there it is! Music! "Re-e-cah-ree cah-ree-cah-ree-cah-ree!" The linnet! Yes, away up on the top-most branch of a southern pine. I will sit in this secluded seat and listen—he is singing for me: I knew it surely by the throb of my heart. "Re-e-cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree-cah-ree! I am so happy, my pretty red throat is so full of sweet notes that I must let them fly out—Ah-cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree!"

Sweet birdling, since you must sing, let me give you a theme—

Your notes so divine, outrivaling mine,
Alone can do justice to these—

Sing of the silken haired papyrus swaying by the fountains; sing of the fuschia bowers and begonia borders, of the by-paths where acacias grow, shading the seats where lover's meet; yes, sing sweet birdling, sing of love—so blissful, so painful,—sing "Re-e-cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree."

Sing of the graceful poinsettias whose blazing stars float like red banners in the breeze; sing of the calla hedges whose myriad cups are held up to the sky, by day and night mutely saying: "Fill us, gentle Heaven, fill us with thy sunshine and the life-giving breath of thy night. Yes, "Re-e-cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree."

Now sing of the roses—the voluptuous queens of the southern land: they are red, they are pink, white and yellow, tawney and warm: choose your own, pretty songster, but sing well of their charms. Sing sweetly—sing "Re-e-cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree!"

Ah, my pretty one, still sing on: sing of violet rows by the shaded pool, of the breeze redolent with odors of jassamine and mignonette, of heliotropes grown rampant as brambles. I see them all as you sing. I feel the sensuous languor of their sweetness, and the joy of my heart has found voice in your song "Re-e cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree."

And now he has gone. Whither? To his mates, all so light of wing, free as air, hither and thither, from bower to bower, feeding on dainty seeds. Or, perchance, far away where San Jacinto's airy peaks outline the horizon, or where the rich estates of San Bernardino lie in the azure depths of the valley, for they are free-rovers in this land of the olive and vine.

Will they sing to some listening ear, or to the open sky! It matters not to them—they still go on with their Christmas carol, "Re-e-cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree cah-ree!"

OBITUARY.

On the evening of Feb. 20th, Mrs. Jeanette Hastings died at her home, on Garnet Mesa, after a prolonged illness. She has been slowly failing for months, from a complication of diseases, arising from derangement of stomach, liver, splene and lungs. She was conscious almost to the last.

Deceased was 52 years of age: was a native of Michigan; was the only sister of James D. Hatch, of Macon, Lenawee county, which was her early home. After her fathers' second marriage, she resided with an aunt, her mother's sister, Mrs. Jane Featherly, at Wayne, Mich. Here she became acquainted with, and married Wm. M. Hastings, then in the employ of the M. C. R. R. at that place. After a short time they removed to Jackson, where he was General freight Agent for the Detroit, Lansing and Saginaw Ry., until his health failing in 1872, they went to Denver, Col. The climate proving beneficial to him. During their sojourn there they met with a severe trial in the loss of their six year old daughter, Susie C. In 1885 they came to Delta, where they have since resided. Mrs. Hastings was a mable, affectionate and self sacrificing: invariably thinking of, and administering to the comfort of others, in preference to her own wishes. In this respect will she be sadly missed in her own family. She leaves a husband and two daughters, who deeply mourn her loss.—Delta, Colo., Independent.

Died, at his residence, in South Macon, on Friday morning, March 8th, 1894, Mr. Malcolm B. Osborne, aged 74 years, 3 months, and 2 days.

Mr. Osborne was one of the oldest citizens of Macon, having lived on the farm that he has owned and resided upon for 41 years. He came to Michigan from Ovid, Seneca county, N. Y., in 1840. He was married to Miss Catharine Stewart in 1853. They have had 6 children, 4 of whom are still living: 1 son and 3 daughters. The son, Charles is still at home, to be a comfort and stay to the now widowed mother. Mr. Osborne crossed lake Erie 14 times before settling down on the farm. The most of his life has been spent in Macon. The funeral services were attended on Sunday, afternoon, March 11th, in the Reformed church, of South Macon, by a large company of friends and neighbors. His mortal remains were laid away in the cemetery adjoining the church.

CARD OF THANKS.

BELIEVE GREGORY INSANE.

Result of a Physician's Examination at Dexter Supports This Theory.

DEXTER, March 9.—The all-absorbing question here is as to whether or not Assistant Cashier Orla G. Gregory, who robbed the Dexter savings bank of over $3,000, and then laid the crime to an alleged pair of sandbagging crooks, is insane. There is no doubt he is in a state approaching nervous prostration, and the feeling is growing among the people that his apparent mental infirmity is real and not feigned. There is a still larger contingent who believe he is playing a game not only to escape legal punishment but to save himself from losing the good opinion of his relatives and friends.

Dr. Vaughan, an insanity expert from the university, was here Thursday morning and was with Gregory several hours. The result of his investigations cannot be definitely known, as neither the doctor nor the Gregorys will say a word, but the results tell the story nearly as well. Before the doctor came the boy's father was anxious to reach a settlement with the bank, and at his solicitation the bank directors made a proposition looking to that end. With the doctor's report in hand all was changed, and the proposition was promptly withdrawn. It is therefore believed Dr. Vaughan has decided that young Gregory is insane, and if the bank people decide to prosecute they will be met with a plea of insanity. The bank has not yet decided whether to prosecute or not. President Burkett has gone to New Orleans on a ten days' trip and nothing will be done during his absence.

DE FRANCE ON TRIAL.

He Is Positively Identified as Forrest—The Proceedings.

KALAMAZOO, March 10.—The trial of Stonewall J. de France, the alleged Swindler of many banks throughout the country, began in the circuit court Thursday. He is charged with uttering a forged draft on the First national bank of Kalamazoo for $12,500 on November 21, 1891. Officers from Chicago and St. Paul are laying for him in the event of his acquittal by proving an alibi.

On Friday President J. K. Wagner, of the First national bank at the time of the forgery, identified De France as Louis Forrest, and recited the meetings which he had with Forrest. When he completed the deal to buy a farm he called with the draft for $12,500, and secured $5,000 and had the balance placed to his credit. Much time was taken in cross-examining S. B. Hammond regarding his alleged contract with Forrest to take a position under the Standard Oil company and playing detective in trying to get evidence to have Forrest arrested while he was introducing him to his friends, including Banker Wagner.

KALAMAZOO, March 12.—The feature of the half-day session in the trial of De France Saturday was the failure of the defense to get ex-President J. K. Wagner to swear that he made the acquaintance of a woman who, it is reported, was Mrs. de France while on a trip from New York in October, 1892. He identified De France and so did Cashier F. W. Rowley.

THE SCHEME IS FEASIBLE.

D. Farrand Henry Says the Proposed Detroit Canal Will Be Successful.

DETROIT, March 12.—D. Farrand Henry, the eminent civil engineer, has written a lengthy communication to the Engineering Record, in which he claims that the scheme for constructing a canal from Lake St. Clair to Lake Erie, so as to avoid the windings of the Detroit river and dangers of the Lime Kiln crossing, is perfectly feasible. He states that a saving will be had of 70 miles in distance. The proposed canal will be but 14 miles long and 20 feet deep, and he estimates it will cost less than $4,000,000. As the soil is of blue clay with no rock within 100 feet of the surface, the excavating would be comparatively easy. The company which is organized for the purpose comprises chiefly Canadian capital.

L. A. W. Rebellion in Michigan.

DETROIT, March 10.—Secretary-Treasurer Noock, of the Michigan Division League of American Wheelmen, has announced that there will be no new election of state officers, as ordered by the national assembly at Louisville recently. The executive committee decided that the national assembly exceeded its authority in ordering another election, the result of the former election having been declared void on technicalities.

Fire in Detroit.

DETROIT, March 9.—Fire broke out Thursday morning in a building on Cadillac square, the upper floors of which are occupied by about forty negro lodgers. It started in the second-story hallway and is believed to have been set afire. In the panic among the lodgers Thomas Settle sprang from a third-story window to the pavement. He was severely injured, but how badly is not yet known. The damage was light.

Fire at Ithaca.

ITHACA, March 12.—Fire Sunday morning destroyed the stave and heading mill of C. W. Althouse, of this place. A high wind made it difficult to fight the flames. Fred Barss, one of the night watchmen, was badly burned about the head and face. The loss is about $25,000, with an insurance of $12,500. The mill will probably be rebuilt.

Burned to Death.

COLDWATER, March 8.—N. S. Nixon, a Batavia township farmer, was cremated Wednesday morning in the ruins of his big grain barn. It was not until the building was nearly burned to the ground that Mr. Nixon was missed. Forty sheep, four horses and other stock were burned.

Tries to Hire a Man to Burn a House.

BENTON HARBOR, March 12.—Moses Wolper was arrested and put under $500 bonds for attempting to hire a man for $50 to burn the home of A. Getz, a farmer living 3 miles out of town.

POSTMASTER BOYCOTTED

MUSKEGON, March 9.—William Peck, recently appointed postmaster at Montague, took possession Wednesday and a merry war commenced. Montague is a fourth-class office, with receipts of about $1,200, and the opposition proposes to cut these down. A business collection has been instituted and the mails are then sent to the train, the postmaster losing the cancellation. The feeling is very bitter. Peck is the referee postmaster whose appointment was one of the immediate causes leading up to the passage by the Muskegon convention of resolutions condemning refereeism.

Postmaster Peck won one decided victory when he succeeded in stopping the mail agent on the train from receiving the mail brought by the collector acting in the interests of those who are boycotting the new postmaster. The collector accordingly took the mail across the river to the town of Whitehall, where he succeeded in leaving it with the mail agent on the train. Mr. Peck went across the river also and again forbade the agent from receiving any more Montague mail. The agent says he will not take any more. The boycotters declare they will send their mail to the Whitehall office and avow their determination to keep up the fight to the bitter end.

A MYSTERY IN DETROIT.

An Old Lady Found Dead in Her Bed—Poison Strewed Around.

DETROIT, March 12.—Mrs. Annie Fight, aged 60 years, went to bed in good health Saturday night. Sunday morning she was found dead in bed from the effects of a dose of paris green. By whom the drug was administered the police are unable to learn. Her son-in-law, John Schmick, for whom she kept house, refuses to say a word concerning the affair, and has placed the seal of silence on every one else in the house. Paris green has been found scattered over the floor and bed in Mrs. Fight's room. No reason is known why she should have committed suicide. Officers are at work trying to probe the mystery.

The mayor has found various shortages in the treasurer's accounts, but it is thought they are the result of bad bookkeeping and careless business methods rather than any intent to defraud.

Land Owners Who Cannot Read Their Titles Clear.

A Decision by Land Commissioner Lamoreux Which Throws the Ownership of 69,000 Acres in the Upper Peninsula in Doubt.

IRON COMPANIES AFFECTED.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 10.—Commissioner Lamoreux of the general land office, after examining into the question of approvals of land grants in the upper peninsula of Michigan to the Portage Lake & Lake Superior Ship Canal company, has decided that nearly 69,000 acres of land were erroneously approved to that company in 1868. These lands were listed as "mineral" prior to the act making the grant to the company. As the granting act expressly excluded from its terms lands which had formerly been classed as "mineral," Commissioner Lamoreux holds that the approval was without authority of law. He recommends to Secretary Smith that suit be instituted to set aside the title of the company.

DETROIT, March 10.—A decision of Land Commissioner Lamoreux in Washington is of great importance to various corporations which have acquired immense holdings of lands in the upper peninsula of Michigan. The decision calls into question the title of upwards of $50,000,000 worth of land held by the Portage Lake & Lake Superior Ship Canal company. The company secured the grant as a bonus for constructing the canal across Keweenaw point, which it afterwards sold to the government. The act under which the grant was made expressly excluded any lands classed as mineral. In making its selections, however, the company seems to have ignored this proviso and to have taken lands distinctly classified as mineral. Some 69,000 acres are affected by Commissioner Lamoreux's decision. Holdings of the Michigan Land & Iron company and other corporations are also being investigated. The titles of most of the iron mines developed in recent years are affected by the prospective contest.

SWINDLED OUT OF $75,000.

Startling Mismanagement of the Michigan Mortgage Company.

ST. JOHNS, March 10.—Developments prove that the transactions of the Michigan Mortgage company, which recently assigned, covered some remarkable financial mismanagement. About $70,000 of the liabilities of the company consists of money paid by mortgagors who supposed that their mortgages had been discharged, when in fact they were not discharged, neither was the money so received turned over to the mortgagees. S. S. Walker, chairman of the board of directors, admits that $75,000 was received and not accounted for. Mr. Walker admitted that it was a fraud for which the officers of the company would be held responsible. Still he thought they could pay back the money if given a chance.

WHEAT IN FAIR CONDITION.

Michigan Report Says Forty Per Cent. of the Points Report Damage.

LANSING, March 9.—The Michigan crop report for January issued Thursday is rather noncommittal on the condition of growing wheat. It says that 40 per cent. of the correspondents report damage during February and that 60 per cent. report no damage. The weather for the month was continuously cold. At Lansing the mean daily temperature was above the freezing point but seven days. The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in February was 1,033,727; in the seven months, August to February inclusive, 10,285,039 bushels, or about one-quarter of a million bushels less than during the same months last year. The condition of live stock averages from four to seven points below the full average.

Will Stick to Their Offices.

GRAND RAPIDS, March 10.—Ex-Senator Wesselius, one of the attorneys for the indicted officials, whom Gov. Rich has sought to remove from office, declares that Secretary of State Jochim, Treasurer Hambitzer and Land Commissioner Berry will surely serve out their terms unless convicted of criminal offenses as the result of the grand jury indictments. The power of the governor to remove is now under review by the state supreme court, and if the decision is against the officials the case will be taken to the United States supreme court, where it would be hung up until long after their terms of office had expired.

Captured.

MARSHALL, March 11.—Joseph S. Brooks, the clothier who failed for over $20,000 in December last and disappeared, has been captured at the home of his father-in-law, in this city. The failure, it is alleged, was a crooked one, and charges of gross fraud, such as smuggling away goods, were made. The officers had watched Brooks' father-in-law's house all the week.

A Lumber Company's Loss.

CLAIRE, March 12.—The entire plant and stock of the Lansing Lumber company at Dodge burned Saturday afternoon. The loss is about $175,000, believed to be covered by insurance. The fire started by the upsetting of a torch in the shingle mill. Forty acres of lumber piles were consumed. Neither of the mills was running.

Another Big Claim for Logs.

TRAVERSE CITY, March 12.—Frank Goodrich has brought a claim for $1,500 against the Traverse City Lumber company for logs. This involves C. A. Barker still more. The total amount of attachments on the company at this place now reaches $32,100.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. The Adrian Press, which ought to be good authority on the subject says: "There is no truth in the report that the Clinton postoffice was broken into by the democratic candidates who had grown tired of Congressman Gorman's delay in getting the republican P. M. out. That was a lie, circulated for political effect."

Diamond Crystal Salt

The Clinton Foundry had a narrow escape from destruction by fire Monday afternoon. When the melt had been partly run off it was discovered that the inside of the tower was all on fire. The blaze, on account of the hood being clogged with cinders, was forced out of the charging door in the second story. There was some lively work until the fire was under control. But for the iron roof the whole building would have been consumed. Fortunately, but little damage was done, though it was a close call.

A two-horse load of Clinton people, returning from Tecumseh, the other evening, conceived the side splitting joke of driving up to a house, calling for the inmates and then driving furiously away without making themselves known. The family answered the call, the driver cracked the whip, the whiffletrees cracked of themselves and out sprawled the driver like a March frog into the cold snow—some snow is cold. The team ran home and the witty crowd walked in "afoot."—Adrian Press.

Fuel	$ 884 30
Labor	845 30
Interest on bonds	400 00
Incidentals, repairs, etc.	221 83
Total expense	$2,351 43
Receipts for lights	$1,309 89

Balance on cost of 26 arc lights $1,041.54

This makes the cost of the lights $40 each. The receipts for March, 1893, were $73.42; for January, 1894, $123.72, an increase of $50.30, or about 68 per cent. Lights have been furnished consumers at 25 cents per month for house lights and 55 cents for store or commercial lights. The cost of arc lights at $40 each is $10 less than that offered by private individuals and we think a very good showing and one that will compare favorably with other municipal plants. The cost of running the plant under increased receipts will be only slightly increased, the entire increase being in the matter of fuel, hence the outlook for next year seems good.

An unusual interest was manifested at the corporation election on Monday last because of the dissatisfaction of the Huntington element for being ignored in the caucus. And while everything passed off in a manner satisfactory to the majority, still there was, at times, considerable excitement especially when some irresponsible party was more anxious to get some challenged elector in trouble than he was for the good of the cause in which he was engaged. But such is ever the case, and those who take the prominent part in such matters never seem to have a thought of what the consequences may be to those they so zealously "egg on." The ticket nominated at the caucus was elected from top to bottom and those parties who were so conspicuous election day have vanished, but like Banquos' ghost will probably "bob up serenely" at next election time, as they have done for several years past. Below we give the figures in detail. The opposition made a serious effort by "slipping" the regular ticket to defeat it, but the same majority which nominated the ticket at the caucus elected it at the polls. W. D. Van Tuyle stood the brunt of the onslaught, and his triumph was a signal tribute to his personal popularity and strength. The excitement, however, will soon pass away and Clinton will resume her wonted peace and prosperity again:

Our fruit raisers are fearing trouble, as a result of the long continued spell of mild weather. Hudson contemplates establishing a canning factory which will employ 250 hands when running at its full capacity. It is a most profiable enterprise to both town and country, consuming immense amounts of fruits and vegetables. It would furnish an excellent home market for the farmer and gardener and so provide profitable employment for scores and perhaps hundreds in the country as well as equally large numbers in town. The profit per acre from crops which find a market in a canning factory are much larger than the ordinary products of the farm.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian Union church will hold a box social at the home of Mrs. John Zeluff. Now, boys, here is your chance to eat just as good lunches as you have a mind to furnish, and know that you are eating at the expense of the ladies.

The alarm of fire was sounded last Wednesday evening and our new fire department, responded in fine style. The fire was located in the saw mill of Andrew Gogelin. The department extinguished the fire in short order. A good fire department like the one organized in our village a few months ago, is one of the necessities of life. Will Larrabee, the captain of the company, made the run from the store to the mill, a distance of 40 rods, in 12 seconds.

The parishioners of Rev. E. Mudge gave him a complete surprise on Friday evening. They first visited the parsonage and took Mrs. Mudge unawares. Then they resorted to the church parlors, where the elder was holding a young men's meeting and the meeting was closed informally, and he declared himself surprised in good earnest as he had no intimation of such a thing. The ladies soon had the tables spread and about 100 guests partook of a bounteous repast. Later, Rev. J Wright, in behalf of the parishioners, presented to the pastor a purse of $23.75, as an expression of good feeling for the diligence with which he had pushed the removal of the church and the success attending the same.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 22, 1894.

This southern California weather in March is something very unusual for Michigan. But then, we can stand it one year for a change.

Senator Brice, of Ohio, favors the nickle-plated variety of tariff reform, but the people who elected Cleveland prefer the genuine article.

If taxed sugar, coal, iron and wool are tariff reform as the U. S. Senate understands it, the Senate evidently needs reformation as badly as the tariff.

The New York World thus characterizes Senatorial tariff tinkering: "The ticker-tariff tinkerers will experience ticklish times with their constituents."

The Pollard case, now on trial at Washington, seems likely to make considerable trouble for "Billy" Breckenridge in his campaign for re-election to Congress.

The overhauling of Boss McKane's accounts, since he took up his abode at Sing Sing, discloses the fact that he is about $200,000 short. Where has the money gone?

An exchange says: "If public men were taxed according to the appearance of their clothes on the line on wash day, at least ninety-nine families out of every hundred would be exempt.

"President Cleveland will not veto the Bland bill; neither will he sign it. He will allow it to become a law without his signature." This is the kind of talk that makes Cleveland's enemies to speak by the card.

Senator Hill has finally taken off his mask, and come out as an advocate of protection. This will be no surprise to people who have watched his career closely. Is he posing for the Republican nomination in 1896?

The trial of the suit of Miss Madeline Pollard against Representative Breckenridge, of Ky., for breach of promise of marriage, which has now been going on a week, is proving a dangerous rival to Congress, so far as public interest is concerned.

The cabal of Democratic Senators who are trying to mutilate the Wilson bill, are the same men who prophesied in 1892 that Cleveland could not be elected if nominated. The same voters who elected Cleveland are in favor of the Wilson bill.

Says the Little Rock Gazette: "Working a double set of hands and running 24 hours a day shows what an American cotton factory can do even in these melancholy days of depression. This is what the Mammoth Spring Cotton Mills are doing.

The New York World says: "The Sugar Trust declared a 3 per cent. dividend last week. It declared a 3 per cent. dividend three months ago and another three months before that. In brief, the trust is paying 12 per cent. per annum on its nominal capital.

The House committee on the election of President and Vice-President has reported favorably a joint resolution for a constitutional amendment for the election of Senators by the people. If such an amendment could be adopted it would be a long stride in the right direction.

The development of cotton manufacturing in the south last year was remarkable, considering the general business depression. The south has now 405 cotton mills, over 62,000 looms and 2,775,000 spindles. The ratio of increase last year is likely to be exceeded this year.

Bland's Seigniorage bill passed the Senate last week by a majority of thirteen, the vote standing 44 to 31. All the Populists voted for it. Ten democrats voted against it, and ten republicans in favor. It is generally believed that the President will permit the bill to become a law without his signature.

We have no doubt that there is a great future for the beet sugar industry in this country. Large sections of the United States are adapted to the growth of sugar beets, in which none are now grown. Samples grown in Ohio last season showed from analysis as high a percentage of sugar as those from any other part of the country.

The Wilson bill is based on a principle—free raw materials and reduction of customs duties all along the line. The McKinley law is also based on a principle—protection for the sake of protection, regardless of revenue. But the Senate bill is a mixture of both and would simply represent log-rolling legislation. The people do not want it.

BLAINE ON SILVER.

Gold and Silver Coin the Money of the Constitution.

In a speech in the United States senate in 1877, Hon. James G. Blaine said: "I believe gold and silver coin to be the money of the constitution—indeed the money of the American people anterior to the constitution, which that great organic law recognized quite independent of its own existence. No power was conferred on congress to declare that either metal should not be money. Congress has, therefore, in my judgment, no power to demonetize silver any more than to demonetize gold; no power to demonetize either any more than to demonetize both. In this statement I am but repeating the weighty dictum of the first of constitutional lawyers. 'I am certainly of the opinion,' said Mr. Webster, 'that gold and silver, at the rate fixed by congress, constitute the legal standard of value in this country and neither congress nor any state has authority to establish any other standard or to displace this standard. Few persons can be found, I apprehend, who will maintain that congress possesses the power to demonetize both gold and silver, or that congress could be justified in prohibiting the coinage of both and yet in logic and legal construction it would be difficult to show where and why the power of congress over silver is greater than over gold—greater over either than over the two. If, therefore, silver has been demonetized, I am in favor of remonetizing it. If its coinage has been prohibited, I am in favor of ordering it to be resumed. If it has been restricted, I am in favor of having it enlarged. This concession to congress of the right to coin money was in the nature of a trust, the execution of which can only be enforced by a continuous coinage. If a trustee neglects or refuses to perform a trust, the courts, in ordinary cases, compel a performance, or in default thereof, the trust reverts to the trustor. If in this case, the government being the trustee, there is no competent power to compel the execution of the trust, the right to coin money reverts to the states or to the people."

THE GOLD ERA.

From all portions of the mountains come reports of the discovery of gold ores and still the good work of prospecting goes on. It would seem as if gold had not been thought of before; that, however thoroughly silver had been prospected for, yet gold was overlooked. This is an encouraging state of affairs at the present time. When silver is down, let gold mines come to the front. Silver will have its way again, but at present it is to be hoped that the good work of searching for gold ore will go on with unabated vigor. That precious metal has of late been found in localities where before it was not thought of; there are scores of other good locations to be had even in old camps like Leadville, Silver Cliff, Breckenridge, Idaho Springs, Black Hawk and Central, to say nothing of new camps like Cripple Creek, Creede, Aspen Junction, Platoro, Balfour and Turkey Falls. It is true there are many of the best portions of the mountains, like Conejos and the La Plata country, that are now covered with deep snow, where "the beautiful" will not be out of the way for months to come, yet much of the most promising country is open with only occasional interruptions to prospector and miner at the present time. Let these camps now receive attention and with the opening of spring and summer the tide of prospectors can pass over the foot-hills and mountain country into the higher and more inaccessible places where the precious stuff is to be had for the seeking. In future years let 1894 be remembered as the true beginning of the "gold era" of Colorado.—Pueblo Journal.

IN A BAD WAY.

Effect of the Slump in Silver on the Mexican Financial Situation.

A late dispatch from the City of Mexico says:

"The sharp decline in silver on the London market sent exchange to unprecedented figures. London exchange was quoted at 24d per dollar; New York exchange, $1.02; rising an hour later two points. The situation is exceedingly grave. Bankers fear a further decline. A number of dealers in European goods, who buy on six months' time direct from European manufacturers, find their position perilous, having experienced an increase of fifty per cent. in exchange since their goods were bought, thereby wiping out their profits. The position of the large French houses in the dry goods trade, who are large importers of silks, fine prints, ginghams, etc., from Europe, is bad. The consumption of this class of goods has been steadily declining as exchange has gone up. The government has strained every resource and introduced every possible economy in order to get its gold interest and keep faith with public creditors, but it cannot accomplish impossibilities. It has been suggested that the government place at the disposal of bondholders its gross product in silver dollars derived from assignments on revenue for the payment of its debt interest."

COMING TO BIMETALLISM.

There Is No Alternative—Europe Not Rich Enough to Retain Monometallism.

Europe is uneasy about silver. The debt-ridden and tax-piled nations of the continent are wondering whether they can stand a greater appreciation of gold. England has for many years congratulated herself on the gain she has reaped as a creditor from the gold standard, but since her trade with India has become demoralized and her exchanges with all silver-using countries shaky, her exporters are asking questions of the bankers who have taught the statesmen all the finance of the past hundred years.

One of the Republic's financial correspondents, who has always been conservative in making predictions, writes that a European war, forced by the intolerable trade depression of the gold standard, is almost certain to come very soon. The discontents of all classes are pressing the governments into war, because the expedients of peaceful finance have all been exhausted. The war will end, he believes, in a general reconstruction of the money standard on a bimetallic basis.

War or not, the Europeans are realizing, as they have not before since the short-sighted action of Germany in 1871, that the business of the world cannot get along without silver. The alternative before the European nations is silver legal tender with free coinage, or an enormous issue of paper currency. The latter might be a temporary relief, but it would be soon felt as a terrible strain on credit, and at the first convulsion the impossibility of gold redemption would precipitate panics of unparalleled magnitude.

In reality there is no alternative. Europe is not rich enough to retain monometallism much longer without revolution and repudiation.

We have followed the blunder of Europe, and the bimetallist has not been admitted into the councils of the nation. But to-day the bimetallist has the satisfaction of seeing that the intellect of the whole world is with him. —St. Louis Republic.

PLAIN TALK.

The Country Is in No Mood for Foolishness—Let the Opponents of Silver Heed It.

In his speech advocating a vote on the seigniorage proposition Mr. Bland talked more plainly and perhaps more radically than the house is accustomed to hear in recent years. The horse play entered into by the opponents to silver aroused his indignation. An entire people is in distress, because of the determination of the eastern section to prevent any action looking to monetary relief. Bland realizes that the west and south are in earnest, and he spoke as earnest men are apt to when a frivolous spirit pervades an assembly of men who should be ready to aid or give substantial reasons for declining to do so.

Possibly nothing is gained by a display of temper, but much is gained by an expression of just indignation. The country will overlook Bland's extravagant charges because it is ready to condemn more severely the indifference of representatives to the wants of the people. If Bland's arguments in favor of coining the seigniorage are not sound, let statesmen point out their fallacy. The country will listen to dignified discussion on any matter of public interest. It will not tolerate childish bickerings.

The people of the south and west believe that Bland is right in his ideas on this silver question. Attacks upon his taste or judgment in the course he has taken to force attention will not blind the country to the merits of the subject matter. If his energy results in earnest and honest work they will rather applaud him for the lesson he administered, looking to his motives rather than to the weapon used.—Topeka Press.

A CHEERFUL VIEW.

Colorado Hopeful, Notwithstanding the War on Silver.

In reviewing the signs of returning prosperity in Colorado, the Denver News has this to say:

"There is no cause for discouragement in the recent additional declines in the price of silver, nor should any friend of the white metal harbor the thought that it will fall much lower than temporary. Silver has been the basis of Colorado's growth and thrift and will at no distant day resume its place at the head of our industries. The greater the decline now the sooner the restoration. It has already reduced India and England's trade to the verge of ruin and is hastening the conditions for a monetary convulsion in Europe, while in the United States sentiment has changed in favor of silver to such a degree that competent judges believe the legislation of last fall would now be impossible, despite the intimidation of the money power. Meantime, there appears to be reasonable assurance that our increased output of gold for 1894 will equal the value of our annual silver production in recent years and more than offset to the state the loss accruing from the temporary closing of so many of our silver mines.

"The outlook is hopeful, and encouraging indications of better times are abundant. The courage and perseverance which in Colorado could triumph over a tide of misfortunes and make disaster the stimulus to new and fruitful industrial achievements will soon be amply rewarded."

A Needed Shock.

Secretary Carlisle has somewhat modified his views as to the effect of the coinage of the seigniorage. He is represented as willing to accept Mr. Bland's bill with some modifications. He thinks he should have some discretion as to the manner and times of issuing the certificates based upon the dollars coined from the seigniorage. He is apprehensive of the effect of putting out the whole $55,000,000 at once. He fears that the sudden plumping of so much money into circulation would produce an expansive shock that might be dangerous to the public. The Denver Sun thinks such an addition to the circulating medium would likely startle the people a little. But there is nothing with which the most of them would be readier to take their chances than the shock of getting more money.

Germany's Silver Inquiry.

The government commission which was formed to consider the price of silver had its first sitting in Berlin February 22. Count von Posadowski, secretary of the imperial treasury, presided. In addressing the commission Count von Posadowski said that the imperial government, despite its own gold standard, had perceived the depreciation in silver, and considered that the subject demanded an exhaustive examination; hence its decision to have the question discussed by experts of different views and countries, with the object of rendering stable the value of silver and securing a basis for financial measures. He further said he hoped the efforts of the commission would be crowned with success.

MICHIGAN'S DILEMMA.

What the Chicago Record Says About It.

The Chicago Record, in speaking of the decision of the Michigan supreme court, regarding tax titles, says:

The State of Michigan is in a fever of excitement over a decision of the supreme court of the state, regarding tax titles. In brief, the court held that under the legislation of 1889 and 1891 a tax deed conveyed an absolute title to the lands held under it, and that the holder of such tax conveyance could oust the original owner of the land and take immediate possession of the property. The value of the land and the amount of the tax paid did not in any way affect the transaction. No sooner was the decision made public than the office of the auditor general at Lansing swarmed with tax sharks ready to pay the taxes of delinquents and secure therefor an absolute deed of conveyance of the title.

Cases of extreme hardship under this law are reported from various parts of the state. In some instances minors, whose guardians have neglected to pay their taxes, have had them paid by tax sharks, and have thus lost their patrimonies unless the guardians can be held for neglect of their duties and thus be made liable. It is true that the tax purchasers must find out as best they can what property owners are delinquent in their taxes, but this cannot be a very difficult thing in Michigan, where all records are public or quasi public property.

It does not seem possible that so sweeping and drastic a measure could pass both bodies of the Michigan legislature and receive the signature of the governor without its vicious provisions being discovered, for collusion is not possible even if it were at all probable. If the law is capable of a construction such as has been given it by the state Supreme Court, the exigencies of the case would warrant the governor in calling the legislature together to amend or repeal it. The placing of such a weapon in the hands of so graceless a set of robbers as the tax sharks are and allowing it to remain there is a thing that demands the immediate attention of the state government. In Michigan, since the decision of the Court, hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of real estate has changed hands for which the original owner of the property has not received a dollar of compensation, and the evil is likely to become worse the longer the law continues in operation.

Long and Discouraging Illness With Symptoms of Consumption

All Medicines Fail Except Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—Ten years ago, my wife's health began to fail. I consulted a physician, and for one year she remained under his care, and took all the medicine I prescribed, but still grew worse. We then consulted other physicians, and she doctored off and on for four years without any improvement. As her mother died of consumption, and I expected my wife would go the same way. However, feeble as my wife was and though by the physician, I could not give up hope, and she still clung to life. Then we began to try different medicines. We found that of all the preparations taken, a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla had seemed to do her the most good, so she determined to take that medicine again. I bought six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and while taking this bottle she seemed to get better. This was so encouraging, after so that she continued with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Her health has improved, and she has ceased to complain. She is still taking the medicine, and feels so much better and stronger that we believe her to be in perfect health. Altogether,

"BY AND BY."

"Mamma, take me on your knee."
The baby teased, with pleading cry.
"Mamma, won't you sing to me?"
But mamma answered "By and by."

"Mamma, ain't it most by'm by now?"
Came with a patient baby sigh.
She could not understand, somehow,
What mamma meant by "By and by."

Mamma, busy with her book,
Read the lonely twilight long,
Noticed not the tired look,
Nor paid the patience with a song.

Lo, the night had settled down,
And baby's cheek was hot and dry.
The doctor stood with thoughtful frown
And only murmured "By and by."

Next day, just as the sun had set,
The small voice said, with a tired smile:
"Mamma, dear, is it by'm by yet?
I've waited such a long, long while!"

The stars that dreamed the night away
In benediction beamed on high,
Smiles on the sweet lips seemed to play—
She dwelt in the faroff "By and by."

Mamma sighed in her troubled nap
Her teardrops gleamed in the drowsy gloom;
She woke with a curly head in her lap—
And a lullaby softly filled the room.

THE TREE GHOST.

Jacques had just committed an awful deed—a fearful crime—in short, a murder—yet so far he felt no remorse. It happened in this way:

He was not naturally cruel nor wicked—only quick tempered and impulsive. A law student, diligent and thorough, a philosopher imbued with Schopenhauer, he led a dreary life, lacked money, gave lessons and scarcely kept soul and body together. The burden began to weigh heavily on him, and at times he felt an angry revolt against his circumstances, a dissatisfaction that might—and did, as we shall see—lead him to the lowest depths of infamy.

One summer evening, hungry and penniless, raging at the thought of a pleasure party planned for the morrow, which he must give up for want of a little money, he walked beyond the city gates, and at about 8 o'clock he found himself on a long and lonely road which stretched straight on till it was lost in the dusky gloom.

Then like an evil omen there came a heavy crash of thunder, and great drops of rain began to fall. Jacques did not fear the storm except as concerned his clothing and his health. He did not wish to spoil his garments nor catch an expensive attack of pneumonia. No shelter. To the right, as to the left, a barren plain. At last by good fortune he spied a tree standing alone, a crooked, twisted apple tree. The tired man crouched under its branches. The fury of the storm redoubled. Everything, even nature, seemed against poor Jacques. Chilly, soaked, exasperated, he shook his fist in the air as the rain fell down like threads of steel.

"Such weather, such weather!" After a little a second person came grumbling up to lean against the tree, with his back to Jacques, whom he had not perceived. The newcomer seemed to be a little tipsy, for he rambled on aloud in a husky voice:

"This is fine! Those fellows played me a pretty trick in driving off with my carriage and leaving me to walk home alone with all this money in my pocket."

Jacques, hearing these fatal words and yielding to the temptation of his evil passion, fell upon the stranger, strangled him and emptied his purse. This accomplished, he turned toward home.

The apple tree, which had not budged during this incident, began to follow him.

It is not a customary occurrence for an apple tree to follow a man, and therefore Jacques cannot be accused of weakness if we admit that he felt a little surprise. Hearing the roots sliding behind him, he turned and beheld the tree, a dark shadow on the darkness.

"I am nervous," he thought. "It is a fancy!"

He continued to walk, and the tree continued to follow him.

"Either I have gone mad," said Jacques, "or this manifestation is an inexplicable freak of nature. But I shall soon know, for when I get into the city the people will not let an apple tree go by without making some remark."

But the people passed and made no remarks, and the tree did not appear to mind them.

Jacques meditated.

"Well, then," he continued, "it is certain that this apple tree is a visible form of remorse, such as Banquo's ghost was to Macbeth and the commander to Don Juan, but this hallucination is the more singular because I feel no remorse at all. The tree seems to disregard received tradition. Never mind! I have got some money. After a night's rest my tree will have disappeared."

He quickened his step, not to escape from his apple tree, but because he was weary and longed for repose. Before the door he wondered if the apple tree would enter. He even felt a kind of interest about it on account of the narrowness of the hall, fearing the branches might be broken. He rang, went in, and the door closed. The tree remained outside. Jacques smiled, not that the tree annoyed him, only he thought the janitor might have objected to such a companion.

In his own room he counted his ill gotten gain—a considerable sum—then he suddenly thought of the tree and looked out. It was on the sidewalk gliding to and fro. It even moved politely aside to allow two policemen to pass. Jacques went to bed and slept soundly till morning.

Heavy knocks on his door awoke him. "Oh! Ah! Yes, to be sure!" It was his friends, who came to seek him for the pleasure party. He threw on his garments and opened the door, greeting them gayly. Then he finished his dressing while proposing lively plans for the day. He slipped several goldpieces into his pocket, and they started off together to meet the rest of the company at the place agreed on.

The apple tree, which waited respectfully for him on the sidewalk, began immediately to follow him like a well bred lackey. Jacques, who felt no grudge, gave it a little smile of acknowledgment as though it were an old acquaintance.

When the party of ladies and gentlemen was complete, Jacques insisted on regaling them all with vermuth and ordered the waiter to give one to his apple tree, though it seemed to sketch a gesture of refusal with its boughs. The waiter, who did not understand, looked angry.

As they entered the carriage to drive to the railway station Jacques gave his tree an amiable nudge with his elbow, making some joke about leaving it behind. Impassively the tree waited on the sidewalk till they started, when it followed the conveyance at a quick trot. Leaning over the window, Jacques watched it. Once he gave a little cry of terror as a heavy vehicle crossed its path, and he thought it might be run over, but it escaped.

"What in the world is the matter with you?" exclaimed his companion in surprise.

"Don't trouble about me. It is only my apple tree".—

"Your apple tree? Why, what can you mean?"

But Jacques did not explain.

At the station the tree did not get lost. Jacques began to feel himself cruel in trotting the poor thing so far. He was growing attached to it really. He was soon reassured, for it galloped beside the train like an outrider attending the carriage of a sovereign.

Only Jacques was so absorbed in watching it that he neglected his friends, and one of them—a lady, who liked him—reproached him gently for his preoccupation.

"You are jealous of my apple tree?" he asked her laughingly.

"Apple tree! Apple tree!" They began to chant it to the tune of a popular song, improvising words which they thought appropriate. Jacques really feared they might hurt its feelings, but it did not seem to mind.

The chosen spot was reached. The day sped on in mirth. Jacques was wild with merriment, never losing sight of his attendant tree.

Some one proposed a row on the river.

"Who?"

"My ap"—

"Apple tree! Apple tree! What is the joke? Do explain."

Jacques reddened a little. These people could not possibly understand. He looked at his tree as if to consult it, and it seemed to him that the tree had no objection to the water.

The boats set off, and the apple tree followed. Jacques kept on the alert, ready to hold out a helping hand—he was so fond of his tree!

In the evening at dinner Jacques imbibed recklessly, and he did not forget to fling a glass of champagne over his apple tree. He grew very tipsy and quarrelsome.

"I am tired of you all!" he cried to his friends. "You bore me inexpressibly! I shall leave you and go off by myself—with my apple tree!"

They laughed good naturedly and tried to keep him. The ladies looked annoyed, but off he went.

It was night now and very dark. He went along the steep bank, still accompanied by his tree. He felt horribly humiliated and ashamed, for he was staggering and stumbling, while the sober tree slid on erect and firm.

Jacques zigzagged along in a deplorable fashion nearer and nearer to the water's edge. Feeling the necessity of support, he sidled up to the apple tree.

"You are my friend," he said. "Let me lean on you."

He threw his weight against the tree, but his body encountered the empty air. He lost his balance, rolled down the steep declivity into the river and was drowned.

A Commercial Cupid.

He wanted her all for his own, as some foolish lovers do, but she was not an emotional monopolist of that kind.

On the contrary, she had syndicated her affections, and there were half a dozen young men, each of whom was quite as much to her as was this young Romeo J. Gould.

Not only had she disposed of a number of blocks of stock in her heart, but she gloried in it with true speculative pride, and when he would seek to claim her as his own she would taunt him with it and tell him she could not afford to make an emotional specialty of him, and that he must be content with what she felt inclined to let him have.

"Spare my tender feelings," he cried to her one evening in the gloaming, after she had told him how his account stood. "Spare my tender feelings."

She smiled with sardonic sweetness.

"I'm sorry I can't accommodate you—real sorry, but I can't. The best I can do for you is to tender my spare feelings."

Then, after the long depression, the crash came, and he sank into hopeless emotional bankruptcy.—Detroit Free Press.

California Redwood Trees.

We have evidence in California that redwood trees cut down 60 years ago have made sprouts which are new trees from 3 to 5 feet in diameter and from 100 to 150 feet high. It is the rapid growth of some of these trees which leads people to doubt their great age, but there seems to be no reason for doubting that the method of calculating by annual rings of wood is sound, and that the great age imputed to some of these trees has solid groundwork to build on.—Meehan's Monthly.

Strange, Indeed.

In view of the fact that there are manufactured in the United States between 40,000,000 and 47,000,000 packs of playing cards every year besides those imported, it does seem strange that a man sometimes fails altogether to find the single little ace he needs to sing first tenor in a blithe and frolicsome quartet.—Boston Globe.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

THE GOLDEN GATE STATE.

An Interesting Letter About California From A Former Tecumseh Resident.

BAKERSFIELD, CALIFORNIA.
Saturday, March 10, 1894.

EDITOR HERALD:—Perhaps some of the readers of your paper would be interested to know something of Central California, viewed with the eyes of a disinterested eastern man. and if you think so, print the following:

Bakersfield is a town of about 4,000 people, 3,000 white people and 1,000 Chinese. In the way of city improvement it is about 15 years behind the rest of the United States. The town has no city or village charter and is run by the county board of supervisors. The water works and sewer system are owned by private corporations, and although there are no city taxes to pay, the water and sewer companies charge enough to more than make this up. The community has 11 church societies, 65 saloons and the Salvation Army. The churches are fairly well sustained and the saloons all do well. So much for the rough side of Bakersfield. The white people here are nearly all former residents of the eastern states and comprise a community at once thrifty and generous—a freer class of people I never met—always ready to make a stranger welcome and make a place for him to earn an honest living in this new country.

We have been here since about February 1st and the weather has been delightful, just like May in Michigan. The yards are covered with green grass and the rose bushes full of buds; but the most beautiful of growing things are the palms and magnolias. All winter blue violets may be gathered by the armful. From May until November not a drop of rain falls in the valley and of course irrigation is the only salvation for crops of any kind, but they have plenty of water from Kern river, a large stream fed by the melting snow in the mountains. In front of every house is a ditch and once each week the yards and gardens are literally "drownded out."

The principal products of this valley are alfalfa (a swift growing grass which affords four crops of hay a year) and ridiculous fruits. The peaches are wonderful. I drove through a 200-acre orchard last week and saw many trees only four years old which would measure 20 inches in circumference at the trunk. Such a growth seems to an eastern man almost impossible, but it must be remembered that in this climate the trees grow ten months in the year instead of five. After peaches, raisin grapes is the most widely cultivated fruit, but the hard times and high freight rates have combined to make the raisin business a poor speculation for the last two seasons.

We came to Bakersfield on account of the dryness of the climate, not thinking to meet a single acquaintance, but found the first day D. C. Pennington, who will be remembered by all your Macon and Tecumseh readers. Mr. Pennington is in the nursery business, having an interest in two concerns, one in this place and one at Poso, a settlement 22 miles out, and has a good business. He likes California and desires no more cold country farming. Many of the older residents of Tecumseh will remember Elder McLeod who preached in the Baptist church there 40 years ago. Mrs. McLeod is a sister of Mr. John Osborn, and we were indeed pleased to meet friends who knew all the people we used to know in our old Tecumseh home. Mr. McLeod is nearly 80 years old, but enjoys the best of health. His garden is a wonder. Peaches, grapes, apricots, figs, pears, plums, beside all the small fruits he raises on a lot 66x115 feet, and sufficient in quantity for a dozen large families. From this garden were sent apricots and peaches to the World's Fair and they captured the first prizes in their class. Four of McLeod's sons and one daughter are here, and with father, mother, children and grand-children where could a happier family be found? The oldest son, A. J., runs the largest lumber business in the county and the others are nicely situated.

Any eastern farmer with capital to start could succeed well in this county. There is no better land in California and the water supply is inexhaustable, beside being furnished at very reasonable rates, $1.50 an acre a year. It only takes four years to get a full bearing orchard, and almost anything that will grow in any climate will grow and do well here. Many settlers are coming this way and all who have brought even a small amount of money and grit are doing well.

The "long yarns" told about California are not so badly overdrawn. The climate is certainly the finest in the world and the soil only needs money and a little work to make it produce anything and everything that will grow in any climate.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

The Friends maple sugar supper Monday evening was a sweet and lucrative affair, of which Rev. Fistler had the benefit.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Meade, of Ypsilanti, were the guests of Mrs. Josephine Meade yesterday. He will return tomorrow, but his wife will remain a week or so, to visit old friends in Macon.

Justice Frasier had a lively legal set-to in his court yesterday. The suit was James M. Jones vs. John C. Hazlett. Attorneys Ingersoll and O'Mealey appeared for the plaintiff; Burridge and Bird for the defendant. The case was vigorously contested, and lasted until late in the evening. The court reserved his decision.

Last Thursday was a gala day for the Eastern Star lodge of Tecumseh. At their regular meeting held at that time a large number of invited guests were present from Adrian and Manchester, and a plan was adopted to entertain them which proved to be a decided hit. The refreshments were served promptly at six o'clock, the regular supper hour, the tables were cleared by seven, and the whole evening was then devoted to lodge work without any interruption. Several applications were voted pon and two candidates were initiated. Twenty visitors were present from Adrian and about the same number from Manchester. About 160 partook of supper. It was one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by the Eastern Star since the lodge was founded.

A Jolly Surprise Party.

A more enjoyable surprise party is seldom given than the one which dropped down upon Mr. Alphonzo Dewey at his residence west of the village last Friday. His wife had been informed of what was impending, and she proved herself able to disprove the old adage that a woman cannot keep a secret. When the first load of villagers arrived at the house they found Mr. Dewey leisurely toasting his toes by the sitting-room fire in his shirt sleeves. Within five minutes another load came and they kept coming for an hour or more until the house was literally overrun with guests. By eight o'clock over one hundred visitors, including all the near neighbors and many from the village, had arrived and for the next two hours that house was the scene of genuine jollity. Music and mirth, feasting and festivity ruled the hour. After supper Abner Wilson took possession of the ceremonies and introduced an impromptu program of short talks, music, etc. Saturday was Mr. Dewey's forty-first birth day and the party was intended to commemorate that event. We understand that James Mitchell of this village was the guilty man who put up the job, and carried it to a successful termination. All the invited guests fell into the scheme most cheerfully and the result was an evening of rare social enjoyment.

OUR WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIOS.

Seven numbers of our Art Portfolios have now been issued and those taking them are fully satisfied with their bargain. People should bear this fact in mind: That they are receiving the official photographs of the fair, the views taken by the official artist, and authorized by the officers of the local board, and that each view is accompanied by an elaborate description, thus giving not only illustrations, but a history of the Exposition as well.

This magnificent gallery consists of copyrighted photographs, six by eight inches, of the World's Columbian Exposition, the use of which is authorized by the official management, in one oblong volume. The text matter covers the entire page opposite each photograph and expands into an amount of reading matter that surpasses anything of its kind ever before produced.

No. eight, now ready for distribution, contains a magnificent table of contents, as follows, most of them interior views in the Liberal Arts building:

1. Norway, Art Work.
2. Russia, Interior.
3. Siam Pavilion.
4. Switzerland, Interior.
   Grand Basin.
5. Colonnade from the Basin.
6. Looking north from Colonnade.
7. Peristyle, north front of the Agricultural building.
8. Bridge and Administration Building.

OBITUARY.

On Wednesday morning, March 8th, 1894, Mrs. Rachael Pocklington, after a few days severe sickness with pneumonia passed away at the age of 85 years.

The funeral services were held at her late home in Raisin on the following Saturday morning, Rev. Cansfield officiating. A quartette of the choir furnished appropriate music.

The deceased was born at Amsterdam, Montgomery county, N. Y., December 29, 1808. In March, 1835, she came to Michigan and settled on the old homestead where she lived 64 years.

Christopher Pocklington, after a few days illness with pneumonia, died on Saturday morning, March 10, 1894, at the age of 75 years.

The deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, March 4, 1818, and came to Michigan in February, 1849. He lived on the same farm 52 years.

The funeral services were held at his late residence in Raisin, Monday afternoon, March 12th, Rev. Cansfield officiating.

Again we are reminded that death calls often. Within three days a wife and mother, husband and father are taken: a home is broken up, and neighbors and friends gather to pay their last respects to the departed and sympathize with weeping friends.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends who so willingly and kindly looked after the wants and comforts of our father and mother during their sickness and death. Also to the friends who furnished the floral pieces, and to the quartette for their beautiful selections at the funeral services.

The Tecumseh village election last week, was a disgustingly tame affair; no strife, no words, no personal abuse, no eyes gouged out, no noses smashed, "no nothing" to make the occasion pleasing to the voters and profitable to deputy sheriffs and justices.—Adrian Press.

Prohibitionists who desire a reliable newspaper cannot do better than to take the New York Voice. It fills the same place in that party, which is occupied by the N. Y. Tribune in the Republican party, and every prohib should take it. The Voice for politics and the HERALD for local reading forms a good combination.

The Adrian Press says: "The Tecumseh Herald ironically remarks that 'the rumor has gained circulation that the Lake Shore authorities contemplate the erection of a new depot in this town.' Perhaps you don't believe it, but it is true. We have heard this rumor at least three times in the last three months.

Whether the House of Lords shall be abolished or continued as an elected upper chamber of Parliament is openly discussed in England. Mr. George W. Smalley, the New York Tribune's London correspondent, will contribute to the April Harper's his impressions of the Lords as a working legislative body representing public opinion in Great Britain.

The Cutting Machine Co. is a new firm, H. D. Cutting & Son being the members there of, that has engaged shop room in the Tiffany Iron Works. They do all kinds of machine repairing and can manufacture any kind of an iron machine to order. Something of that character has long been needed here and they will doubtless work up a good custom. They have excellent quarters and plenty of machinery with which to do all kinds of work.

We wish to admonish our correspondents and others to send in their articles for publication earlier in the week. We begin setting type on the paper Tuesday morning, and it very frequently happens that important items are received Thursday forenoon, which might have been handed in Tuesday just as well, hence are crowded out, much to our regret. A little more forethought on the part of correspondents would save them much annoyance and disappointment sometimes.

Secretary of State Jochim to Be Tried First.

The Hearing of the Case Against Him Will Begin at Lansing April 9—Cases Against Ellis and Others to Go Over.

JOCHIM IS THE FIRST.

LANSING, March 16.—In the circuit court Thursday morning the trial of Secretary of State Jochim on a charge of making a false public record was set for April 9. This is the most serious case against Jochim. It was selected for first trial after a conference with the lawyers. The case against Attorney General Ellis for forgery was continued over the term. The conspiracy case against all the persons indicted on that charge was continued, but the Ellis-May case for destroying the Wayne county records still remains undisposed of. When court convened this morning, Judge Person asked the attorneys which case they would try first, and remarked that on the showing made the Ellis forgery case would have to go over the term. Prosecutor Gardner said he was ready to take up the case against Jochim for making a false public record first, and then, if there was time, to try Warren and Potter on the same charge, and follow that up with the May-Ellis case.

The judge said that, as he wished to give the defendants all the time possible and not drive them unjustly, he would set the trial of Jochim for April 9. Attorney Day, for the defense, said he supposed they would have to submit, although they could more easily prepare for the trial of Berry. Prosecutor Gardner said, however, that he did not propose to try Berry first, as Jochim is the principal defendant in the case. Mr. Day then said the defense would be ready at the time set.

Daunt claims he will receipt for post office property, but not for the contents of the building, and until he does so Maj. Wilcox proposes to keep him out in the cold.

Amherst B. Cheney Confesses to Malfeasance in Office.

GRAND RAPIDS, March 17.—Amherst B. Cheney, banker at Sparta, and four years ago prohibition candidate for governor, has made a damaging confession in the probate court. He was a guardian of the estate of a mentally incompetent old woman and invested her entire estate, $960, in a mortgage. This mortgage he sold to Mrs. Fowler, a widow, and then retaining it in his possession he sold it again and used the money himself. In the probate court Friday he was forced to resign his guardianship.

NEW ROAD TO THE PINERIES.

John Bagley, of Chicago, at the Head of the Assured Project.

MENOMINEE, March 17.—Several weeks ago it was announced that the Wisconsin & Michigan Railway company had purchased the roadbed of the Ingalls & White Rapids narrow gauge logging road, which roadbed the new organization was to utilize in the construction of its line from the mouth of the Menominee river up into the extensive pineries in northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan. John Bagley, of Chicago, was the owner of the narrow gauge logging road, and he is also the main organizer of the Wisconsin & Michigan. The new road will not at present be built from either this point or Marinette, but will start from near Porterfield station, on the Ellis Junction branch of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, in Wisconsin, running north and east, and crossing the Menominee river into Michigan, about a mile above the Grand Rapids, near Ingalls, on the Northwestern, and proceeding north to the Soo road, which it will intersect at a point 4 miles west of Hermansville. The rails are now being laid on the bridge over the Menominee river, and the narrow gauge logging road is rapidly being changed to standard gauge. A 7-mile branch to Peshtigo is also a certainty.

MISHAP AT A LAUNCH.

Several Spectators Injured at a Wyandotte Shipyard.

DETROIT, March 15.—The Harvey H. Brown, the largest vessel on the lakes, was launched at Wyandotte Wednesday afternoon amid exciting incidents. There was considerable difficulty in getting the big ship started down the ways and the workmen had to remove some of the supports of scaffolding about her to accelerate her progress. Upon the scaffolding were gathered fully 3,000 people as spectators. When the vessel finally touched the water the scaffolding began to sway and before the spectators could reach a place of safety a section of it came tumbling down. Fully a score of people were thrown into the water. Charles L. Clark, a well-known insurance agent of this city, had both legs broken and was badly injured internally. Several others received bruises and cuts, but all were rescued from the water without serious injury. The boat floated in the water like a bird.

The Clinton Election.

EDITOR HERALD:—

The effusion in the Clinton Local of the 15th inst., boils himself—perhaps I should say herself—completely down over the article published in your issue of the 8th inst., condemns in strong terms an anonymous article, and then after trying to answer same, commits the same "dishonorable" and "cowardly" act he or she so deprecates. Truly, consistency is a jewel. If the truth were known, the probabilities are the article was not intended to cause "the person" pain, or gripes, but to show the interested citizen the true status of matters as they are in Clinton.

He or she says "the gentleman is to be congratulated on the clique which bears his name, as it is composed of one-half of Clinton's best citizens." Let us analyze this statement and see if the TRUTH bears out the assertion, and wherein his (Mr. Huntington's) political strength lies. His party cast 110 votes, or slips, against 122. The factory forces polled 58 votes, or more than half his total. Of the 58 voters 46 do not own property or pay taxes here, and so have everything to gain and nothing to lose by voting to please him. The 12 who do own property here and consider Clinton their home, have still stronger reason to vote the ticket he desires them to, for to oppose A. C. Huntington in any of his efforts to gain influence, position or notoriety is to lose their job. We have heard much of how Hanover, Ill., turned everything into his keeping—mill, church, school and council, and wonder if he did not perfect himself then in the tactics which he has practiced here. He adopts, and considers honorable, political intrigue which no saloon man in Clinton would stoop to, and all this under the cloak of religion. Perhaps this is religion but it is not Christ-like.

We have good reason to believe that he manipulates nearly the total factory vote and that when he places this balance of power (amounting to nearly one-fourth of the total vote of the village) in opposition to the wish of the majority of the actual residents whose every interest centers here, he abuses his influence and becomes a dangerous factor in politics. The assertion that Mr. H. is actuated wholly by a desire to do good, falls flat when his methods are considered. The allusion to "Boss" McKane would be very apt if applied to the other side. Mr. Huntington and his friends were the ones who tried to force the caucus through in a room too small to hold the voters; who refused to sanction an adjournment, and who attempted to run the caucus on the "gag" plan. Being outnumbered his plan of notifying his followers to "be sure and be on hand early" did not work. If there was any man more active than Mr. H. between the acts (of adjournment and re-assembling) I fail to find him.

Standing as he does, one of the pillars of a christian church, he cannot afford to resort to political intrigue, even though he gain the much coveted influence and notoriety.

"The benevolent, public spirited man is not he that seeks the income for the corporation that his own personal taxes may be lowered, but who rather bears the burden himself that would otherwise fall on innocent heads."

Now, that sounds very pretty, indeed, but is neither logic or sense. Whose heads, if not the saloon men? The state fixes the amount which the saloon men pay for license to sell, and no matter how benevolent Mr. H. is, the law and the facts remain unchanged. If Mr. H. can only be satisfied to occupy his legitimate space, claiming only his modest share of influence in politics, he will leave us better qualified to manage our affairs when he is gone.

E. VAN DEMARK.

Clinton, March 19, 1894.

That Village Caucus.

A communication in last week's Local signed "W," and one in the News signed "Law and Order," take the HERALD to task for stating the facts about the Clinton village caucus. One of them thinks an anonymous letter very cowardly and then proceeds to hide his own identity behind a big "W." The other thinks the HERALD article unworthy of notice and then goes on to notice it with a batch of misrepresentations that would put Ananias to shame. Unless we misjudge the ear marks the two communications were written by the same person. That person must know, if he knows anything about newspaper customs, that the local items from other towns are never signed by the man who furnishes them. Many of them are written in the office from slips handed to the editor by various persons. The editor is responsible for them, but he takes care to know where they come from, that he may protect himself against imposition.

The real question at issue in this controversy is not what Mr. Huntington's views may be on temperance, politics or religion. He has a right to his views on all these subjects, and no citizen of Clinton would deprive him of them, but they object to his Boss Tweed political methods, and they set the seal of their condemnation upon these at the caucus and at the election.

A few of the misstatements contained in these two products of the imagination deserve notice. It is not true that one saloon here is selling strong liquor on a beer license. Every saloon in Clinton has a full license which covers both malt and spirituous liquors. As to straw bonds, no bond has been accepted that is not perfectly collectable by process of law. We presume this statement is intended for Mr. Jacobs. If so it is wholly without foundation, for he is entirely responsible financially. We are not arguing either for, or against the liquor law, but the law is on the statute book, placed there by Mr. Huntington's political friends, and the men who pay taxes under it have their legal rights. The charge that the 122 voters who elected the regular ticket are the slums of the saloon is a gross insult to many of our best business men. In fact there were just as good temperance men on the regular ticket as their opponents. We beg leave to state that all the temperance, virtue and morality existing in Clinton does not reside in "one man;" furthermore that a majority of our very best citizens, property holders and tax payers are opposed to the "one man" power in politics.

Is it true that the factory was left without a watchman most of the evening that the caucus was held and that Mr. Huntington's adherents had their minions out, gathering in the faithful? Is it true that Mr. Huntington was willing to run the risk of invalidating the insurance on the factory for the sake of manipulating the village caucus? The effort to kick up a big cloud of dust and blind people to the real controversy will do for the marines only. The people of Clinton have nothing against Mr. Huntington personally. He is one of our most worthy citizens. The question at issue was neither a temperance, political nor religious one. It was simply a hand to hand contest between the liberal minded citizens of Clinton and a political ring. The people got there and the ring got left. That tells the whole story.

SPRING TIME

The Best Season of the Year to Treat Chronic Catarrh.

Notwithstanding that a great number of people have been cured of chronic catarrh by taking Pe-ru-na during the past cold season, yet it cannot be denied that the cold, wet, stormy winter has retarded many cures. But spring-time has come at last, and now is the time for all catarrh sufferers to begin a systematic course of treatment for this disease. The greatest difficulty in the way of treating chronic catarrh is that the patient is so liable to catch cold during the treatment, and thus delay a cure. This liability at this season of the year is, in a great measure, removed, and no one should neglect the opportunity to begin treatment. Send for free catarrh book.

As a spring medicine Pe-ru-na is a never failing remedy. It cleanses the blood through digestion, and gives tone to the whole system by increasing the nutritive value of the food. "Spring fever," as it is sometimes called, which produces a tired-out, sleepy feeling, and inability to do much mental or physical work, is the result of a sluggish digestion, and no blood medicine will be of any use whatever unless it is able to rectify the impaired digestion. The great popularity that Pe-ru-na has is due to the fact that in all such cases it at once corrects digestive derangements and enriches the blood, purifying this very important source of that vital fluid. Send for free book on spring diseases. Address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, O.

It is by all odds the best liniment. Mr. Chas. Metzger, 217 Geyer Ave., St. Louis, Mo., is of the same opinion. He says: "Salvation Oil is the best remedy we have ever used in our family. It is the best remedy on earth."

Uncle Joe Bennett, president of the Lenawee county savings bank, was in Hudson last week, and while there gained admission to the vault of the Thompson Savings bank, on pretense of seeking knowledge how to reconstruct the vault of the Adrian bank. A bank robbery in Hudson now would pitch Uncle Joe under a cloud.—Adrian Press.

The spring poets have not been many around this locality, but the fruit prospect prophets are numerous. According to some we are going to ruin; hard times are inevitable; others take a more cheerful view and say if we don't have peaches, perhaps we may have a crop of cucumbers, and these cucumbers will not need the apple crop to furnish material for their pickling, for we will simply call on these grumblers to look in the barrel after we have them put up, and we will guarantee an acidity far surpassing what cider vinegar would be able to produce.

MARCH, APRIL AND MAY

Is the Season for Catarrhal Dyspepsia—The Blood Must be Cleansed.

The symptoms of catarrhal dyspepsia are: Coated tongue, pain or heavy feeling in the stomach, belching of gas, dizzy head, sometimes headache, despondent feelings, loss of appetite, palpitation of heart and irregularity of the bowels.

For this condition Pe-ru-na is found to be an admirable remedy. In all cases it brings prompt relief to the painful symptoms, and in a large per cent. of cases it makes a permanent cure. Pe-ru-na soothes the inflamed mucus surface, and thus strikes at the root of disease. It cases where the inflammation has been so severe and continued as to produce extreme irritability of the stomach the remedy may be taken in small doses at first, diluted in water; but, as soon as the improvement is sufficient to permit a full dose to be taken undiluted, it is a better way, and the cure is much more rapid. Pe-ru-na is also a spring medicine which at once removes the cause of all affections peculiar to the spring season by purifying the blood of all contamiations and invigorating the whole system.

Two valuable books—Family Physician No. 2, setting forth in detail the treatment of catarrh, coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitis, and consumption, in every phrase of the disease, and Family Physician No. 3, on spring remedies and diseases—will be sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

RICH WAS RIGHT.

The Supreme Court Sustains the Position of the Governor.

His Right to Oust the Board of Canvassers Unquestioned—State Officers Forced to Vacate—Successors Appointed and Installed.

UPHELD BY THE COURT.

LANSING, March 23.—In a unanimous opinion handed down the Michigan supreme court sustained the power of the governor to remove Secretary of State Jochim, Treasurer Hambitzer and Land Commissioner Berry for gross neglect of duty in failing to properly compare and verify the falsified canvass upon the salary amendment of 1893, and a judgment of ouster rendered against the derelict officials, who yet remain to be tried in the circuit court upon charges of felony and misdemeanor in connection with the canvass. The court considered two questions: First, the power of the governor to remove, and second, the sufficiency of the cause alleged.

The contention that there are property rights in a public office, and that, therefore, the removal by the governor of an officer without due process of law was contrary to the spirit of the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution, was overruled.

Speaking of the propriety of the governor's action in removing the officials the court uses this emphatic language:

"While there is an inclination on the part of the average American to accept good intentions as an excuse for mistakes, it is not for the public good that responsible public offices shall be confided to or remain in the custody of those whose duties and responsibilities rest so lightly upon them as to permit the public interests to be injured or endangered through neglect. And when such neglect from the gravity of the case becomes so serious in its character as to endanger or threaten the public welfare it is gross within the meaning of the law, and justifies the interference of the executive, upon whom is placed by this amendment the responsibility of keeping the affairs of the state in proper condition. We cannot think the term gross neglect means only intentional official wrongdoing. Such acts would hardly be described as neglect. It is said that this section confides great power to the governor. That is true, but the governorship is an exalted office, one which ought to carry with it a presumption of integrity of character and breadth of mind commensurate to its importance."

Col. John Atkinson asked the court for a stay of proceedings for a few days, but Justice McGrath said the court was not inclined to accede to the request. This announcement was at once followed by an application for a writ of error to the federal supreme court, but Chief Justice McGrath did not feel warranted in making any such concessions, especially after the entire bench had agreed upon the judgment of ouster.

Immediately after the court handed down its decision Gov. Rich formally appointed Rev. Washington Gardner, of Albion, secretary of state; William A. French, of Presque Isle, state land commissioner, and James M. Wilkinson, of Marquette, state treasurer. These gentleman were in waiting in the executive office when the supreme court decision was handed down. Ex-Judge Richard Cahill, of this city, one of the attorneys for the governor, who is also a notary public, administered the oath of office to the appointees.

Col. Atkinson advised the members of the board to submit to the decree of the supreme court, and accordingly at 2:30 o'clock the commissions were delivered to the appointed state officers.

Rev. Washington Gardner, of Albion, the new secretary of state, was born in Ohio in 1845. When he was 16 years of age he enlisted in the Sixty-fifth Ohio infantry, serving three years in the war of the rebellion. At the battle of Resaca, Ga., he was severely wounded. He subsequently graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan university, at Delaware, O., and later from the Albany law school, at Albany, N. Y. He studied theology at Boston and entered the ministry in 1877. In 1888 he was department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic for Michigan, and is now holding a professorship in Albion college.

The new state treasurer, James M. Wilkinson, was born in Novi, Oakland county, in 1848. He was a lawyer nine years, but became a banker at Marquette in 1873.

Since 1883 William A. French has been engaged in the lumber business in Presque Isle county.

LANSING, March 3.—Treasurer Wilkinson's bond has been approved by the attorney general and the deputy auditor general as required by the statute. It is in the sum of $150,000, and is signed by James Pendell, Frank Pendell, Balthaser Neidhardt, E. H. Towar, D. H. Merritt and Ferdinand Bending, all of Marquette.

Stabbed the Deputy Sheriff.

GRAND RAPIDS, March 23.—George W. Wright, a painter, stabbed Deputy Sheriff Harmon Cowan in the breast Friday night when the latter endeavored to replevin some goods, and then when Cowan returned with other officers and forced an entrance to the house, his wife fired twice at the posse. Neither of the shots took effect. Wright and his wife were arrested.

ITHACA, March 24.—The stave mill recently burned here will be succeeded by another structure of a permanent nature, and will be running in fifty days. Mr. C. W. Althouse, its owner, has received enticing propositions from Saginaw and other cities, but has submitted to this village a proposition to rebuild in a permanent manner if the village would give him $2,000.

Died in Prison.

JACKSON, March 24.—The first natural death for over a year has occurred at the prison. Murders, suicides, escapes, etc., have followed each other down to the present peaceful condition of prison affairs. It was Samuel W. Bishop, No. 5310, who came to the prison May 25, 1892, from Berrien county to expiate the crime of forgery, for which he was to have served eleven years.

Newkirk Is in California.

BAY CITY, March 22.—Charles W. Newkirk, who is wanted here for embezzling funds of the Bay county savings bank, of which he was a trusted employe, has been located in California. After receiving a requisition order from Gov. Rich to the governor of California Chief Murphy left for the west.

DE FRANCE IS GUILTY.

Convicted of Passing the Forged Draft at Kalamazoo.

The Evidence Was Very Conflicting—Rev. Dr. Henderson Swore the Prisoner Was in Detroit When the Crime Was Committed.

WILL GO TO PRISON.

KALAMAZOO, March. 23.—Stonewall J. De France was found guilty of passing a $12,500 forged draft on the First national bank of Kalamazoo on November 28, 1891, after a trial lasting fifteen days. The case has been the most interesting tried here in many years. The courtroom was packed at each session and many of the developments have been of the highest sensational character. Thirteen witnesses positively identified De France as Louis Forrest, who passed the draft. The defense showed by Rev. Dr. Henderson, of Chicago, and witnesses from Detroit that De France was in Detroit when the crime was committed. The three Galvin brothers swore that a contract was made between them and De France to borrow money of him and that they received the same in Detroit on the day he is charged with being here. Con W. Britt, an attorney for the defendant, was arrested and brought here in irons, placed on the stand and swore that he wrote the contract and signed De France's name to it by a power of attorney last January. A telegram from De France to Britt to push forward the matter and other papers were produced to corroborate the evidence of Britt and prove that the defense had been manufactured since the arrest of the respondent. This was denied by the respondent and wife. Within a week after the forgery De France had false teeth placed in his mouth in place of teeth that had wide spaces between them. Dr. Land, a Detroit dentist, did the work and he swore that the wife of the defendant attempted to bribe him not to come here and testify.

Andy Rohan, the Chicago detective, has been here during the trial awaiting the result. He says that he knows that De France is the man who bunkoed Banker Jacob Newman. Banker Anderson knows De France to be the man who secured a big bundle from his bank in April, 1892.

Buds Frozen in the Southwestern Michigan Belt.

BENTON HARBOR, March 26.—The cold wave accompanied by a terrific blizzard which struck this section Saturday has done great damage to fruit trees. The blackberry, cherry and strawberry crops are also destroyed, discouraging growers in general. This cold wave is the worst calamity the Michigan fruit belt has suffered since peaches were killed with that aggravating disease, the yellows, some years ago.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OUR WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIOS.

Seven numbers of our Art Portfolios have now been issued and those taking them are fully satisfied with their bargain. People should bear this fact in mind: That they are receiving the official photographs of the fair, the views taken by the official artist, and authorized by the officers of the local board, and that each view is accompanied by an elaborate description, thus giving not only illustrations, but a history of the Exposition as well.

This magnificent gallery consists of copyrighted photographs, six by eight inches, of the World's Columbian Exposition, the use of which is authorized by the official management, in one oblong volume. The text matter covers the entire page opposite each photograph and expands into an amount of reading matter that surpasses anything of its kind ever before produced.

No. eight, now ready for distribution, contains a magnificent table of contents, as follows, most of them interior views in the Liberal Arts building:

1. Norway. Art Work.
2. Russia, Interior.
3. Siam Pavilion.
4. Switzerland, Interior.
   Grand Basin.
5. Colonnade from the Basin.
6. Looking north from Colonnade.
7. "Plenty", north front of the Agricultural building.
8. Brige and Administration Building.

RIGHT HON. WILLIAM EWART GLADSTONE,

Until recently Prime Minister of Great Britain. Popularly known as the "Grand Old Man Was born in 1809, made his maiden speech sixty years ago, as a tory, and has a history too full of events to be chronicled here. The principal achievement of his late years has been the introduction of local self-government in England. He leaves the accomplishment of home rule for Ireland as a legacy to others.

THE EXCHANGE COLUMN.

We have concluded to try the experiment of running an exchange column for a few weeks, on trial. It will begin the first week in April. It will afford, we believe, an admirable medium through which farmers and all other persons can buy, sell or exchange personal property to advantage. If Mr. A. has a horse to sell and wishes a good milch cow let him make his wants known through the exchange column, and the chances are nine out of ten he can make the change desired. Small articles of little value, household furniture, live stock of all kinds, farming utensils, can readily be sold, bought or exchanged by this method at a nominal cost. The rate will be only five cents a line for each insertion, but no notice will be inserted for less than fifteen cents. Below are a few sample notices to show how the scheme may be utilized:

I wish to exchange a good cow for a few bushels of clover seed. Address John Peters, Ridgeway, Mich.

A good bookcase, capable of holding 500 volumes, will be sold at half price if taken before May 1st. Write to Jack, Macon, Mich.

I want a good span of work horses suitable for farm work, for which I will pay either wheat, oats or corn at the regular market price. Call on or address Rustic, Tipton, Mich.

A bicycle, which I have outgrown, will be exchanged for anything you think I would like. I am 14 years old. The machine is all in good order. Write for particulars to Chas. French, Tecumseh, Mich.

I have a black and white goat, broken to harness, which will easily draw a child of ten years. Will sell for $10, or exchange for a melodeon. Make me an offer. Address, Goat, Box 14, Clinton, Mich.

I will exchange a bow and violin (both in good order) for a flute in the same condition. The violin when new cost $15. Address C. R. J., Onsted, Mich.

A dozen selected Brahma eggs will be exchanged for the same quantity of Leghorn, or will sell for $2.00. Address Henry A., Box 403, Adrian, Mich.

An uninjured copy of "Ben Hur," will be given for a copy of any other work by Lew Wallace. Write to Harry Sullivan, Britton, Mich.

Regular Teacher's Examination.

The regular teacher's examination will be held at the court house, Adrian, on Thursday and Friday, March 29th and 30th, 1894, beginning at 8:30 a. m. standard time. Candidates will please bring pens, ink and legal cap paper.

At four o'clock Sunday morning the house owned and occupied by John Parin, on Maumee street, was burned down. The fire was well under way when discovered and the occupants came near being cremated. The building was beyond saving when the fire department arrived on the scene. It was insured for $800 and $400 on the contents. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

At ten o'clock last Saturday forenoon an alarm of fire was sounded, and the department was out in less than no time. The fire was in Albaugh's store on Railroad street, having caught where the pipe goes through the floor. A few pails of water soon extinguished the incipient blaze. The wind was blowing almost a gale at the time and had the fire once got outside, it would have made bad work in that section.

Scove Stacy must be going to get married. The Tecumseh Herald makes this announcement: "A few gallons of maple syrup will be taken on subscriptions at this office." Nothing but reckless extravagance, prompted by the near approach of that eventful moment when a man is about to become a benedict, could have suggested such a proposition. Experinced old married editors, with large and flourishing families, are perfectly contented with a gallon at a time—and mighty thankful to get that much. Scove has given himself away.—Evening Telegram.

Scribner's Magazine for April opens with the second of Octave Thanet's sketches of American Types, suggested by her observations among the State buildings during the World's Fair. In this article she describes "The Farmer in the South," whom she knows very well at home, as it is her custom to spend every winter on a plantation in Arkansas. The Illustrations by A. B. Frost are in his very best manner. A very different type of character is described by H. C. Bunner in his "Bowery and Bohemia." His great familiarity with the phases of New York life enables Mr. Bunner to describe a type, "the real Bohemian," who is very little known and imperfectly understood by the general public. It is fully illustrated with sketches by Clinedinst.

OUR FERRIS WHEEL PORTFOLIO.

The Best Offer Yet, which Needs Neither Dimes nor Coupons.

Among all the World's Fair Portfolios which have come under our notice, there is nothing finer than the one containing views taken from the Ferris Wheel. There is only one number, and that one is a beauty. It contains a portrait of Geo. W. Ferris, the engineer and constructor, a full and detailed description of the wheel itself, and thirteen views taken therefrom. Any person can obtain this art gem on two conditions.

1st—He must be a paid subscriber to the HERALD.

2d—His subscription must be paid in advance to the end of the year 1894.

New subscribers can obtain it by paying till Jan. 1st next. Old subscribers can have a copy by paying arrearages and in advance through 1894. Old subscribers, who have promptly paid already for this year, can have a copy by taking the trouble to call for it.

How long will this offer run? Just thirty-one days, ladies and gentlemen, and not five minutes longer. It begins to-day, March 1st, and will end on Saturday, March 31st, the night before All Fool's Day. Now, hustle up and take advantage of it forthwith. Don't wait until the last day in the afternoon and then forget it. We have a large invoice of the books on hand and there are plenty more where these came from, so there is no danger of the supply becoming exhausted.

The Franz Wilczek Concert Co. gave one of their finest programs at the opera house Monday evening. Most of the members of the troupe have visited Tecumseh before, are favorites with a Tecumseh audience, and their performance last Monday evening gained them new friends and admirers.

A very interesting Easter concert was given by the Sunday School at the Presbyterian church last Sabbath at the hour of morning service. It was a special service prepared for Easter Sunday, comprising choruses, recitations, responsive readings, etc. The pulpit rostrum was elaborately decorated with flowers and potted plants and the church choir led the music.

The first number of the Hudson Republican arrived last week. It is an eight column quarto sheet, very neatly printed and ably edited. It received 600 paid subscriptions at $1.50 a year before the first number was printed. This was a splendid start, most certainly, and indicates the confidence which the Hudson people have in the success of the new enterprise. The Republican has evidently come to stay.

Chas. L. Silvers of Clinton, and Miss Grace McNiel, daughter of F. A. McNiel of Tecumseh, went to Adrian Monday afternoon, visited the Rev. Mr. W. K. Spencer and took the vows that joined them for life, as husband and wife. They adopted a very brief and practical method of procedure and thus saved the trouble of a wedding party. The groom is bookkeeper and clerk in VanTuyle & Silvers bank. The bride has always lived in Tecumseh and has many friends here who will extend their heartiest congratulations. After a brief honeymoon in Detroit, the happy pair will take up their residence in Clinton.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 29, 1894.

All Fool's day is near at hand. Keep your eyes open and your powder dry.

The year 1893 was a bad year for business. The year 1894 is likely to pass into history as a bad year for political bosses.

The debate on the Senate tariff bill will begin April 2nd, and the general opinion at Washington is that it will last at least two months.

Kossuth's name does not mean much to the young men of 1894, but it was a great name forty years ago and had influence even in international politics.

Blizzards out west and summer weather in Michigan. The man who cannot find weather to his liking somewhere in this great country must be hard to please.

After Colonel Breckinridge has ceased to be one of the elect, he may not be such a stickler for the dogmas of Calvinism as he was in the case of Dr. Briggs.

The tax dodgers and the tax eaters have formed a combination at Washington in an effort to defeat the Wilson bill. Will their influence override the wishes of the people?

Congressman Bryan believes that one of two things should be done with the United States Senate—it should be abolished or its members should be chosen by direct vote of the people.

There are six millions of farms in the United States, upon which dwell more than thirty millions of our people. And yet under our present system of legislation these thirty millions have but little voice and less influence.

Senator Gorman complains that there is "an organized effort to belittle and degrade the U. S. Senate." This talk is silly. The men who are doing the most to belittle and degrade the Senate are its own members, who ignore the wishes of the people and work for the interests of monopoly.

The ten days limit in which President Cleveland must veto the Bland bill, if he decides to do so, expires today. The boards of trade in the leading cities, south as well as north, are urging a veto, while a majority of the members of Congress, voicing the views of their constituents, are just as emphatic in urging him to sign it.

Hon. Newton C. Blanchard has been appointed to succeed Mr. White of Louisiana, in the United States Senate. Mr. Blanchard is well known at the National capital, having been elected to the House of Representatives for seven consecutive terms. He will likely have an opportunity of voting for the Wilson bill twice as he has already voted for it in the House.

A recent report of the Chicago collector of customs to the Treasury department discloses the fact that the famous Blarney Stone in the Irish Castle on Midway Plaisance, was nothing but a limestone paving block dug up on a street in Chicago. At least 25,000 people kissed this bogus Blarney stone at 10 cents a head. The same report estimates that the public expended $7,000,000 on the Midway during the six months of the fair.

There is little talk about the poultry business being overdone. England alone last year imported from other lands upwards of $20,000,000 worth of eggs and poultry, of which she obtained less than $150,000 worth from her Uncle Sam. American hens, watched by American heads, can produce eggs as cheaply as any foreign bird that roosts, and there is no valid reason why they should not do a large business for our English cousins. This is not a question of low foreign wages. The reason why our trade has heretofore been so small is because our home demand is always greater than the supply.

Public opinion, as well as the press, is decidedly against Colonel Breckinridge in the Pollard scandal. Said a kinsman and warm friend of Breckinridge: "This trial is proving as sad a blow to Colonel Breckinridge's old friends as it is to him. As for myself, it fills me with sorrow and shame. A man of national reputation, whose magic voice has wrung admiration and applause from Puritanical Boston, Quaker Philadelphia and effervescent Chicago alike; who was regarded as one of the brightest lights Kentucky ever produced, and whose future promised so much, to be proven in a court of justice a whited sepulchre, is more than I can bear without feeling that not only Breckinridge but Kentucky has been disgraced."

SOLVING THE PROBLEM.

The Agitation of Bimetallism Reaching Out Among the Agricultural Classes in Germany.

The report from Berlin of the meeting of the government commission which has been formed to consider the silver problem in Germany indicates that the subject is to have serious consideration in that country. The fact that Count von Posadowsky, secretary of the imperial treasury, presided at the first meeting of the commission gives a high official character to the body, and warrants the expectation that the conclusions which may be reached will receive the sanction of the imperial government. And not less significant were the remarks of Posadowsky in assuming the chair. He stated in effect that notwithstanding the fact that the gold standard prevailed in Germany, the imperial government had perceived with deep concern the depreciation of silver, and that it was now considered that the subject demanded an exhaustive examination. It had, therefore, been decided to have the question discussed by experts with the object of rendering stable the value of silver and of securing a basis for practical measures.

In some respects the meeting of this German commission under the direct auspices of the imperial government is the most important monetary event which has occurred for some months. And it seems to indicate a distinct advance in the cause of bimetallism. At the Brussels monetary conference when the debate was opened upon the initial thesis advanced by the American members to the effect that it was desirable to find some means of increasing the use of silver in the currency system of the nations, the delegates from Germany, Austria, Hungary and Russia hastened to say that they were inhibited by their instructions from debating or voting upon any resolution whatever. And the Germans maintained that obstinate position to the end. There were, of course, individual bimetallists among the Germans in the conference who were ready to and who did express themselves, but so far as they officially represented the imperial government they would not, because they could not, agree to anything.

Since that time there has been an active and earnest movement among the agricultural classes throughout Germany in the interest of the restoration of bimetallism. The German farmers and landed proprietors have seen what American farmers and landowners have witnessed, a continued and steady decline in the prices of farm products keeping exact pace with the decline of the market price of silver bullion.

The agricultural classes in Germany are the bone and sinew of the land. The government in the end will be compelled to hearken to them.

And then it is not unlikely that the imperial government has begun to view with alarm the prospect of the impairment of the value of the silver coin in circulation in the empire. Germany has 440,000,000 marks of full legal tender silver money in circulation and 452,000,000 marks of subsidiary coin—in all about $181,000,000 of our money. A small amount compared to the silver circulation of France or the United States, but enough to excite the anxiety of the German government.

When the agitation began in the United States for the unconditional repeal of the silver purchase act, there were some Americans who claimed to be the friends of silver who affected to believe that the discredit of silver by the United States would, in the end, bring about the re-establishment of universal bimetallism. If it had been adopted as a policy, it would have been heroic as a remedy, though foolhardy, seeing the enormous evil that would result. But it may be that our abandonment of silver purchases will actually force the attention of other governments to take action to prevent their own bankruptcy and the ruin of their people.

In this light we are able to view the still further decline in silver with some degree, not of satisfaction, but of composure.—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE SILVER CAUSE.

A Temporary Victory by the Friends of a Single Gold Standard Does Not Discourage the Advocates of Silver.

Matthew Marshall, the financial writer of the New York Sun and an advocate of the single gold standard, concedes that the fall of silver is operating to strengthen the cause of bimetallism in Europe. He recognizes that the landed proprietors of Great Britain and Germany are in favor of returning to the use of silver as primary money and that the peasantry of Ireland and the farmers and planters of this country are suffering from the low price of their products. From these facts and from the reception given the Bland seigniorage bill in congress, together with the formation of a bimetallic league among business men of Boston, and other indications, Mr. Marshall is forced to the conclusion that "the supremacy of the single gold standard cannot be regarded as established beyond the possibility of overthrow."

On the other hand, Mr. Henry Clews, banker, in his latest circular, takes a more hopeful view of the outlook for the money lenders of Europe and America, who have formed a conspiracy to absorb the wealth of the world by enhancing the value of money and lowering the value of everything else. Banker Clews says:

"Although the silver storm exhausted itself in India's suspension of free coinage and the repeal of the Sherman act, its after-mutterings are still heard in various quarters. The further large decline in bullion has reawakened the bimetallists whilst it has strengthened the conviction of the advocates of the gold standard that the restoration of silver is less likely. Mr. Bland offers a new set of nostrums; the London supporters of the double standard are sounding the alarm and Boston is mustering its small but brave band of silverites to arms. The decisive battle, however, has been fought and won for the single standard, and these attempts to regather the scattered clans can only unsettle the old fogies of finance. In Europe the disturbance caused by the fall in silver has largely abated, even in the interests connected with the trade of India, and affairs have now become so adjusted to the new conditions that the late shadow on the future may be said to have almost disappeared. In this country the silver faction has been so effectually scotched that whilst it may continue to annoy, it can do little actual harm to confidence."

It is inexplicable that men as well informed as Matthew Marshall and Henry Clews cannot see that the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law has settled nothing except the temporary suspension of silver purchases by our government. The methods employed to force repeal by the money ring of the east, methods as fraudulent and scandalous as ever stained the business reputation of any people, were in themselves strong presumptive evidence that repeal without a proper substitute was effected against the will of the majority of the American people.

It is foolish to assume that a victory which the money power won by such means would be accepted as conclusive by the forces of silver. To say nothing about the practical unanimity that exists among the people of the states and territories west of the Missouri in favor of silver, there is no excuse for ignoring the fact that ten southern states gave congressional majorities for free coinage at the present ratio in the special session of last summer. These majorities, aggregating thirty-four congressional votes, were given in defiance of the corrupting power of Wall street and the partisan influence of the administration.

The business prostration that followed repeal, in lieu of the good times promised by the conspirators, has intensified the earnestness of the people in demanding a return to the money of the constitution. The growth of silver sentiment within the last eight months has never been paralleled in the same time by the progress of any conviction among the American people. No power on earth can check it or prevent its triumph. If Europe and Asia were dead to the subject and there was not a shred of hope that help would be derived from any source in overcoming the consuming rapacity of banded money owners, the producing hosts of the United States would redeem this country from the blighting domination of life-sapping usurers. But the masses of the old world are writhing under the same form of oppression that is confiscating the property of the people of our country. Values have been destroyed there as here and the future is even more hopeless for the producers of wealth than with us. It is hardly to be doubted that henceforth monetary reform in the principal nations of Europe will keep pace with the financial emancipation of the United States.

Silver must be restored to the world's supply of basic money in order that the measure of values shall cease to be an instrument of spoliation in the hands of capital, if we are not to enter upon an era of industrial slavery with the bare means of subsistence, or less, for the millions who create wealth and more than princely revenues for the few who acquire wealth by capture.

There must be free mintage of silver and a supply of money that shall not be controlled by professional money dealers, before the agricultural values of the United States can return to normal standards, and before the process by which an imported tenantry system is superseding American farm ownership shall be brought to a halt. Demonetization has destroyed the profits of farming in Europe as well as in this country and no other industry has more to gain by driving the money changers from the precincts of the temple.

Before the campaign of next fall shall close, the single gold standard men of New York will conclude that in faking and bulldozing unconditional repeal through congress, the financial conspirators but fanned the flame of silver agitation, which can only terminate in victory for the forces of production. The salvation of the people of the republic preclude any other solution of the question.—Denver News.

Plea for Bimetallism

The late suspension of payments in Guatemala led the London Financial News to remark: "Guatemala to-day and other silver countries to-morrow. Default with most of them is a question of time. The world's commerce is reeling to a crisis, yet the mischief from the appreciation of gold has only begun. Bimetallism in England is gaining converts. It is understood that Mr. Lidderdale, ex-governor of the Bank of England, is a strong advocate of an international agreement for a joint standard. Bimetallism is no longer the creed of a handful of cranks. Nearly every economist of eminence is on its side. The international conference must be reopened. France, Germany and the United States are anxious that this should be done. Surely our interests are as great as theirs. If in our pride, as the gold mart of the world, we stand aside, the punishment will fall upon our own heads. It depends upon the British cabinet whether the conference be fruitless or not."

Not Alarmed.

This talk of a premium on gold will scare nobody. If fifteen years without a gold currency doubled our wealth and almost doubled our population, the people can stand fifteen years more. The nations of Europe scramble for gold to put into their war chests, but we have no such use for it. We are at peace with all the world, and our credit is good enough to enable us to trade with all mankind without planking down the gold every time we make a purchase. Let us not make a gold fetich. We should be its masters, and not let it enslave us.—Atlanta Constitution.

India and The Silver Question.

At a recent meeting of the natives and Europeans in Calcutta resolutions were passed urging the government to try to settle the silver question by international agreement and to appoint a royal commission, to include residents of India who are not officials of the government.

The Lobby's Last Fight.

This Congress will do the country a very great service if it succeed in passing a tariff without assistance from the lobby. Mischievous as the monopoly system has proved in its effect upon our industries, its effect upon politics has been, if possible, worse. It has been the starting point of the endless chain of private and local jobbery that has degraded statesmanship and made legislation subservient to log-rolling.

The idea that every manufacturer is entitled to go down to Washington and get the tariff fixed to suit him leads to the assertion of a similar right for everybody else, and the duty of a Congressman is no longer to consider how the general interests of the country may best be served, but how to get the particular things desired by his own constituents. It may be a tariff bounty or a subsidy, it may be a direct appropriation from the treasury; whatever it is, it is the one thing that that Congressman cares for, and the lobbyist who can bring about the largest combination of separate interests, each agreeing to support the other's scheme, has been the real leader of Congress.

The recent high protective tariffs have all been made up in this way, and in the same way the appropriation bills have been passed. When the ways and means committee of the present House went to work to revise the tariff from the point of view of the general commercial and industrial interests of the whole people, the lobbyists saw their occupation gone. They have been howling for "hearings" ever since.

Having failed in the House, they are now besieging the Senate, where the log-rolling tradition, so boldly defended by Mr. Cameron, during the silver debate, is still strong. They may get a little more consideration there, but they are not likely to control the action of the Senate as they have hitherto done. And even should the new tariff prove less satisfactory than there is reason to expect, the very fact of its having been framed by Congress and not by the lobby will be a long step in the way of legislative reform.—Philadelphia Times.

IF LOVE WERE KING.

If Love were king the wide world o'er
And hearts, united to the core,
Were vassals of his majesty,
Faithful and true eternally,
Earth were an Eden evermore!

His scepter like a wand would pour
Upon our lives a precious store,
Sweeter than balm of Araby—
If Love were king!

The arching sky, the sea, the shore,
The stars and sun and moon, Lenore,
Would smile to greet souls such as we,
Blent one in one through days to be
Till Time himself grew old and hoar—
If Love were king!

OVERBOARD.

They were homeward bound from Otago, and they had run the Assyrian (Black Star clipper) till she could not run any longer, because the big seas, running faster than she did, caught her and tried hard to swamp her.

They would have done it, too, only her skipper brought her to the wind 300 miles to the south'ard of the Horn. She lay hove to like a duck, and after the first big smother, when the helm was put up, as dry as a cork.

It is not every ship that will do this. But the Assyrian was one of them.

She rode gently up one big watery slope and down the next yawning valley—down, till her white t'gallant crosstrees looked black in the shadow cast by the green hill, then up again into the cold southern ocean sunlight.

The wind howled and shrilled through the rigging, bare and stiff, and swept along the yards in vain attempts to tear the canvas from its gaskets, and failing miserably swooped down with a wild roar on to the tarpaulin stretched in the mizzen rigging, which it flattened till the ratlines showed through it like the ribs of a skeleton.

It was blowing as it only can blow down there—five or six gales lashed together with round sennit.

One watch, sea booted, oil skinned and mittened, was hanging about for'ard and under the break of the foc'sle.

The other one had turned in, all standing and ready for a call. In such weather no man knows from minute to minute what may happen.

It was bitterly cold. The skipper and the chief were below. The second mate stamped the poop, squinting doubtfully every time he turned aft at the great sea mountains which curled bullying up, overhung the taffrail for a minute and then, as the ship rose, rolled away with a deep, hoarse bellow of disappointment.

To leeward, over the white, soapy swirl of the breaking combers, swooped, fluttered and screamed a flock of mollyhawks and cape pigeons, while a few albatrosses sailed majestically around.

"Aye, aye," came back from the group for'ard as a man lurched aft.

"There's an Irish pennant on the starboard fore t'gallant brace, Johnson," said the second mate. "Up you go an get it off. Look slippy, now!"

The man, a tall, rawboned, powerful "bluenose," got onto the rail, and standing there, with his hand on the shear pole, said disgustedly: "Another work up job! Hazin agen, is you, you greaser hound, a-sendin a man on a boy's errand."

"None o' yer lip!" exclaimed the second mate savagely, for he was in an evil temper, the steward having stopped his grog. "None o' yer lip, or I'll log yer!"

"If 'twasn't that I don't want a bad discharge out of her," retorted the other, slowly beginning to climb under the gale which pinned him to the rigging, "I'd come over an kick yer head of. But when I get ashore I'll hang for you!"

This in such a tone of deep conviction as allowed of no doubt whatever. And so the "greaser" appeared to think, for, without arguing the point, he resumed his walk, and the other his long, unnecessary journey.

And all hands for'ard, having nothing else to do, watched the yellow figure like some great lizard blown flat into the shrouds and crawling up them a ratline at a time.

"Ugh!" exclaimed one. "It's a sneezer up there! Wonder how Mr. Greaser hisself ud fancy it? Reg'lar hazer, 'e is! An 'e's allus 'ad a down on Dan."

"A man as ud send another up there when it's a-freezin fit to cut the top hanks off a Greenlandman's jib ain't got the feelin's of a cannibal savidge!" remarked another, "an all for the sake o' a bit o' parcelin as wouldn't tie up a sore finger."

"Never mind," put in a third soothingly as he shivered. "Another week or two, an we'll be doin the toff around Lime-us, dressed up to the knocker an a-smokin of our segars, 'orty an hindependent, don't-care-a-damn. An no more sea for this chicken. I'll go a-costerin, with a barrer an a big lump o' hokey-pokey an a bushel o' rotten fruit fust."

"My vort!" said a stout little Dutchman. "It is plowin ag the duyvel oop sides. Janshun haf took his oilskin off mid in der top."

And then they all stood silently chewing and watching the spread eagle yellow figure as it slowly ascended the topmast rigging, then shinned up onto the topgallant yard, and laying out to leeward tried to reach and untwist the little bit of canvas blown from deck or stay till caught around the standing part of the brace.

Twice and thrice they saw him stretch his full length, holding on to the lift by one hand. But the fluttering rag was just out of reach.

Drawing his sheathknife, he once more stretched out. At that moment the second mate, also watching, went over, and without a word of warning let go the brace on deck.

The yard swung round, and the yellow bundle crouching at its farthest extremity darted down for 20 feet with amazing swiftness; then, seeming to expand itself to four times its natural size, sailed gently off to leeward.

"Man overboard!"

"Oh, you murderin villain!" shouted a couple as they all rushed aft.

"I thought as how he'd 'a' hung on an pulled it into him," quavered the second mate as with trembling fingers he cut a life buoy adrift.

For a moment it looked as if he was to follow Dan, as the men, with black scowls and loud curses, crowded around him.

But the skipper and the mate rushed up and between, hearing the while many words hot and bitter.

And presently, on the smooth, oily summit of a comber far away, they saw their shipmate, floating high, with a crowd of birds hovering about him.

But had they been 2,000 instead of 20 they could do nothing more than uselessly throw life buoys and hencoops overboard, and watch through contracted eyes, with little moans of pity. One can do no more, hove to in the southern ocean, with a 40 foot sea running.

"God help him!" said the skipper. "He was a good man," and he shut the glass with a snap, giving the second mate a look that meant mischief.

"He's riding high," said the chief officer, peering. "The wind that kept him up isn't out of his clothes yet. But the birds are at him. Poor beggar! There's one big brute right on his head."

At this there was a growl and a wicked sort of move of men toward the second mate, standing aloof and sullen.

The captain had walked away aft and was starring up at the Irish pennant, still fluttering from the slackened brace.

The chief still peered through his glass.

Seeing murder in many eyes, the second mate gave a loud cry and snatched an iron belaying pin out of the rail.

The cry was echoed by one of amazement from the chief, who, dancing with excitement, roared: "He's gripped him! Stand by all hands with your bowlines! Here he comes like a house a-fire! Hooray!"

And the men yelled again and fell to knotting bowlines furiously as they looked and saw Dan borne breast high out of the water, hanging on like grim death to the legs of a huge albatross, towed up one green comber and down another, but always coming closer.

Heralded by shrill screamings of rage and terror and the quick flapping of mighty wings, the strange procession came until almost close aboard, abreast of the mizzen rigging.

Then as a big sea passed, leaving a smooth valley, somewhat sheltered by the ship, Dan let go, and a score of bowlines flew around him in so many seconds.

Hauled on deck, nearly naked, with bleeding head and hands, he staggered to his feet, and singling out the second mate he fell upon him and would have choked him had his strength held.

But it did not. So presently, wrapped in warm blankets and with six inches of hot rum qualifying the salt water, he was put in his bunk.

The great bird still sailed about the ship, swooping down for the pieces of biscuit cast to it with a liberal hand by the men, when the skipper went up to the second mate.

"Go and get that Irish pennant down," said he.

The man went without a word. When he reached the deck again, blue with cold, and his teeth rattling, the skipper said:

"You can go into the foc'sle now, Brown, and stay there. You won't be wanted aft any more. And I hope you'll enjoy yourself."

And he did.—Exchange.

The Venice of Africa.

The Italians are fond of comparing Massowah to Venice. The town is built of three coral islets close to the mainland. During late years a considerable number of Italian buildings have risen among the ruins of the Egyptian occupation. The white Egyptian palace, built by the unfortunate Arakel Pasha, who fell at Gudda Guddi, fighting against the Abyssinians, on Dec. 16, 1875, is now the residence of the Italian governor. Adjoining it is a very pretty military club, with an open air theater. Water surrounds you on every side, and steamy, enervating heat makes life a burden to those who have just come from more bracing climes. Yet, strange to say, Massowah is by no means unhealthy. Fevers are rare, bugs, fleas and other vermin—alas, too common on the high plateau—are unknown here. There is no vegetation to decay and cause malaria.

The only difficulty with which Italian officers have to contend is debility and anæmia, which is at once removed by a residence of a few weeks on the plateau or a few months' leave in Europe. In fact, they say that Massowah is healthier than any of their military stations at home. If Massowah is infinitely inferior to Venice in its external appearance, it is infinitely more beautiful in its surroundings. The mighty Abyssinian mountains approach quite close to the coast line at this point and form a stupendous and lovely background to the towns.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Poetic License.

Poetic license entitles authors to do almost anything with the language in order to support the rhyme and meter, but there are cases when they seem to "raise the limit," so to speak. On a tombstone in the northern part of the state can be seen the following:

Beneath these cold and silent stones
Lie the remains of Samuel Jones.
His name was really Smith, not Jones,
But his name was changed to rhyme with stones.
—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Mrs. Ham Niblack is expected here this week to settle their home and get ready to keep house again.

The Glimpse real estate was sold last Saturday by the executor, Emmet Allen, in parcels. The homestead of 70 acres was bought by Henry Way at $60 an acre; the north 80 went to Freeman & Butler at $40 an acre; the north half of the south 80 to Charles Gudd at $40 an acre; and the south half of the south 80 to Elwin Glimpse at $40 an acre. A large and valuable property is thus split into four parcels.

A letter from Town Site Commissioner, C. S. Burroughs, dated at Pawnee, Okla., and received last Friday, assures the Press that at the end of Mr. Burroughs' sentence of banishment, he will "land in Lenawee." He is not about to remove to Oklahoma, and his friends in Michigan will be glad that he is not. He writes that he does not yet know when the government will get through with him, and says that Oklahoma is both dusty and windy.—Adrian Press.

Charles L. Silvers and Miss Grace McNiel, of Tecumseh, were married last Monday evening by the Rev. Mr. Spencer, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of Adrian, at his home in that city. The party was a private one. Charlie is the clerk in Van Tuyle & Silvers bank, and his friends will all extend their congratulations. The bride is well known in the social circles of Tecumseh and is a favorite among her acquaintances. They went to Detroit for a brief wedding trip, and upon their return will make their permanent home in Clinton.

As was expected the Easter services at St. Johns Episcopal church Sunday morning were very impressive. Never was the church more beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants. The music was of a joyous character, befitting this great festival of the church. The duett by the rector and Mrs. Blanche Kimball was beautifully rendered, as was the music by the choir all through the service. Dr. Woodward's orchestra, of Tecumseh, added greatly to the musical program. The church's communion service was very impressively rendered and the sermon of Mr. Blachford was listened to with rapt attention by all. Easter day was indeed a joyous one for St. Johns parish.

The annual parish meeting of St. Johns Episcopal church, held Tuesday evening, was the largest one in the history of this church. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were most satisfactory and the outlook for the future very bright. Rev. W. R. Blachford's term having expired (he being engaged for only six months) the vestry extended to him an unanimous call. After the parish meeting was concluded the following vestrymen were elected for the coming year: F. D. Lancaster, B. F. Thompson, A. B. Van DeMark, C. F. Clark, A. F. Kishpaugh, E. Van DeMark and L. W. Kimball. The new vestry then elected their officers as follows: F. D. Lancaster, senior warden; B. F. Thompson, junior warden; A. F. Kishpaugh, clerk; L. W. Kimball, Treasurer.

St. Patrick's Day was celebrated in this city by the wearing o' the green. Sprigs of the "dear little shamrock" and bits of green ribbon were visible on every hand, and some sons of Erin sported neck-ties of a St. Patrick's day shade. The green flag of the emerald isle was also displayed.—Hudson Gazette.

"That's the checker" Mr. O'Mealy is a contributor to the checker columns of several plaid-panted newspapers.—Adrian Press.

Editor Jas. Schermerhorn has indited many an item about surprise parties, but he experienced one himself at his Hudson home Tuesday evening. It was in honor of his 29th birthday and James can now sit in an elegant new chair and dream of that fond day when every subscriber will promptly pay his subscription in advance.—Addison Courier.

A Tecumseh sewing machine agent sold a machine last week, the price being $30, and to his dismay received the whole of his pay, cash down, in copper cents. It was merely a common cents transaction; yet it took all the brass out of his cheek. The money weighed thirty pounds. Thirty pounds! That's a good price for a sewing machine.—Adrian Press.

Among the questions submitted at the examination for school teachers Saturday was this one: "A has a note for $400, bearing 8 per cent. interest; it was given January 5th, 1891, and was to run three years from date of issue. If he gets the note discounted at a bank July 5, 1893, at 6 per cent, how much money will he receive? Hardly two out of the hundred who took the examination gave the same answer, and even the examiners were at variance in their solution of the problem. Try it yourself.—Adrian Times.

University of Michigan.

EDITOR HERALD:—

All is well at the U. of M. The base ball team has been diligently trained until the limbs of every player ache with that requisite ache for good condition. Aspirants limp to and fro upon the campus before admiring eyes, and "flunk" with calm superiority in all their classes. Who cares for the paltry glory of the class-room, when out on the ball field ineffable fame awaits them? The pale student with the high scholarly brow sneaks penitently home after answering all the questions which the worthy hero of the field didn't know.

The tennis player also fans his way to renown, and stands almost a peer before the awful majesty of the member of the ball team. Then there is the sturdy Mike who is surely to win the running long jump on field day, and is consequently reverently saluted wherever he appears, although he did intelligently translate the other day that the hero "received the wreath kneeling meekly upon his head."

Besides these diversions of the field there too are dancing schools, where the fair co-ed allures the youth with her blandishments, and on the following day ogles and smiles bewitchingly upon her tutor until "he just could not have the heart to call on me" as she says. "Delsarte" also holds its captivating sway. The fair damsel "walks the stork-walk", and "devitalizes" in the awful secrecy of the ladies club, but she tells her admirers all about the delightful mystery, and "don't you wish you might see it done?" Then the "Woman's League" which devotes its meetings to warning the pretty co-ed not to study too hard, but just let those long unreasonable lessons go, and go out with the other girls for a good time. The "Epworth League," "S. C. A," "Woman's Suffrage Society," et cetera ad infinitum fill up the remaining interstices of time, and keep life from stagnating.

A phrenologist recently went the rounds of the boarding houses seeking whom he might practice his occult art upon. He furnished much amusement for the boarders assembled after supper, and several persons have won great distinction because of the marvelous structure of their craniums.

OBITUARY.

Miss Minnie White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. White, formerly of Tecumseh, Lenawee Co., Mich., died at her home, Riverside, Berrien county, Mich., Feb. 5th, 1894, aged 16 years and 5 months.

Sweetly and peacefully Minnie is sleeping;
Called from among us to the Heaven above.
God in his mercy look kindly upon us,
And help us to feel "Our Father is love."

Parents are weeping, and friends are heart broken;
Teachers and scholars alike miss her here.
The home is so lonely, the seat now is empty,
And yet in our sadness we feel she is near.

Yes round us still hovers her sweet gentle spirit.
Our frail loving Minnie has gone on before.
We think as we ponder, we hear her voice calling
"Come, many are singing and crossing the shore."

Resigned let us be, though our hearts are all broken.
And bow to the infinite wisdom of God;
He says come up higher, thy loved ones are waiting.
With meekness dear mourner pass under the rod.

NEW ELECTION LAW.

Some of the Amendments that are of Importance.

Electors and aspirants for political honors should be familiar with the amendments to the election laws passed by the last legislature. The following sections are worthy of careful reading:

Section 1 of act 202 provides that no person shall act as an inspector of election who is a candidate for any office to be elected by ballot at said election.

Section 14 of the law is amended as to regulate the order in which the tickets of the various parties shall appear on the ballot. It provides that the party having the greatest number of votes at the last general election shall place its ticket in the first column, and the others shall be placed in order according to the size of their vote at last general election.

Section 17 provides that the cross stamp used in marking ballots, shall be of metal.

Section 22 provides that two challengers shall be allowed in each voting place, and that a table shall be provided for them. Challengers must have credentials signed by the chairman of the city or township committee.

Section 26 gives instructions to voters and tells how ballots must be marked. There is no important change in fact, though the language of the amendment is clearer than in the original law.

Section 43 treats of the expenditure of money. The only change is in the last paragraph and reads as follows: "It shall be unlawful "to contribute money for any other purpose intended to promote an election of any particular person or ticket except for defraying the expenses of office room or hall rent, postage, stationery, clerk hire, music at public meetings, the pay and expense of public speakers, transportation of committeemen, the pay of challengers at the polls and of persons to make lists of votes in election precints and printing and circulation of handbills and other papers previous to any such election or for coveying electors to the polls."

The Hudson historic society will have all the old buildings there photographed. The oldest two-story building the society has yet discovered is a frame house near the Baptist church, it having been built in 1842.

The meanest man on record has now been discovered. He sold his son-in-law half a cow and then refused to divide the milk, maintaining that he only sold the front half. The son-in-law was required to provide the food the cow consumed and to carry water to her three times a day. Recently the cow hooked the old man, and now he talks of suing his son-in-law, the owner of the front half, for damages. He asserts that he can maintain his claim.

ALWAYS IN THE LEAD.

The Pyramid Pile Cure Becoming Recognized As a Certain Cure for Every Form of Piles.

Since the introduction of the Pyramid Pile Cure, the barbarous surgical operation heretofore considered necessary is rapidly becoming a thing of the past.

The Pyramid Pile Cure has taken the place of an operation for many reasons:

Third, its effects are lasting and not simply a temporary relief.

Fourth, the price is nominal, costing only a dollar a package.

Fifth, it is entirely harmless, containing no mineral poisons, and cannot harm the most delicate.

Druggists everywhere sell it and report almost universal satisfaction whenever it is used.

It has been thoroughly tested by physicians in every state in the union and is recognized by the best authorities as the safest, surest and cheapest pile cure known.

We take pleasure in presenting the following letters of remarkable cures performed by this remedy, and all of them being recent, lends an added interest, and simply emphasizes the fact that for all forms of piles the Pyramid Pile Cure is a specific.

From D. F. Collins, Garret: I commenced using the Pyramid Pile Cure and my case was so bad I thought the remedy was going to fail in my case, but before I had used two-thirds of one package I began to feel much better and can honestly say I am entirely cured. It is the quickest and surest remedy I have ever tried.

From Josiah Roberts, Port Oram, N. J.: Just one quarter of a package of Pyramid Pile Cure did wonders for me and I have lost no opportunity of recommending such a remedy.

From Wm. McHale, Rockport, Mass.: One package of Pyramid Pile Cure has helped more than anything I have yet used.

When it is remembered that usually piles is the most difficult, obstinate disease to cure, these results obtained from using a single package, costing but one dollar, are certainly remarkable to say the least. People who have been annoyed with piles for years are astonished at the prompt results always secured.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is made by the Pyramid Co. of Albion, Mich., and is now also for sale at all drug stores, together with a treatise on cause and cure of rectal diseases.

Mrs. Ida Anderson and children and Lottie Arner, of Detroit, were called here Sunday to attend the funeral of their niece, Brownie Belle Barrett.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Cooper, of Allegan, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barrett with the remains of their baby to the home of their parents and assisted in the funeral preparations last Tuesday.

By the Chicago Daily News we learn that Jessie G. Patton has been elected as superintendent of the department of amusements and industrial education and physical culture of the "Domestic Science Association," of Chicago, for young ladies.

Mrs. A. P. Lee, Mrs. C. A. Wright and Miss Augusta Hall, of Tecumseh, were library visitors Tuesday afternoon and evening, enjoying a basket lunch as well as a feast in literature and science. A cordial welcome is extended to the friends from Tecumseh by the members of the association.

After a married life of a little over three months, long before the honeymoon should have been over, Jacob Barrett is left without a wife. She left him Tuesday afternoon taking her household effects Tuesday afternoon. We are informed that the separation was caused by family trouble, and but little sympathy is expressed by those acquainted with the circumstances for the men folks.

Mr. L. Rhinebold, agent for the C. J. & M. Ry. Co., who has been suffering for the past two week from having two teeth extracted is in better health than for some time past. His case is a peculiar one, seldom equalled, being an excessive bleeder, or what is termed by the medical profession Hemorrhagic Diathesis. There is not one case in a thousand like his, and only for the skill and medical experience of Dr. Minaker as a physician as well as a superior dentist, he would be in a critical condition. For the reason that a report is in circulation that Mr. Rhinebold came very near bleeding to death, we give the following statement related by him: When a small boy he received a scalp wound by a fall, from which he bled until it was supposed he was dead. While living in Ohio he had a tooth drawn and the most eminent physicians in the city failed to stop the hemorrhage for five weeks, using every known remedy, and gave him up and preparations had been made for burial when he recovered. Dr. Minaker, after extracting the teeth put him under medical treatment, using new remedies which have been successful, proving that the doctor is not excelled in this section as a dentist.

After a few weeks of severe sickness with gastric fever, little Brownie Belle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barrett, was called to live with her Jesus, Sunday afternoon, at the age of 2 years 9 months and 12 days. The remains were brought here for burial, the services being held Tuesday afternoon at the house of her grandmother, Mrs. C. L. Lowe. The casket that held the remains of the little darling was an ash of rose, very beautifully trimmed by Mrs. Coonfer with smilax, hyacinths and roses, furnished by Mrs. Ida Anderson and Lottie Arner, aunts of the little jewel. The floral piece, a beautiful pillow, was a gift of crews No. 21 and 22 with which Mr. Barrett is running, and the basket of cut flowers was a gift of dispatcher Frank Allen and wife, of Toledo. Rev. Causfield spoke words of hope and comfort to the bereaved parents and relatives, and a quartette furnished appropriate selections for the sad occasion. The precious remains were laid at rest in the family lot in the village cemetery amidst flowers and evergreens, until Jesus comes to gather up his jewels. We believe that a parent never has a dearer treasure in heaven than the spirit of a little babe, and what hope and comfort it must afford to the grief stricken parents in the sad hours to know that their darlings are with Jesus, who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to tender in a feeble way our sincere and heartfelt thanks for the kindness and assistance shown us by the neighbors and friends at the funeral of our precious darling, and to the quartette for their kindness in furnishing music; also for the beautiful floral pieces furnished by our railroad friends.

TWO LIVES SAVED.

Mrs. Pheobe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result every thing else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medecine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at J. J. Orr's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. 5

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

TECUMSEH, MICH., APRIL 5, 1894.

An exchange suggests that the principal thing Gen. Coxey's commonweal army is organizing for is to get on the pension roll.

Col. Breckinridge's testimony in his own defense puts him in a worse plight than ever. His counsel should have kept him off the stand.

Editors can now coin a new word for the dictionaries. Hereafter the word "Coxeyite" will signify a combination of a crank and a tramp.

A bill taxing sugar and raw materials will be a very queer bill for a Democratic Congress to pass. The members who stultify themselves by voting for such a bill will be invited to stay at home.

Senator Brice thinks that the tariff bill presented to the Senate will be acceptable to the Senators. Perhaps so. But will it be acceptable to the taxpayers? That is the question for you to decide, gentlemen.

The Senate committee on foreign relations made quick work of the new Chinese treaty, which was reported favorably last week without amendments. There can be no doubt about its ratification.

Senator Kyle has published a letter denying that he endorsed Coxey's army. He declares the scheme a silly one, that cannot possibly accomplish any good result. The other populists in the Senate and House agree with him.

Citizen Coxey is reputed to be "well heeled" financially and believes that no evils can come from an indefinite inflation of the currency. He wants a law passed giving every municipal corporation authority to issue paper money up to one-half the value of its taxable property. Paper money of this character would soon become as valuable as the confederate shinplasters during the latter days of the war.

In a recent article on the money question, The Outlook gives the gist of the whole controversy in these few words: "What is most serious about it all, is that the currency ideas of the country are so chaotic that men at the West can believe that the currency may be inflated without correspondingly decreasing its value, while men at the East believe that it may be contracted without decreasing the value of everything else.

The President sent a veto message to Congress Thursday, disapproving of the Bland bill to coin the seigniorage. It is a frank, straightforward document, like all his state papers, and while it will please the east it will displease the west. The sentiment in favor of bimetallism, however, is growing rapidly in the eastern states, and the concession which Cleveland makes to this sentiment shows that he has his ear to the ground.

In his late veto message President Cleveland commits himself unequivocally in favor of bimetallism, which he has never done before in any of his state papers. He believes in proceeding slowly and cautiously, not wishing to check the business revival now under way, and wishing to conciliate the business interests of the country, but he evidently believes that a bimetallic system of finance is the true one.

Some western Congressmen do not hesitate to say that certain changes made in the tariff bill by the Senate committee on finance were made with the deliberate intention of causing the income tax to be dropped from the bill, and that this roundabout way of killing the tax was resorted to because the committee lacked the nerve to openly drop it, preferring that it be done by vote of the Senate. This little scheme will doubtless be sent to limbo, when the bill goes back to the conference committee.

The Atlanta Constitution says: "The wide publication of the proceedings of the Breckinridge trial will do more good than a hundred sermons. It will convince both old and young readers that a moral life is the first requisite of safety, happiness, honor and prosperity. The prurient features of the case will be forgotten because they are overshadowed by its almost tragic interest. It is far better for young and old to know how such intrigues turn out than to allow them to believe that men of high station may sin without punishment, and that reckless young girls may indulge in forbidden pleasures without wrecking their lives. The Pollard-Breckinridge trial is a great moral object lesson, and while it ruins two persons it will probably save thousands.

LIGHT IN THE EAST.

The Ring of Silver Is Beginning to Have a Charm for Even Boston's Business Men.

Day seems to be breaking in Boston. The business and professional men of that city have at last aroused themselves to the fact that the silver question is not, after all, to be ignored. The situation has caused them to put on their thinking caps. The pressure of the single gold standard has brought them to the point of seriously considering the element of relief that are to be found in the system of bimetallism.

As a result of this there has been formed in Boston a league for the promotion of bimetallism. Among the names that are attached to the circular sent out by the committee we find the names of many distinguished men, such as E. B. Andrews, Oliver Ames, Jr., Francis L. Higginson, George F. Hoar, Augustus and Francis Lowell, Charles E. Perkins, Josiah Quincy, Gov. Russell, John G. Russell, Frederick J. Stinson, Francis Bartlett, A. Agassiz, William Minot, Jr., John T. Morse, Jr., William W. Crapo, Jonathan A. Lane, ex-Gov. John D. Long and about one hundred others equally well known, and most of them millionaires.

It is a distinguished list, indeed, and shows beyond all question that the unanswerable logic of bimetallism, as set forth by the most distinguished students of finance in this country and Europe, has had its influence on the Boston mind.

While it is true that the Boston committee declares its purpose to be the promotion of international bimetallism, nevertheless the movement they have undertaken recognizes first of all the principle of bimetallism and the increased use of silver as money. This recognition once given the logic of facts and of the situation may be depended on to do the rest.

For the gentlemen of this committee will be compelled to answer the arguments of the monometallists, and in doing so they must fall back on the unanswerable facts which the free coinage men of this country have collected in support of their position.

Already they have been challenged by Mr. White, of the New York Evening Post. "Do you think it wise for men of your weight in the financial world," plaintively inquires Mr. White, "to advocate views at this crisis which will confirm the socialist and populist and anarchist belief that governments can make money out of anything they please; that their business is not to weigh and stamp, but to create and circulate? Do you not think that, in this country, at least, the duty of all intelligent men is to drop this silver business wholly until the late insanity has had time to disappear?"

But the gentlemen who have gone into the bimetallic business in Boston have the wit to perceive that however much we may be inclined to drop "the silver business" in this country, the silver business will not drop us. Hence, the fresh impetus given to the most vital and most pressing of all questions by the bimetallic movement in Boston.

The Evening Post pays a tribute to the significance of this movement in the remarks which we have quoted, and it is easy to discover, under the sneer of the allusion to populists, socialists and anarchists, the uneasiness with which the organ of Shylockism regards the purpose of the Boston committee. Pushed to explain it, the organ would doubtless assume a bantering air and maintain that it bears no relation to the free coinage movement in this country, which embraces an overwhelming majority of the people; that it appertains solely to international bimetallism. The fact remains, however, that the principle once recognized carries with it all the facts and all the logic by which the free coinage men have made their position absolutely impregnable.

The principle once recognized, the mind is carried irresistibly along the current of history and argument to the inevitable conclusion that it is within the scope and power of this government, by opening its mints to free and unlimited coinage, to create a demand for silver of such proportions as to lift its market price all over the world to the level of its mint price in the United States.

This is why the Evening Post is inclined to gird at the Boston committee. Meanwhile, if Mr. Horace White really believes that opposition to gold monometallism means socialism, populism and anarchy, he will presently be compelled to take shelter in some foreign country where the people do not rule and have no chance of ruling, except by means of a bloody revolution.

Opposition to gold monometallism is simply opposition to business and industrial stagnation, low prices and low wages—opposition to wreck, and ruin, and poverty.—Atlanta Constitution.

ENGLAND AND SILVER.

The Pressure to Again Open the India Mints Steadily Growing.

The pressure in England for the reopening of the India mints is steadily growing stronger. The London Financial News warns the government of India that its policy means the financial and commercial ruin of that country. It declares that the original closing of the mints was a big blunder. Thus the wise English journalists are beginning to see what was long ago clearly apparent to the merest newspaper novices in the western section of this country. The Bank of Bombay is reported as unable to lend any more money, and there is in close prospect a squeeze compared to which that felt in this country six or seven months ago was quite a gentle pressure.

England's financial connections with her great Indian dependency are close and intimate. She must save the latter from bankruptcy to save herself from injury and possibly from ruin. And to do that will strain her resources and her credit to the utmost.

The primary, fundamental cause of all the trouble is clearly the insufficiency of gold alone, as the money of ultimate redemption. That metal does not exist in sufficient quantity to make a safe, ample basis on which to conduct the business transactions of the world. England, in the menace of dire disaster from the workings of her own policy, is beginning to see this. Her plot, which last summer, worked so great harm to this country is now recoiling upon herself. With her mines in Africa and Australia, she believed herself able to monopolize and control the world's supply of gold. She reasoned that if she should destroy the money use which was still left to silver, she would practically control also the money supply.

The world's money would be materially reduced in quantity in proportion to the demand for it; its price, measured by its purchasing power, would be correspondingly enhanced. Everything else would become cheaper. Thus England saw herself in prospect, the possessor of the one thing increased and steadily increasing value. She saw in this gains going far up into the hundreds of millions. She overdid the thing. She so increased the value of money as to bring the threat of destruction upon the value of everything else. She now seems likely to enjoy her monopoly of dear money at the cost of the confiscation of all her other property. And she is beginning to get a glimmering confused perception of the fact that the cost may be too great. Hence the demands that are coming from her papers and her statesmen for the opening of the India mints and for the restoration generally of the money use of silver.—Colorado Sun.

WORLD WIDE.

The Effect of Degrading Silver Is Not Local—It Extends to the Whole World.

Even the German government, which is so strongly committed to a gold standard, now finds itself forced to look into the question of the depreciation of silver. A commission has been appointed for this purpose, and is now in session at Berlin. The object is to render stable the value of silver and secure a basis for particular measures. It is becoming more and more evident that the silver question is more than a local one. The effects of the depreciation are being felt all over the world, and this will soon force the various governments to agree upon some reasonable compromise.

It is officially announced that the government of Guatemala has suspended the payment of the external debt, on account of the depreciation in the price of silver. The announcement has caused a heavy drop in Guatemalan bonds. When these countries, whose bonds are chiefly held in Europe, begin to default in their interest, it will quickly bring the nations of Europe to a realization of the fact that, as Cleveland would say, it is a condition, not a theory that confronts them. As long as the depreciation of silver merely causes distress in the United States, British and other foreign bondholders can afford to take the matter very philosophically, but when they find their income disappearing they will soon begin to wake up, and will be fully as anxious as we are to come to some definite understanding.

The next time that a conference is held on this subject there is no doubt that a very different sentiment will prevail toward the white metal. Meantime if the United States government would coin the seigniorage which it has on hand at Washington, it would go a long way toward improving the present condition of the money market. We of California are particularly interested in seeing an early and satisfactory settlement of this silver question. Although this is a gold state, we are largely dependent for business on the silver miners of the territories, who are extensive purchasers of our products. Whenever the silver-mining business is good, other lines of business on the Pacific coast, from San Diego to Seattle, are also good.—Los Angeles Times.

LET US LEAD.

This Country Should Take the Lead in Remonetizing Silver—Others Will Soon Follow.

The fall of silver recently to 59 cents sent a chill to the heart of every miner in the great west. When the price dropped to 62 cents last summer everyone thought that the bottom figure had been reached, but all have since learned that none can predict the future of silver until it is remonetized. Opinions as to the cause of the decline are as varied as the price has been on the metal. Some believe that the paralyzed condition of leading industries of the country has lessened the demand for its use in the arts. Others contend that the hoarding of money in banks has had its effect and will continue to hamper the investments in silver bullion until money is again in active use and circulation. While both of these positions are tenable to a slight degree, the true cause of silver's decline is not contemplated by these arguments. Manufacturing is dead, productions of the farm are unprofitable largely because silver has depreciated more than one-half since its demonetization. The repeal of the Sherman act still further depressed the price and national meddling added its quota of damage to the true value of the metal.

Not until silver is recognized as a money metal, not until it is adopted as one of the standards of value, not until bimetallism has become the law of this government will silver take its place and represent its true value. When the United States adopts bimetallism England, Germany and other countries will be compelled to follow, and prosperity, full and complete, will spread over the land. Mills and factories will be in active operation, farmers and stock-raisers will again realize a profit on their products and this country will be the most prosperous on the globe.—Pueblo (Col.) Journal.

A Combine Against Silver.

In a late interview at Denver Gen. A. J. Warner, president of the American bimetallic association, said: "I look for the gold combine to continue forcing down the price of silver until its members have forced India to an absolute gold basis." He said that he had information which made it clear to him that the combination is well organized and just as determined as ever to continue the warfare to the very farthest possible limit of human endurance.

The Future of Farming.

The so-called bonanza wheat farms of the Northwest and the big farms of the California valleys grew out of transient conditions that no longer prevail—the California farms out of the old Spanish land-grants and the Minnesota and Dakota farms out of the Congressional grants to railroads. The history of the Northwestern big farms is that the land was purchased from the railroad companies with depreciated stock and cost originally about one dollar per acre. The low price of wheat and the higher price of land have changed the whole aspect of large farming. There is no bonanza in the big farm now; it makes but a moderate profit on the capital it represents in average crop years, and with a bad crop it barely pays running expenses. It requires as careful management as a factory. I believe we are now in a transition period in agriculture. The influence of machinery has been fully exerted. There are no more fertile lands on the globe to be conquered by civilization and to increase the food supply. With growth of population will come better prices for farm products. Farm life will become more attractive. The tendency to large farms will be checked. A hundred acres, even with exclusive grain farming, will afford a good living to a family. Better times for American agriculture are not off.—E. V. Smalley in April Forum.

The Increase of Gold.

Last summer The Republic thoroughly investigated the gold prospects of our mining states. The published results pointed to a marked increase for 1893 and a very large increase for 1894.

Now comes along the Treasury report, which presents an increase of $4,000,000 for 1893. For this year the increase will be much larger.

Silver is falling off in aggregate production.

The bimetalist is vindicated. He has always held that the demand for either metal would regulate the value and that they would under equal treatment preserve their equilibrium. A tendency of either to fall in relative value would cause a falling off of supply, and a tendency to increase in value would cause an increased supply.

The United States can produce no far from $100,000,000 in gold a year if the value in exchange for other commodities is high enough. South Africa may do even better. At the least calculation there will be more gold than the world ever took from the soil in one year before. And still there will not be gold enough to support the money system of the world.

A bimetallic currency will be more stable and will enhance the prosperity of nations.—St Louis Republic.

MRS. MAX MIXED UP.

"I am perfectly satisfied that Mrs. Jack Daring went to the French ball with Bob Billings, danced once across the floor, had a glass of wine and danced out again," said Mrs. Max to the major, who was preparing a grape fruit.

The major regarded the lady in an absentminded manner for a moment and then remarked:

"The center of the grape fruit should be cut out with a sharp knife, thus—at once removing all the seeds and the tough, fibrous core, and making a cup, into which you pour a glass of kimmel, thus. Then you add a plentiful supply of powdered sugar and gently press the sides of the fruit backward and forward. That works the sugar and kimmel into the flesh of the fruit, where, mingling with the acid juice, they produce a liquor which is as refreshing as it is beneficial. Madam, yours is prepared. You made some observation concerning Mrs. Jack Daring. Has that amiable and amusing person eloped with Bob Billings or introduced the strong man at one of her afternoons?"

"I said," began Mrs. Max severely, and then stopped to take a spoonful of liquid from the cup of her grape fruit. When she had done so, her manner was mollified: "I said I thought she was there, for I saw her maid in a plaid street dress just like the one described in the papers which was worn by a masked lady at the ball."

"And the man swallowed three crows," said the major in a faraway voice.

"What in ever, major, are you talking about? I said nothing about crows! Of course Mrs. Jack will tell me, for she always does, after awhile, but it is so much more fun to know a thing when you don't know it, don't you know, than to know it, you know, when you do—er—you know what I mean, major!"

"In pure intellectual activity my life is an alternating current of joy, determining things which you know that I should know, but which you do not tell me, my dear. As I understand the present puzzle, you desire to know whether or not Mrs. Jack and Bob were at the French ball, not because you want to know, but because you don t know. Am I blazing away accurately by the compass of intuitiveness?"

"You are absurd, and I think the expression 'blazing away' must come from the army. What can Mrs. Jack have to do with a blaze?"

"Two souls with but a single match;
Two hearts that blaze as one," murmured the major.

Mrs. Max had a finger of each hand in her finger bowl and was tracing the pattern on the doily beneath it when she began laughing in a way so knowing that the setter, which had stolen into the breakfast room, winked at the major as if to warn him to be on his guard. "Would you think, major," she said, "that it was very wicked of Mrs. Jack to go to that ball with Mr. Billings?"

"To go to the ball, no; to go with Billings, yes. Decidedly yes."

"Why?" asked Mrs. Max in some alarm.

"Well," said the major thoughtfully, "Bob is such a harum scarum he would be sure to disclose his identity, and from his it would be an easy step to guess that of his companion. To go to the ball for a 10 minutes' lark I should consider no sin. To go with Bob would be the height of indiscretion."

Mrs. Max stopped laughing and looked grave. The major looked solemn and ordered the setter out of the room severely.

"Of course, major," she began in a voice of deep humility, "I intended, of course, you know, I meant to tell you that—that—I was only joking about Mrs. Jack, because, of course, you know—I was only joking, you see, and, you know, she wasn't there—there at the ball, you know."

"Pardon me, my dear, but you are mistaken. She was there—with me."

"Major!"

"Yes. I knew she was the only woman in our set who had spirit of adventure enough for that sort of thing. So we went."

"Oh, she's the only woman in your set who had the spirit to go for a 10 minutes' lark, is she? Well, whose set do I belong to? I was there with Bob Billings."

"Certainly, my dear, that is the way we arranged it. Now, do not excite yourself, Mrs. Jack. Bob and I planned the whole programme, and you've concluded it beautifully. Mrs. Jack told her husband she was going with Bob, and Jack asked why you and I did not go with them. Bob thought you wouldn't go, and I bet him a dinner you would, and Mrs. Jack bet me a dinner you would not confess until next week. So you've won both bets for me."

Mrs. Max was flaming now.

"Do you suppose I would go unless I knew it was a joke and that you were going, too?" she demanded.

"Certainly not, my dear. I told Mrs. Jack to tell you as a secret that I was going so that you would go and I would win Bob's bet."

There was a long, thoughtful silence, which was broken at last by Mrs. Max saying:

"Major Bob Billings was here yesterday."

"Of course he was, my dear. I told him Mrs. Jack had helped me win my bet from him and suggested to him that he could square that account by urging you to confess this week instead of next and thereby make Mrs. Jack lose her bet. Did he urge you?"

Mrs. Max stood up and made a speech.

"Major Max," she declared, "all men and Mrs. Jack Daring are wicked, deceitful things. Mrs. Jack called yesterday and urged me, just to carry out a joke, she said, not to tell you until next week that I was there. Then that miserable Bob Billings came and with tears in his voice begged me to confess today, saying he was conscience stricken, and things, don't you know. Now it seems everybody knew everything about everything except that I knew only that it was all right for me to go because you were to be there. You are a set of villains, and I shall never speak to that horrible Billings nor Mrs. Jack again."

"Wait, my dear, until they've both paid their dinner bets."

Mrs. Max looked cross for nearly a minute, and then suddenly asked, with good natured animation, "By the way, major, what did Mrs. Jack wear at the ball?"—New York Sun.

A Florid Description.

Under the head of misdescription of properties Mr. E. J. Vaughan told some excellent stories in a lecture at the Auctioneers' institute. Thus a tale is told of a gentleman who bought an estate under the hammer of the great George Robins, a master of florid description, "without having seen it, and then, upon coaching down to inspect his purchase, found that the 'navigable, meandering stream' in front of the house was a half stagnant canal and the 'picturesque hanging wood on the opposite hill' a gallows."—London Million.

HIS MAIDEN CASE.

"The first year after my admission," said the judge, "I was elected state's attorney. My maiden case was one of petit larceny. Bill Dawkes, one of those trifling, good sort of fellows—so called because good for nothing—had been found in 'recent possession' of a carcass of mutton, which the owner had left hanging out over night, and which was non est—that is to say, 'turned up missing'—in the morning.

"I drafted the indictment with great care, charging, with painful particularity, that one William Dawkes, yeoman, not having the fear, etc., but moved and seduced by a certain personage whom it was common to include in every indictment as an 'accessory before the fact,' on etc., at etc., one carcass of mutton of the value, etc., of the goods, chattels and personal property of one Pelatiah Potts, out of the possession and against the will of the said Pelatiah, feloniously and with force of arms, did steal, take and carry away.

"'What's the matter?' I asked sharply, when my friend Bob C. burst out laughing on hearing me read over this, my first professional production.

"'It's the best joke of the season,' said Bob.

"'What is?'

"'Why, that pun—calling a sheep thief a yeoman.'

"My office was a scene of confusion at the end of five minutes. Bob's head had gone through the glass door of my bookcase, two of my three chairs lay with broken legs, and Bob and I had a pair of black eyes between us. It was more than a month before either spoke to the other.

"But I'm wandering from the point. In due time the prisoner was brought up for trial. Old Polifox appeared for the defense.

"Old P. was a character. The only law book he had ever read was 'Swann's Treatise For Justices of the Peace,' but in that and the Scriptures he was powerful. He had a way of quoting and applying the latter, which, in a religious community, made it difficult to oppose him without incurring a suspicion of orthodoxy. His forte lay in carrying the jury, whom he generally succeeded in convincing that he and they were on one side, and his adversary on the other. His style of grammar was original.

"I had carefully written out my opening, and when I read it over to Nelly Wynne, to whom I was paying attention at that time, she said it was real nice, which I knew was feminine for bully, an encomium I felt not a little proud of.

"When the case came on, I spoke my piece without a blunder. I cited my authority to prove that he in whose possession stolen property is found soon after the theft is in law presumed to be the thief. I was prepared to prove, I said, that the property in question had disappeared at the dead hour of night, when all honest people were in their beds, and had been found at early dawn in the smokehouse of Dawkes, the defendant.

"I put my witness on the stand, and proved the ownership, value and identity of the property, its mysterious disappearance and subsequent reappearance in the constructive possession of the prisoner and rested.

"Old Polifox sat in solemn silence, his eyes closed and his red bandanna over his head. He asked no questions and called no witnesses. I was disappointed at the old fellow's giving in so easily. It would take away half the glory of the triumph.

"But I was reckoning without my host.

"Old Polifox slowly got up on his legs and removed his bandanna, and taking up the Bible on which the clerk had sworn the witnesses began:

"'I am grieved, my brethering'—he always called the jury his 'brethering'—'I am grieved and sore amazed to hear such heathenish doctrines in a Christian courthouse as we've jest been listenin to. What sez the sacred volume I hold in my hand? Why, it sez, "At the mouth of two witnesses let every matter be established." Now, my brethering, let me ask what two witnesses—what one witness seed my client hook this sheep? Echo answers, Nary one! My delooded young brother has read profane authors to show that findin of goods on the wrong man's premises is proof of his stealin 'em. It's a "presumption of law," he says, and a great piece of presumption it is, my brethering. Now, in this same sacred volume we have narrated a case in p'int—that of one Benjamin, which you all hearn about. A silver cup, wuth a hundred times as much as this trumpery sheep, was diskivered not way off in Benjamin's smokehouse, whar Benjamin moughtn't 'a' been for a week, but chucked into the mouth of the very sack he was ridin onto. Benjamin was innocent. But, my brethering, if it was Benjamin's luck instead of my poor, unfortunate client's to be this day on trial before you, you would be obliged, accordin to my unexperienced brother, to bring him in guilty, in spite of Scripter, and consign him to a place whar he would have to wear a coat of many colors of a different stripe from his brother Joseph's.'

"I not only lost the case," said the judge, "but my office at the next election, my attempt to confute old Polifox's Scripture argument creating a doubt in the mind of the community as to the soundness of my religious views.

"In all soberness," the judge continued, "if you want to be a successful lawyer, search the Scriptures. In them you will find the basis of all that is best and noblest in human laws. Besides, the words and the phrases of the Bible are the language of the popular heart. Its parables are household words. Its illustrations never miss the mark. I have given you a ludicrous instance of their effect, but it is in the field of pathos and real feeling that their power is irresistible."—Exchange.

Rygrometers.

A German improvement in hygrometer recently brought forward substitutes for the suspended vessel of water a glass tube open at the top, but capable of being securely closed by means of an India rubber stopper, the tube's lower end being drawn out to a small diameter and curved into a semicircular form so as to point upward. This tube is placed on a board between two thermometers, which are graduated to read from 8 degrees to 20 degrees R., between which limits the maximum range of temperature in dwelling rooms may be assumed to fall. The bulb of one of the thermometers is inclosed in muslin attached to the upward curving end of the water tube, and above the apparatus is a board, with a table giving horizontally the readings for each degree from 8 to 20 degrees, with the temperature indicating each 10 per cent of moisture in the air in a series of vertical columns beneath. By simple reference therefore, to this table on reading the temperature from the two thermometers the approximate amount of moisture in the air can be determined at a glance, or if a greater degree of accuracy is needed intercalation can readily be made.—New York Sun.

PROF. HERCULES E. FINK.

Tecumseh had a literary treat last Thursday evening that was enough to make old Plato turn green with envy. Our esteemed fellow citizen, Prof. Hurcules Euripides Fink, who eats his bread and batter under the shadow of the north branch school, has taken to the lecture platform. The professor is a very modest as well as a very handsome man, and when his friends first suggested that he should unbosom himself on the rostrum, as it were, upon this momentous topic, he shrank from the ordeal. Some persuasion however, overcame his disinclination to notoriety and he finally named last Thursday evening as the date and the opera house as the place, when he would promulgate his cogitations in public, where all his admirers could see and hear.

The coming event was properly advertised by a fitting announcement in both the Herald and News, and the literary portion of our community were on the qui vive, as soon as the date was named. Some said he would flunk; others said he had no spunk: and still other jealous mortals remarked that he did'nt possess enough brain matter and mechanical genius to whittle out a lecture. But he shamed them all. The hour arrived and the professor arrived also. He was escorted from the Lilley House to the platform by the drum corps, consisting of one bass and two snare drums, six dogs and forty boys. A large and appreciative audience was in readiness to receive him and he was welcomed to the rostrum with a rousing round of applause. He stepped upon the stage with a graceful air, like a fairy tripping over an egg pavement. He was clad in a fresh laundried white vest, and—and other articles of apparel. His raven locks had been introduced to the tonsorial tongs that afternoon. The professor looks straight ahead with one eye, and with the other he views terrestrial objects on a tangent. This imparts a peculiar intellectual appearance to his physiognomy, giving him a strong resemblance to the late Gen. Butler, who, it will be remembered was a prominent candidate for President when Cleveland was first nominated. It has been whispered about among the matrons of Brownville that the professor is now giving his leisure moments to sawing out another lecture upon the advantages and disadvantages of the Presidency.

Scoye Walker acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the lecturer in a few gilt-edged remarks. The assistant postmaster can assume a role of this character in a very genteel and ladylike manner, when he does'nt permit his natural modesty to get the better of his inclinations. He was himself on that evening, for he rolled up his sleeves, metaphorically speaking, and sailed in.

The Professor, omitting all preliminaries and apologies, plunged at once in medias res. Bilious tears bubble from our eyes, when we reflect that our short hand reporter was incapacitated that evening. A verbatim report is therefore impossible, and no abstract would do the subject justice. The orator dwelt upon a few only of the glaring evils that now afflict society, and handled the sinners without gloves. Ingratitude, self conceit, the follies of fashion, intemperance, tight lacing, the habit some parents have of permitting their young ones to gad the streets after nightfall. He also scored those pretended Christians who make loud prayers and cheat their neighbors. The professor got tangled up in an awful long sentence on this point, but he finally worked his way out most triumphantly. Every hit he made was punctuated with applause. Here the professor halted and enquired whether he had'nt better diversify his remarks with a few vocal selections. This proposal was received with a rousing cheer. Whereupon he tuned up his vocal apparatus and sailed in on "Our Grandfather's Days." The applause which followed the first verse was terrific. It loosened the pipe on the furnace in the basement and cracked several panes of glass in the south gallery. The audience became so frantic that they dragged the professor from the stage, lifted him upon their shoulders and bore him out of the hall in triumph. Such an ovation has never been received by home talent since the night when the whole town celebrated the fall of Richmond.

Mr. Brockway's exit from the Elmira Reformatory will be a sort of spanker-boom.

THE TOWNSHIP ELECTION.

Last Monday was a Republican day in Tecumseh. A very full vote was polled for a spring election and the republicans got out their voters almost to a man. The slump in the Prohibition vote is the most surprising feature of the returns, and the prohibition loss accounts in a large measure for the Republican gain. The total poll was 638 on supervisor and 637 on drain commissioner. In the west precinct five ballots were thrown out on account of improper marking. This would place the total poll at 643. Last spring the total vote was 554 and David McNair received 244 votes, less than he had this spring. The republicans got out their full reserve vote, while the Democrats failed in this direction. A portion of the Prohibition vote must have been cast for the Republican ticket. These two facts account for the landslide. Our Republican friends naturally feel considerably elated over the result. Below are the two election boards. The provision of the amended law that no candidate can serve on the board gave them something of a shaking up, but both boards were well composed: the counting was accurately and expeditiously done.

East Precinct.—
Chairman, J. D. Shull.
Inspectors.—Matt. Root, 2d, J. F. N. Bowen.
Clerks.—Geo. S. Field, P. W. A. Fitzsimmons.
Gate Tenders.—C. Patterson, Wm. Anderson.
Challengers.—Geo. Chidester, Fred McNair.

West Precinct.—
Chairman.—G. W. Frasier.
Inspectors.—Albert Hyde, 2nd, Horace Weller.
Clerks.—Don Bowen, S. J. McClure.
Gate Tenders.—Wm. Smith, W. S. Morse.
Challengers.—Bert Conger, Eugene Hodges.

In the following table the first name placed after an office is Republican, the second name Democrat, and the third Prohibition. The first column shows the vote cast at the 1st precinct, the second column the vote of the 2nd precinct, and the third the total vote:

OBITUARY.

Austin G. Hall was born in the township of Raisin, Lenawee Co., Mich., April 6th, 1838, and died on the 27th of March 1894, lacking but a few days of being 56 years of age. His early life was passed on the farm where he was born, amid the privations incident to pioneer life, and he early developed those genial traits of character which afterward won for him the respect of all who knew him, and helped largely to make the esteemed and honored citizen which he became. The rudiments of his education were obtained at the district schools, where he was ever a bright and studious scholar, completing his literary attainments at the Raisin Institute, conducted by Laura S. Haviland where he gained lasting honors as a student and made many friends among his classmates, who will be saddened by his untimely departure. For his life work he choose that of a farmer, teaching in the district schools in the winter, in which vocation he won an enviable reputation, filling the office of school inspector for many years in his township and supervisor for one term. In early life he was married to Miss Lottie Wilder of Palmyra, Mich., by whom he had one son, Arthur Hall, now residing in Washington, D. C. His wife died some three years since leaving him with impaired health caused by a complication of dropsy and heart trouble, from which he has been a great sufferer, but he has been cared for at the old homestead with his aged mother and only sister, Mrs. James Lane, the latter of whom has tenderly ministered to his many wants. During the last few months of his illness he gave unmistakable evidence of trust in God, and only a week before his death he asked for the prayer meeting to be held at the house, where before a large circle of friends and neighbors he publicly confessed Christ as his Savior and gave sure evidence of a bright hope beyond. He leaves an only son, an aged mother and loving sister, with a large circle of friends to mourn his loss. B.

A Timely Bit of Advice.

In these times of grip and pneumonia it is of great importance that we should know where to look for a safe and sure remedy. A slight cold may become a serious one, the scarcely noticeable pain in the chest is too often the forerunner of pneumonia. The first cough may lead to consumption (a cough is always dangerous). Never neglect a cold or cough for even one day, but get at once, as a safe and sure remedy, Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure, which is recommended on all sides. It should be kept in the house regularly to avoid delay when needed. It is sold at all the drug stores.

Coxey's army should wait for warmer weather.

"Ye Old Tyme Supper" at the Presbyterian Church, last Thursday evening, given by the Christian Endeavor Society, was a very pleasing entertainment. Many people who lived and flourished one hundred years ago were represented in the company, and they created much amusement by the natural way in which their characters were personified. Frank H. Hall, son of A. D. Hall, has had a streak of good luck which he will appreciate. For the past six months he has been filling on probation the position of proof reader and bibliographer in the experiment station of the Agricultural Department at Washington. At the World's Fair last summer no foreign exhibit attracted more attention than, probably no other attracted so much as, the Javanese village. In spite of the interest then taken in the gentle little brown-skinned residents of the rush-matting-and-bamboo village, many people will be surprised to know that the population of Java is 23,000,000. How the Javanese live, and what their island home looks like, will be described in the May Harper's Magazine, with illustrations of typical houses, vegetation, and men and women.

BETRAYED A TRUST.

Another Michigan Official Goes to the Bad.

Deputy Secretary of State Lindholm Short in His Accounts—He Decamps, and Tells His Wife and Family to Return to Sweden.

FOUND TO BE AN ABSCONDER.

LANSING, April 2.—Deputy Secretary of State August W. Lindholm is a defaulter to the state. The amount so far discovered is but $600, but a full investigation has not been made. He left the city on Tuesday, and not returning on Thursday as agreed, suspicion was aroused and his desk forced. One very singular thing is that he left in his desk $4,000 in checks belonging to the state, although payable to his own order and which he could have converted to his own use had he desired.

The discovery was a surprise. Lindholm came here from Ishpeming in 1893 and was a quiet, characteristically stolid Swede of fair business ability. During the day a letter was received by his family here and carried to the present deputy secretary by Lindholm's son, who had been appointed messenger in the department over which his father presided. The following is a copy and has an indescribable touch of pathos about it, but confirms the suspicion that its author has fled:

"NEW YORK, March 26, 1894.—My dear Anna: This is my good-by—perhaps forever. I am short in my accounts in the office, and with as many debts as I have I could not hope to borrow any money even if they had given me time to do so. I am going south, but where I will stop I don't know. It depends how long my small amount of money holds out. Dispose of everything in the house and go home to Sweden, and let Gustaf know your address, for to him, No. 27 Landvagsgatan, Gothenburg, will I direct letter. If Eric can stay at the office you had better leave him there, perhaps for him more luck and happiness may be found than for his old father. Be kind to my old mother, and take her along to Gustaf, if you can. If not, write to Ernst to get her. Be not too hard on me. We might, perhaps, meet again. Hug and kiss the children. From your unhappy husband,

"AUG. W. LINDHOLM."

This letter also proves that he went direct to New York from here, and has undoubtedly left the country.

Lindholm was appointed deputy secretary of state by ex-Secretary John W. Jochim, who has been removed by the governor. When Rev. Washington Gardner was appointed secretary of state he gave Lindholm permission to remain in the office until April 1 and appointed J. W. Selden to succeed him.

Lindholm has always been looked upon as honest. His family consists of a wife and mother and three children, two sons and a daughter, the oldest being Eric, who is 17 years of age. The defaulter and his family were frugal, and it is believed that he has saved a neat little sum from his salary of $2,000 a year and the amounts which he has stolen.

Lindholm was a witness before the grand jury which investigated the fraudulent canvass upon the salaries amendment of 1893, and brought in an indictment with others against his superior officer for a misdemeanor in making a false public record. Secretary Jochim is to be put upon trial in the Ingham county circuit court April 9 for this offense, and Lindholm was believed to be an important witness for the state. He may have been unwilling to undergo the ordeal in the witness box and made his disappearance for the purpose of avoiding it. At all events his action strengthens the suspicion that he had guilty knowledge of the making of the fraudulent canvass in the secretary of state's office.

MADE A BIG HAUL.

Safe Robbers Meet with Great Success at Frankfort.

They Enter the Office of Town Treasurer Hill and Carry Away with Them Funds Amounting, It Is Estimated, to $3,200.

NO CLEW TO THE THIEVES.

FRANKFORT, March 31.—The safe of T. J. Hill was robbed Friday evening of, as near as can be determined at present, $3,200. Mr. Hill held the positions of town and township treasurer and American express agent, besides representing several insurance companies. The robbery was discovered by Mr. Hill's young lady clerk upon opening the office in the morning. The safe door was found open. The inside and money drawers were pried open. No explosives were used. Three thousand dollars of the stolen money belonged to the town and township, and would have been turned over in a few days. Entrance to the building was made from a window in the rear. There is no clew to the burglars, who were evidently experienced in the business.

OUSTED.

William May Removed from Office by the Supreme Court.

LANSING, March 31.—The supreme court has filed an opinion ousting William May from the office of clerk of Wayne county, which he has held for over three years. The election law provides that boards of election shall designate two inspectors to assist electors who for any reason are unable to mark their ballots, and it was shown that in certain Detroit precincts in November, 1892, all the inspectors, as well as Deputy United States marshals and supervisors, assisted in this work. This was held to be illegal, and it was also held that the provision for the general election law requiring persons to swear as to their inability to mark their own ballots before assistance can be given them by the designated inspectors is mandatory. This provision was not observed at the election in question, and the action of the circuit court jury in throwing out the entire vote of such precincts was sustained. May's successor, who will take the office at once, is Henry M. Reynolds, republican. The majority opinion was written by Justice Long. Chief Justice McGrath wrote a dissenting opinion in which he held that the provision relative to taking the oath is merely directory.

ADVENTISTS MEET.

The purpose of the council is to outline the policy of the church for the coming year. The state conferences control the ministers within their jurisdiction, but the general conference has charge of forty-three ministers, besides missionaries and licentiates. The council will be in session three weeks, and will have three meetings a day.

Messier, George Stokes, of Chicago; John Graham, of Buffalo; Henry Stevens, of Cincinnati, and Marion Grim, of Detroit. The contest is for 142 hours, walkers making 425 miles or over to divide 50 per cent. of the gross receipts.

Tuite May Get Away.

DETROIT, March 31.—It is regarded as doubtful whether Ex-City Treasurer Tuite, the alleged defaulter, can be extradited from New York. The New York statutes require that a warrant in which extradition is asked must be based either on an indictment or complaint made in ordinary form. In the case of Tuite the warrant was issued by a police justice under a law authorizing justices to issue warrants on their own behalf.

GRAND RAPIDS, March 30.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Grand River Valley Horticultural society many of the peach-growers present had brought with them peach tree branches of buds. These were closely examined and excited much interest among those present. An examination of the buds revealed the pleasing fact that fully 90 per cent. of the buds were as yet uninjured. A number of those present gave evidence as to the condition of their orchards, and the general verdict was no serious damage had been done to the peach trees.

They claim no affinity with the Latter-Day Saints and Mormons. Thousands of people from all over the United States will attend the meeting this year.

It is with deep sorrow that we tell the story of how two Hudson ladies induced their husbands to go to bed last Monday evening, and then gaily tripped to the dance. A lost and found bureau for the benefit of those who failed to get the right overcoats, hats, rubbers and umbrellas has been established in Dunham & Son's hardware. The projected electric line between Toledo and Detroit is to be rock ballasted and built of 72-pound rails. The cars will be at least 40 feet long, and both freight and baggage will be carried. Trains are to be run every hour and make the trip between the two terminal points in one hour and forty minutes, which is faster than the time of the steam roads. There will be through trains which will make fast time, and other trains that will stop at the door of any farmer on the route.—Adrian Times.

Some time ago a copy of Sam Jones sermons was left at this office. There was no card, no name, and the boy who received the book was unable to give any information as to the doner. Nothing was said about the matter in the hope that the friends might make themselves known. But as they have not, at this Easter time, the managing editor has a desire to square himself with the world, and therefore expresses his hearty appreciation of the gift. There are times in all well regulated printing offices when the rugged radicalism of Sam Jones is real soothing and helpful.—Evening Telegram.

It always pays to buy of the men who advertise in your home papers, the men who are identified with Adrian's interests. Recently a peddler visited the home of a lady in the city and wanted to sell a kitchen article which indeed was very handy and useful. His price was $1.50. A little later, without knowing anything of the agent's visit the head of the family brought home the same article, and surprised his better-half by informing her that he purchased it down town of a regular dealer for forty five cents. It cured the lady of any desire to buy goods of agents, and only furnishes another illustration of the fact that it is always safest and best to buy of home dealers.—Evening Telegram.

There is a horrible suspicion in the Chicago Inter-Ocean office that the name of the man who swindled the St. Louis banks out of $20,000 is W-ls-n B-ll.

A NEWSPAPER RELIC.

George W. Jackson has in his possession an old copy of the Tecumseh Herald, which is a curiosity, and which will become more and more valuable as time rolls round. It is the issue of April 20th, 1865 and contains a full account of the assassination of President Lincoln. Three columns of news matter and one editorial leader are devoted to the sad event. Besides these are articles in the local news columns, describing the different services that were held here in Tecumseh, prompted by the occasion. We append them in full; they are strange reading now and will recall to middle aged people those days of disaster and gloom.

FUNERAL DISCOURSE.

The Rev. J. Wainwright Ray, who has received, and accepted a call to the Rectorship of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, in this village, will preach a discourse next Sunday evening at 7:30 oclock, on the assassination of the President, and the attempt on the life of Secretary Seward. Mr. Ray will give some statements from his personal knowledge of the parties, during a residence in Washington.

FUNERAL OBSEQUIES.

In accordance with the call of the committee and the request of our public authorities, on Wednesday last, the citizens of Tecumseh closed their places of business and met in a Union Meeting at the Methodist church in this village, at the tolling of the bells precisely at 12 o'clock meridian.

The house was crowded to its utmost capacity, and the services were opened with Prayer by the Rev. D. C. Wright—reading of the Scriptures by Rev. J. I. Fulton, after which, and appropriate singing by the united choirs of our village, a most soul stirring and beautiful and manly eulogy upon our murdered President was pronounced by the Rev. S. E. Wishard, followed by some pointed and scathing remarks from the Rev. D. C. Wright—after prayer by the Rev. E. N. Nichols, the exercises were closed by the Doxology sung by the choir and the congregation, and the benediction by the Rev. S. E. Wishard.

The assembly was the most deeply solemn one ever held in this village. The church was heavily and beautifully draped in mourning, and the flag of our country bordered with heavy black covered the altar. All the churches in the place and nearly all the places of business, and private dwellings were also shrowded with the same deep habiliments of woe. It was a sad, thoughtful day for Tecumseh and for our entire nation, and one which will never be forgotton so long as history shall endure. May none of us fail to heed the solemn lessons it should inculcate.

THE SABBATH IN TECUMSEH.

Sabbath morning dawned with no abatement of that profound sorrow which had pressed the people down the day before. At length the church bells began to ring. Every peel was a note of sorrow. Slowly and solemnly the people gathered to their places of worship. No pen may attempt to describe the feelings of Pastors and people as they entered their houses of worship on that morning. Many walked up the aisle weeping, and with bowed heads took their places in the sanctuary. The invocations, reading of the scriptures, singing, and supplications were in keeping with the solemnities of the hour.

The interior of the houses, so appropriately draped with the emblems of sorrow, the pulpits covered with the starry folds of the old national ensign, gave impressiveness to the scenes. The different pastors spoke as best they could to the people, some of them traveling out of the usual forms of sermonizing, speaking out of the abundance of the heart.

In the evening by common consent a union meeting for prayer and exhortation was held in the M. E. church. The house was densely packed with solemn listeners. The services, directed by the pastor, Rev. D. C. Wright, were protracted through two hours and a half. The time was occupied in prayer, singing and pungent addresses. Among the laymen who addressed the meeting were Dr. Hamilton, Mr. Baxter and Mr. Murray.

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! If Mr. A. has a horse to sell and wishes a good milch cow let him make his wants known through the exchange column, and the chances are nine out of ten he can make the change desired. Small articles of little value, household furniture, live stock of all kinds, farming utensils, can readily be sold, bought or exchanged by this method at a nominal cost. The rate will be only five cents a line for each insertion, but no notice will be inserted for less than fifteen cents.

During the warm weather in March "Tink" Smith traded his overcoat for a straw hat. Now he's denouncing democracy 'cause he can't keep warm.

The next church social will be held at Mrs. Charles Underwood's next week Friday evening. The program "An Evening in Germany," will be given, that was not carried out at Mrs. Barlow's last week on account of bad weather.

Miss Nellie Chamberlain, who has a splendid position as cashier in a bank, at Napoleon, O., had to take an indefinite vacation, on account of poor health, and came to her mother Mrs. S. V. Dibble for rest and treatment, early in the winter. We are glad to learn that her physician (Loreo) is greatly encouraged by her improvement and thinks he has her shielded from the deadly grasp of consumption. Her grandfather, Mr. Pennock, of Mt. Victor, O., is with her for a few days.

Once again the bell in the church tower, tolls out the sad communication of the death of another loved one. The colorless hand of consumption, with its never failing inclination, grasped the frail form of Miss Lyda Smith, less than two months ago, and last Wednesday afternoon, April 11th, 1894, she went to join her friends "As numberless as the sands on the sea shore." Miss Smith was a very prepossessing young lady, nearly seventeen years of age. She was appointed assistant postmistress here, only a few days previous to the fatal attack of sickness, and her acquaintances were her friends, always. The esteemed family, it seems needless to say, have the sincere sympathy of their many friends, and not only do they sympathise, but truly grieve with them. It seems there are so much worse terminations of a life, than a stainless death, that parents need not grieve over the loss of a spotless daughters life. The funeral ceremonies will take place at the M. E. church, Saturday morning.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

EGGSACTLY.

He said he was tired of farming,
And as it was late in the fall,
He concluded to change his vocation
And devote his time to base ball.

But the season for the "diamond" was over,
And the produce was moving all o'er,
So he invested in sugar and coffee,
And started a grocery store.

Eggs were the staple product,
Maple sugar was not to be had;
He imagined in eggs there was a fortune,
And he smole a smile that was sad.

His "cases" were filled to the brim,
And put on the truck of the town;
To the depot he started like a major,
But the eggs and his castles went down.

The smile on that placid countenance
Was dire; yes, dire to the extreme,
And all over Uncle George's new garden
His eggs and egg shells were to be seen.

Then the school boys on vacation were summoned,
And towels and cloths put in use,
To wipe off the egg nog from the drayman
Whose bristles stood up like a moose.

Then he said: "Boys, I'm not in it;
I have drained my cup to the dregs;
I am willing to sell goods on credit,
But I'll never take pay in soft eggs."

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Remember that the L. O. T. M. Entertainment, "Out in the Streets," is to be given at Britton Saturday evening. Admission 10 and 15 cents.

Floyd Florance and Guernsey Kelley spent Monday and Tuesday duck hunting in the vicinity of Cambridge. They have not as yet invited us to a duck banquet, but we expect, before the supply is exhausted, to receive such an invitation in order to keep them (the ducks) from spoiling.

Last Saturday evening the "Kids" and young men of Holloway met at Maurice Nay's store, and each organized a base ball nine. The Kids averaging 10 or 11 years, say: "We will play you fellers just as soon as you can get ready some Saturday P. M. We predict a great future for the Kids, for "dey's got de san' I tole ye."

The Ridgeway correspondent of the Herald has been mis-informed, or jumped at conclusions, writing them as facts; Miss Thompson, of Blissfield, is an estimable young lady, but is not the owner of the millinery stock now exhibited at Mrs. W. H. Arner's residence. The ownership is possessed by Mrs. Brown of this place, who places Miss Thompson in charge of the Ridgeway Branch of her millinery plant. She will be pleased to have the Ridgeway ladies call, where they will find Miss Thompson in courteous attendance at all seasonable hours.

THE EVOLUTION

PENTECOST POINTERS.

With eggs at 6 cents and butter 15 cents, omelettes are no luxury.

A Sabbath school to be held at the hall is talked of. All in favor say "aye."

If Grover C. is responsible for the sort of weather we are having he will never get our vote, for even the office of pathmaster.

A milk route from Pentecost and vicinity, to the Wolf Creek Butter Factory, is to be established again this season; so it is said, at least.

April 16th the Congregational Association, will commence a two days session, at the Tipton Congregational Church. Dinner will be served at the church by the ladies of the society.

The "oldest inhabitant" does not remember seeing so many immense flocks of wild geese, as have been trailing across the skies toward the northwest in the past ten days.

Little Roy German is wrestling with a well-developed case of "mumps." Quite a large number of persons are taking their turn at the same business, hereabouts, but they all make a decidedly "wry" face over it.

Several young people of this vicinity are among those who embraced religion at Springville during the recent revival. All honor to them, and may they bravely stand by their colors and win the good fight.

The farm of fifty-one acres formerly belonging to Albert Daniels lying on the town line of Adrian and Franklin, was sold last Friday to W. Vanderpool for $1,000. This was less than half what it cost its owner, probably.

Editor Stearns, of the Adrian Press, in last week's issue, intimates that we were "romancing" in our account of the nest of young ground birds found in the snow, but he must remember that "truth is often stranger than fiction."

An orchestra of nine instruments led by a young girl at the organ, was a unique, but a very inspiring item of last Sunday's Sunday school exercises, at Tipton Congregational church. The effect of this noble orchestral accompaniment with the hundred or so of fresh well-trained young voices, led by that veteran chorister and Sunday school superintendent, M. D. Alexander, was beautiful beyond words to express, and elicted many warm words of praise from the large audience.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Band meeting Friday night.

Mrs. Williams is on the sick list this week.

Dr. A. K. Jenkins is quite poorly this spring.

The bridge near the M. E. church has been condemned by Commissioner Camburn.

Will Camburn has been appointed to take the census in June. A good appointment.

The next singing school, which is also the last one, will be held next Friday evening, April 13th.

Dan Hanford an old and respected citizen of our town died last week from congestion of the liver. A genial and kind hearted neighbor has gone.

J. R. Chaplain, a gentleman from Olympia, Wash., spoke last Sunday evening in the Congregational church in the interest of a university to be built there.

Oh, the dandy Plano Binder,
With a fly wheel on behind her;
Look for better—you'll not find 'er,
A goin' thro' the rye.

The fly wheel light and strong,
Shoves the binder right along,
And the horses sing a song,
A goin' thro' the rye.

The farmers feel so gay,
When the binder works this way,
And the horses kick and play,
A goin' thro' the rye.

The fly wheel does it all,
Whether grain is short or tall;
The mares don't tug and haul,
A goin' thro' the rye.

Say, you happy farmer fellers,
Fly wheels run corn sheilers;
"True," our rival fairly bellers,
As the Plano cuts the rye.

For the fly wheel stores up power,
And our rivals act so sour,
And stay angry by the hour,
While the Plano cuts the rye.

All ye farmers pay attention,
We have kicked up much dissension,
For the fly wheel we do mention,
As we cut the sturdy rye.

For the fly wheel is a daisy,
Though it drives our rivals crazy;
They are in the distance hazy,
As the Plano cuts the rye.

Then buy a Plano Binder,
With a fly wheel on behind her,
With our agents you will find her,
When you want to cut your rye.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so called kidney cures, but without any good result. About a year ago he began use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle, at John J. OUR WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIOS.

Ten numbers of our Art Portfolios have now been issued and those taking them are fully satisfied with their bargain. People should bear this fact in mind: That they are receiving the official photographs of the fair, the views taken by the official artist, and authorized by the officers of the local board, and that each view is accompanied by an elaborate description, thus giving not only illustrations, but a history of the Exposition as well.

People who are taking other World's Fair portfolios get illustrations as good perhaps as these, but the descriptive portions amount to comparatively little. In this work you have both a literary and pictorial history of the Exposition.

Another Adrian Suicide.

Fred Irish, an old resident of Adrian, committed suicide last Monday morning. We condense the following particulars from the Times:

Distraught by continued suffering and an incurable illness, which at times caused a tortured mind to lose its balance, Frederick Irish, the veteran watchmaker, ended all at an early hour this morning, by hanging himself with a rope fastened to a rafter in the woodshed on his premises, at 51 East Butler street.

The terrible discovery of the suicide's deed was made by Mrs. Irish about 5.30. She came down from her room on the second floor shortly before this hour, and, as usual, looked into the bedroom of her husband, which adjoins the sitting room.

Although somewhat surprised to find that Mr. Irish had arisen at so early an hour, she was not frightened, believing that he had gone out into the yard. When she went to all the back doors, however, and found them securely latched, she was inclined to feel some alarm.

Then she tried the door which opens on the eastern side of the house. It was unlocked. Evidently Mr. Irish had gone out this way. Thinking she would go to the woodshed to procure a scuttle of coal, Mrs. Irish went to the place where the key was kept. She was startled to find that it was gone.

With a presentiment now that something was wrong, she hastened to the shed, which is directly in rear of the house. There was the key sticking from the lock on the outside. Fearing the worst, she pushed open the door, and was horrified at the sight which met her gaze.

Suspended by a rope around his neck, hung the body of her husband. The noose was tightly drawn, and there were no signs of life in the body that dangled there. Gaining strength from fear, the frenzied woman seized a step-ladder that was near, and placing it beside the body, she clambered up and lifting the body with one arm, until the tension on the rope was relieved, used the other hand to remove the rope. Then she carried the body down the ladder, and laid it on the floor.

Arrangements for the suicide appear to have been coolly planned. The rope used was half an inch in thickness, and about four feet long. At one end a loop was made, the end being securely fastened in two places by means of wire. Through this the other end was slipped, and a noose thus formed. Attached to the other end was a hook such as is used on hammock ropes. This end was thrown over and fastened around a board placed across a couple of timbers that ran over the top of the wood shed. A chair served for the scaffold which the suicide had mounted.

McKINLEY and Coxey—one represents the cause and the other the effect of the hard times.

THERE is one advantage attending the Coxey movement, at all events; it will give the cranks an opportunity to take a little exercise.

"SENATORIAL COURTESY" has now tackled the new tariff bill and whether it can cope with this insidious opposition remains to be seen.

SPEAKER CRISP thinks it wrong to count a quorum, but with the evil of absenteeism continually growing, he finds it rather unsafe to count on one.

THE latest sensation in the Pollard-Breckinridge trial was the introduction of a woman typewriter as a witness. And the typewriter "got there" as usual.

RIOT, bloodshed and murder were running rampant in the Connellsville coke region last week. Ten thousand strikers were spreading a reign of terror. The strikers are all Hungarians.

ONE thing is already evident about the Senate tariff bill. It can never become a law in its present shape. The amendments and changes made have aroused more opposition than the concessions have placated.

MRS. MARY E. LEASE, the famous Kansas populist is in Detroit to-day and will deliver two addresses there. She has placed herself in the front rank of noted women speakers and will doubtless talk to good audiences.

THE greatest need of the U. S. Senate at present is a new set of rules which will facilitate business and stop filibustering. It is very doubtful, however, whether such a set of rules would be acceptable to "senatorial courtesy."

THE Populists are pointing to the returns from the late election as an indication that the west and south will vote in their favor next fall. Politics seem to be somewhat mixed at present, that is true, but we can tell better after election.

IT is said that the Democrats in the Senate will adopt the policy of letting the Republicans do the talking on the tariff bill. This is a wise decision. The old straw has been threshed over time and time again. Stop talking, gentlemen, and pass the bill.

TROUBLESOME times are impending in South Carolina. The Governor's efforts to enforce the dispensary law are provoking mob violence, and the state militia has been called out. The South Carolina fire eaters may yet have a chance to put a few bullets into each other.

COXEY and his crusaders are marching on toward Washington. Tramps generally hunt in couples and are comparatively harmless, as they are nuisances and vagrants rather than criminals. But this new phase of tramplsm should put the police officers on their guard.

THEY are having more than their share of politics in Peru just now, by reason of the death of President Bermudez. Both Vice-Presidents have qualified and appointed a cabinet, while an ex-President, who is a candidate for election, has set up on his own account as dictator.

THE appointment of Speaker Crisp to the vacancy in the U. S. Senate caused by the death of Senator Colquitt, was a deserved compliment to his worth, but he wisely decided that duty required him to remain in the speaker's chair. He will increase his popularity by this act of self sacrifice.

THE debate on the tariff progressed at a snail's pace in the Senate last week. There is evidently a determination on the part of the Republicans to delay its passage and defeat it if possible and in this scheme they may be aided and abetted by a few bogus democrats under the lead of Senator Hill. A long-winded debate seems now to be a foregone conclusion with the final outcome in doubt.

THIS, from the Chicago Tribune, reads a little like "sarkasm:" "For ten years this siren of the blue-grass region kept on seducing poor Col. Breckinridge. He tried to break away from her. He went to religious gatherings to inspire others and to be inspired and strengthened himself. It was all in vain. What Col. Breckinridge needed and possibly needs still is protection—protection from the Circes of Kentucky and the rest of the United States.

THE DESTRUCTION OF SILVER.

Eminent Authority Quoted to Show That It Was Not Only a Great Conspiracy but a Great Crime.

But now we have passed the point where we can discuss the advisability of bimetallism. We must accept it as a necessity. As I said, the amount of gold is not sufficient to do the work of the world; and if we attempted to bring the currency of the world to a gold basis and eliminate silver we would first have a great contraction. We would not only have that, but if we could by one agreement with the nations of the world banish silver and constitute gold as the only standard we would have not only universal bankruptcy, but the creditor would suffer alike with the debtor, and when we once get relieved would start out on a new basis. But that is not the worst of it. That is the least evil that would occur. With the contraction of the currency when we have come to a gold standard and eliminated everything else, we then have tied ourselves to that, and must depend for the future for the increase in the supply of money upon the gold which comes from the mine. And instead of having a sudden panic, instead of having universal bankruptcy and then peace, the citizen goes out into a night illuminated by no stars. He starts upon an open ocean, whose farther shore no mariner may find; there is no hope, there is no place, there is no time to which he can look and say when that time comes the worst is past.

The most conservative estimate is that two-thirds of the gold produced is used in the arts, and some even go so far as to say that at this time every ounce of gold coming from the mines is consumed in the arts and that there is no annual increase in the world's supply of gold coin.

Prof. Sewell, professor of geology at Vienna, one of the most intelligent and respected writers upon this subject, in quoting what another writer has said of equal prominence, says: "But the industrial demand increases from year to year with the increase of well being." We have either already reached the day, or approached very near to it, when gold mining will yield less than industry consumes. From that day forward the whole of the new production will no longer suffice for monetary need. From that time forward industry will withdraw from the stock of money an amount of gold increasing annually with the increase of well being. We have either reached the point or are approaching it when the entire amount of gold produced annually will be consumed in the arts. There is but one effect. That is, year by year the dollar means more and more; that year by year the injustice upon the debtor class becomes greater and greater; that year by year the stagnation in business becomes more and more extended. If I should use language describing the results of this oppression as emphatic as others have used, you might criticise the emphasis which I employed. Aye, you might call me an alarmist, and you might employ as harsh epithets as some of our eastern brethren are in the habit of applying to us when we talk upon this subject. But in order that you may not condemn me, I desire to quote what others have said, and in order that you may have one from each side, I desire to quote from two persons, one a republican and one a democrat, who have expressed themselves upon this subject.

I want to quote first from Mr. Blaine. Mr. Blaine said in 1878: "The destruction of silver as money and establishing gold as the sole unit of value, must have a ruinous effect on all forms of property except those investments which yield a fixed return in money. These would be enormously enhanced in value and would gain a disproportionate and unfair advantage. It is impossible to strike silver out of existence without results which will prove distressing to millions and utterly disastrous to tens of thousands."

That is his opinion. I want to read language even stronger than that. It is from a speech made in 1878 by Mr. Carlisle, and his words are these: "I know that the world's stock of the precious metals is none too large, and I see no reason to apprehend that it ever will be so. Mankind will be fortunate, indeed, if the annual production of gold and silver coin shall keep pace with the annual increase of population and industry. Aye, we will be fortunate indeed. The danger is not that there will be too much of both, but that when we have every ounce of gold and silver available for coinage, and give it to the world's currency that we will yet have an insufficient amount to keep pace with population and industry."

And then he adds: "The conspiracy which seems to have been formed here and in Europe." Conspiracy—why, when we use that word "conspiracy" we are criticised for it, but here is a great authority using the word "conspiracy." "Formed here and in Europe to destroy by legislation and otherwise from three-sevenths to one-half of the metallic money of the world. Is" —what? a mistake? an error? No "It is the most gigantic crime of this or any other age."

And that is not the strongest. Let me read yet the other sentence: "The consummation of such a scheme would ultimately entail more misery upon the human race than all the wars, pestilences and famines that ever occurred in the history of the world."

Do you appreciate what that means? Do you appreciate what it is to follow the consummation of that conspiracy, the perpetration of that crime? Can you conceive the force, the full intent, the meaning of those words? Can you call before your mind's eye every battlefield of the past? Can you review the history which from the time Cain killed his brother until now, has been little more than a record of warfare? Can you see the innumerable number of those slain by javelin, spear or sword? Can you bring before your mind's eye the faces with all their pain and anguish, and can you think, too, of those made husbandless and fatherless by their death? Can you stand by their bedside as they expire? Oh, can you add to those who fell in battle and who were wounded there all those who fell by pestilence? Aye, can you look over those pestilences which have from time to time scourged the fair earth and can you add to that those who have fallen by famine as time after time it has swept almost a nation from the earth? Can you, in your mind's eye, collect all the misery, all the suffering and all the sorrow, all the anguish that these three destroyers of mankind have wrought—and when you have put them all into one group, when you have pressed them all together, can you imagine that the consummation of this crime means more of misery than them all?—Congressman Bryan's Late Speech.

SEIGNIORAGE EXPLAINED.

A Definition That May Be of Interest to Many.

So many questions have been asked about the word seigniorage, and its application to the existing financial condition of the United States, that the New York Recorder recently offered a prize of $25 for the best definition. Thousands of answers were received, and the prize was awarded to Mr. F. J. Herzog, of New York, who sent in the following definition:

"Seigniorage consists of the difference between the cost of an amount of bullion and the face value of the coins minted from it. By the Sherman act the government was compelled to purchase 4,500 ounces of silver per month at the market price. As the price of silver fluctuated, so the amount of treasury notes issued in payment of this bullion sometimes increased—sometimes diminished. The downward tendency having been greater in the last few years, there were issued, from the time of the passage of the Sherman act to its repeal, $154,000,000 in treasury notes, to cover an amount of bullion which should actually have made 209,000,000 silver dollars. In other words, there is now an amount of bullion, in excess of the reserve necessary to cover the $154,000,000 treasury notes, in the treasury which, if coined, would make 55,000,000 silver dollars, against which the seigniorage bill is to issue paper currency, and so put $55,000,000 in the treasury and help the government out of its financial difficulties."

This explains the matter very clearly and yet concisely. It would be difficult to throw more light upon the subject in the same space.

The Recorder strips the money question of every vague and confusing feature when it makes the point that the currency of the country should grow with its population and business. This proposition cannot be successfully controverted. If our population should fall off at the rate of two millions a year, it would then be in order to talk about contraction of the currency. But so long as our population increases at that rate, with a swelling volume of business, it is criminal folly to contract the circulation. When the situation is thus described no amount of twaddle about the decline in silver, international action, and other things can hide the true aspect of the question. With more people and more business every year we need more money.—Exchange.

LAME CONCLUSIONS.

The Declaration as to the Ample Supply of Gold Rather Visionary.

"Although the stock of gold in the United States treasury is much smaller than it was a few years ago, the supply at the disposal of the chief governments of Europe is larger than it ever was before. The banks of this country, too, have a larger store of the metal on hand than they had in the past at any time, so that the United States, in the aggregate, is in very good shape on this score. Unquestionably the world's supply of gold will continue, for many years at least to come, to fully equal its needs."

When property steadily falls in value from year to year, it means that money is worth so much more than property that the world is making no profit on its labor. That has been the case in the United States for twenty years. When money is a drug in the business centers of a country and still the owners dare not invest it in businesss or property, but prefer to buy three per cent. bonds with it, that is an infallible sign that there is a grievous lack of money of ultimate redemption. That is the case now. There is not enough of both gold and silver to carry on the world's work prosperously, hence the present congestion and shrinkage in values, the march of tramps, the increase of crime and general demoralization of business in all branches.—Salt lake Tribune.

Will Win.

Hon. Henry Hicks member of the London (Eng.) city council, who was until recently a gold monometallist, wrote as follows to a gentleman in Denver, Col.: "I have lately been reading up the question of bimetallism, and can assure you that quite apart from any interest in a silver mine I am a thorough convert. How long it will be before it wins its way to this country no one can say. Things move slowly with us, and the subject is difficult and abstruse to the public. At the same time I may say there is more talk about it than I ever remembered, and quite a number of our leading men are believers in it."

With Bonds of Silver.

At the late bimetallic congress in Des Moines, Ia., Mr. P. G. Bowman, of Alabama, said: "It occurs to me that there is a way that we can again establish free coinage in this country. I am convinced by what I see that there is a community of interest between the people of Iowa and those of Alabama. There legislation affects agriculturists in the great northwest in the same way that it affects the cotton growers of the southwest, and we come here to-day to make with the people of the north a covenant as strong on the question of free coinage as that made by God with Abraham."

Silver and Wheat.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN:—In your paper of the 5th inst. you have a very elaborate and exceedingly interesting article entitled "Must Our Food Exposition Cease?" At the beginning of the second paragraph you say: "The price of wheat has long been dominated by our current exporting power."

Is that statement true? Is it not true that the price of wheat has long been dominated by the price of silver; that an ounce of silver for many years has been the value of a bushel of wheat; that when silver was worth $1.2929 an ounce, wheat was worth a dollar and thirty cents a bushel; that when silver was worth a dollar an ounce, wheat was worth a dollar a bushel, and now, with silver at 60 cents, wheat is also 60 cents? Is not the same true as to cotton and corn, horses and land? Is it not true that prices have gone down all along the line in company with silver, and does not this condition of affairs show that the real trouble with the country and world is not overproduction, but underconsumption, caused by the appreciation of the measure of values, gold, which has brought every kind of business to the point where the margin of profit is gone and the balance is on the wrong side of the ledger?

If THE SUN will take the price of silver at any given period of time as the first term of an example in simple proportion, and the price of wheat or any other commodity, at the same time, for the second term, then take the price of silver at any other point of time for the third term, and work out the example, the price of wheat or any other commodity at the last point of time will be found with as much accuracy as it can be found by turning to the records of the markets of that date.

I am aware that the answer thus obtained will not be in every instance accurate. The year of the famine in Russia wheat was higher than silver. But take the average for the last twenty-one years—since silver was demonetized and began to decline—and the coincidence between the bullion price of silver and the price of every other thing that men have to sell is marvellous.

Now sir, I believe THE SUN to be a fair paper—it is the only honest Democratic paper it was ever my fortune to see—and I would like a candid consideration of this matter; because, if the fall in the price of silver be only apparent, not real—the apparent decline being caused by the appreciation of the value of gold—then a mighty wrong has been done to the producers of this country, which cannot be too soon undone.

Yours very truly,
HENRY NELSON.

Eight Years of Suffering—Death Would Have been Relief

But Hood's Sarsaparilla Effected a Perfect Cure.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"For about eight years I have patiently suffered from a discouraging and weakening failure of the liver, kidneys and bladder. During this long time I suffered everything but death. Different medicines were taken but without any avail. It was on the fifth of August, 1891, that the doctor told my mother that he

of the recovery of her child. For eight weeks I lived on nothing but brandy and beef-tea. I could not even keep milk on my stomach. In May I was just able to be taken to a hospital, where I remained till January, 1893. The physician declared my case incurable. All hope was gone, but I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. From the day I began to take the medicine I began to feel better. I have taken several bottles and have been able to assist my mother in light household duties. I surely owe my life to that great medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla.

GROWN WISER.

I used to watch her girlish head
Bend o'er work; the sunlight stole
To touch her wayward hair and spread
A soft encircling aureole.

She looked so slight, so innocent!
I thought at twenty-one or so,
With all sufficient self content,
I knew so much she did not know.

For men grow old in knowing, taught
By evil things as well as good.
My life was in the world, I thought,
And hers in gentle solitude.

But now, at twenty-four, there lies
Such wisdom won of joy and pain,
Deep shining in her quiet eyes,
As I may never more attain.

I might not learn it, if I would,
This strange sweet thing she understands.
It came to her with motherhood
And tiny touch of baby hands.

—Charles B. Going in Ladies' Home Journal.

A RISE IN TROUSERS.

I was about to leave my office to go out to breakfast when the office boy brought me a leaf torn from the block which is always to be found in the anteroom of newspapers offices and upon which was written, "Louis Demare."

I knew the man well. We were fellow townsmen and had come up to Paris together. Fortune had frowned upon him. I would like to say that I was out, but the fellow knew what he was doing, coming at such an hour. He would only have to wait on the sidewalk until hunger should drive me out. I resigned myself to admitting him.

"Show him in, Martin," said I to the boy. "As the gentleman has probably come to borrow, here is some money. If I ring and ask you to lend me some, give this to me and say that it is all you have."

"You're dead right to be fly with him," answered the boy. "He looks as if he was on his uppers, and his pants is terrors."

Demare came briskly into the office.

"Well, old boy," he said before I had time to open my lips, "I have come to borrow. But this is an exceptional case. I am not going to say that I have not had a good meal for a week, nor that I need 50 louis to pay a debt of honor nor 50 francs to pay for a carriage ride for two. I want just 1 louis, for I need precisely that amount. Just one and twenty francs. I have enough to match that and pay for my breakfast in the bargain," and he really showed me three 20 franc pieces. "This louis I will return to you this evening before dinner time. As my demand may seem a little extravagant, I will help you out by promising that if I do not bring the money back before 7 tonight you may instruct your boys to kick me off the premises if I ever show myself here again. Shall I sign that agreement? You know that I would not for the world cut off the source of so many benefits by not keeping my word. I regret that I cannot tell you exactly what disposition I am to make of your louis. I can only tell you that I am to use it in a commercial enterprise that is a daisy—you hear, a jim dandy!"

The fellow made me laugh in spite of myself. I was completely disarmed. I gave him his louis, and I truly believe I should have invited him to breakfast with me if he had not been so meanly dressed. But with such trousers it was an impossibility.

Promptly at 7 o'clock the boy announced, with a show of respect:

"Mr. Demare."

"Faithful to my agreement," said he gayly. "Here is your yellow boy. As I know you are busy, I will go, but not without thanking you most heartily."

"Was your 'jim dandy' a success?" I inquired.

"Decidedly," said he, showing me a handful of money.

"Allow me to compliment you," I said. "You must have been playing the races."

"I am not foolish enough for that," he replied.

I noticed he wore new trousers, which must have cost him $4 or $5. That explained the increased respect of the office boy. Surely the fellow had not wasted his day.

The next day he brought me an article on some of our city institutions. It was interesting, and I accepted it. When he went out, I noticed that he wore new trousers and different ones from those he had worn the day before. Two days later he called for the pay for his article. He came up to shake hands with me on going away. Mechanically I glanced at his trousers—he had on a third pair, and they were perfectly new.

I met him often in the succeeding days in the office and outside, and on every occasion he wore a fresh pair of trousers. Curiously enough, he always wore the same coat, which was shabby in the extreme.

I gradually contracted the habit of looking at men's trousers. After a vague examination, lasting for several successive days, of the nether garments of all the employees about the office from the proofreaders down to the janitors, I discovered to my stupefaction that none of these persons of slender incomes wore the same pair of trousers two days in succession. Some of them even changed twice a day.

I became convinced that I was the victim of a special hallucination, and I resolved carefully to conceal my malady, as it would have rendered me extremely ridiculous. Still I felt that it would affect me greatly, as it would induce melancholy and become a monomania.

Still the trousers filed before my eyes. They were of all colors and of all shapes. Some fitted their wearers, others were a little too small or a little too large. They were evidently ready made goods, but what an enormous quantity of trousers my diseased imagination seemed to have seen!

I seriously thought of making my will; but, persuaded of my infirmity, I knew it would be worthless and would only lead to exposure. With the greatest secrecy I consulted a specialist—not a specialist in trousers, but in mental disorders. He showed no surprise at this form of mental disorder, talked of neurasthenia, overwork and so on, and charged me 3 louis.

I began to feel that my days were numbered. Every one remarked the change in my health. One of the contributors brought me a curious article, it being a history of trousers, past and present. I threw the article into the wastebasket and came near breaking with the unlucky author.

Just as I was about to arrange my business for a long vacation, having decided to make a sea voyage and travel in foreign lands, where my nightmare would not appear to haunt me—the highlands of Scotland, for instance, or in central Africa—the office boy—he wore a fresh pair of trousers—ushered Demare into my presence with the most profound deference without even announcing him.

At the first glance I saw that he wore a "hitherto unpublished" pair of trousers. Of course I expected that, but what I considered as a sudden aggravation of my malady was that he wore a new coat. If coats were going to mix themselves with trousers in my poor sick brain, there was nothing left for me but to arrange the details of my funeral.

"Old man," said he, "knowing that you take an interest in me, I have come to tell you good news. I am engaged permanently as financial editor of The Gazette. So we are coworkers. Congratulate me."

I murmured some feeble words of felicitation.

"I owe you some explanation of my prosperity in the last few months," he added. "You remember the day I borrowed the louis from you and returned it the same evening? I told you at the time it was for a daisy financial stroke. Now that my self interest does not compel me to keep the professional secret, I will tell you all. It is a pretty byplay in metropolitan life. No, my boy, I have not assassinated any old woman who was incumbered with a rent roll. I have not been adopted by an elderly heiress. I have sold no political secret nor pillaged an embassy. I have simply been a dealer in trousers."

At the last word I bounded to my feet. There was my nightmare again.

"Calm yourself," said he, "and listen:

"The day before I made the demand upon your purse I happened to be present at the first day's sale at auction of an immense stock of new goods from a bankrupt custom made clothing concern. The programme for the succeeding days was the sale of 10,000 pairs of trousers. There were few at the sale, the necessity of taking the goods by lots, on account of the great quantity, shutting out workmen and the class of persons who wear such garments. I remarked that the trousers in lots of 10 cost about 2 francs each.

"By dire experience I know that the pawnbroker lends upward of 5 francs on a pair of trousers in good condition. The thing to do was plain enough to be seen. With your louis I bid off a lot of 10. Soon after I hastened to the pawnshop, where I offered three pairs. I encountered an obstacle the first thing. They do not lend on unworn garments. I argued my case with such eloquence, representing that I had worn the trousers, but that I was very careful of my clothes, that I gained my point. Of course I could prove that I was not a tailor seeking to dispose of my stock. I took two other lots of 10 at intervals during the day, keeping the tenth pair for myself. I received over a dollar apiece for them. So you see it was a pretty good day's transaction.

"The next day I bid off two lots, and profiting by my experience I passed the day and part of the night in wearing the trousers, putting on one pair after another. I can assure you it was back breaking. I then conceived the idea of having others wear them for me, and timidly at first, but soon boldly enough, I lent the garments day by day to your boys, to your clerks and to many others, asking nothing in return but discretion. I told them that I needed to have actual proof of their quality, as they were made in great numbers in my shop for shipment to South America. As my business increased I perfected my methods. I employed agents to dispose of the trousers. I bought as many as 60 some days.

"All went well so long as the source of my prosperity remained undiscovered. One day I scented danger. One of my agents found out by the mark on the buttons where the goods came from, and he bought a lot of 10. I did not hesitate a moment.

"I hunted up the receivers of the stock. I told them that there were 3,000 pairs of trousers unsold; that the 7,000 pairs already sold (I had bought 5,000) had overstocked the buyer, and hence the present price could not hold. It would be wiser to sell them all at once. In conclusion, I offered them 3,000 francs for the lot of 3,000. The deal was closed, and so all attempts at competition were effectually prevented. At the same time I laid myself liable to the law which punishes monopolies.

"Now it is all over with. The pawnshops, glutted with trousers, rebelled and threatened my agents with arrest. Eight thousand of my garments rest on their shelves, so I did not complain. In the end I was obliged to carry my business into the provinces. Each pair of trousers has brought me on an average a net of $1; total, $8,000. I will lend it to you if you want to borrow.

"Now that it is not necessary for me to affect poverty, I have bought me a coat and some other furnishings. I still have left about 100 pairs of trousers. I shall give some in charity, and I have already fitted out your entire establishment. You must notice how I am respected around here.

"Now, old man, I shall be most happy to send you a pair made to fit you perfectly of the richest fabric. You have only to say the word."

It is needless to add that my cure was instantaneous and complete. — Translated For San Francisco Argonaut From the French of M. Champimont.

HERALD, Tecumseh, Mich.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

FRUIT BULLETINS.

Without Money But Beyond Price.

The State Agricultural College has just issued a volume under the above name, from the Horticultural Department of the Experiment Station, that cannot fail to be of interest, and will certainly be of value, to every farmer and fruit grower of the state, who is fortunate enough to secure a copy, and who carries out the directions there given, in the care of his fruit gardens and orchards.

It really contains four bulletins, one of which alone is well worth the price of a year's subscription to this paper, but by a special arrangement with the College authorities we are able to offer the four, in one neatly bound volume, to any of our subscribers, residing in the state of Michigan, who will comply with the conditions named later on, and who in writing for the new book states that he is a subscriber to the HERALD.

While they can be secured without money, every one who obtains a copy will find them beyond price. The bulletins are a continuation of the series begun in 1885, and are numbered consecutively from 103 to 106.

Bulletin 103 is an elaborate symposium upon Peach and Plum Culture in Michigan, by the Horticulturist of the Station, L. R. Taft. It discusses in an interesting manner the natural conditions that have given Michigan its present standing as a fruit growing state, and indicates the localities best adapted to the successful cultivation of the above named fruits. Since so much depends upon the soil, exposure, elevation and other surroundings, a considerable space is very properly devoted to those subjects. We learn from this bulletin that the Michigan Peach Belt extends along the shore of Lake Michigan, from south of St. Joseph well to the north of Charlevoix, and varies in width from ten to thirty miles; here peaches can be grown with success in almost any elevated spot. Near the lake, however, the conditions are so favorable, owing to the ameliorating influence of the open waters of Lake Michigan, that in many sections, success has been obtained in localities where the land is quite low and level. Away from the lake in the interior counties, notably Lenawee, Washtenaw, Hillsdale, Jackson, Calhoun, Clinton and Kent, and in favorable locations in others, good results have been obtained with this fickle crop, when it has been cared for intelligently. The methods of handling the orchards recommended, are based upon actual experience at the college, and are those practiced by our most successful fruit growers. The preparation of the ground, the nursery culture of the trees, the planting and pruning of the orchards and their after cultivation are discussed at length. The different methods of pruning the trees are illustrated by photographs of actual trees varying from one to five years of age. The matter of manures and fertilizers is also given considerable attention. The conclusion is that, while decomposed stable manure is excellent as a fertilizer, it is likely to produce a late growth, and that the trees, as well as the fruit buds, are more likely to be injured by the winter than when chemical fertilizers are used. The nature of the different materials needed by the trees receives attention and formulæ for mixing the fertilizers are given.

The list of varieties recommended have been passed upon by some of the best known fruit-growers, and one could hardly go astray who uses the kinds mentioned. Illustrations of nine leading varieties of plums are also given. They were drawn from photographs and show the size and shape of the fruits to good advantage.

The insects and diseases that prey upon these fruits are described and several of them are illustrated; particular attention is given to the yellows, rot and leaf-curl of the peach, and the black knot, shot-hole fungus, rot and curculio of the plum and remedies for fighting these and other pests are carefully presented. Formulæ for preparing all of the leading insecticides and fungicides, that are used not only against the insects and diseases of the peach and plum, but for those of other plants, are given, and the directions for their application will answer in nearly all cases.

The last legislature enacted a new yellows and black knot law, and it is given in full in the bulletin. Fruit growers, in sections where these dread diseases prevail, should inform and avail themselves of its provisions, and thus save their own and their neighbors' trees. This bulletin is the only publication upon the cultivation of these fruits that is in any way up to the times, or that is adapted to our conditions. In the final pages, gathering, packing and marketing of the fruit are considered.

The bulletins are printed upon calendered paper and bound into one volume of nearly one hundred and fifty pages. The front page of the cover is illustrated with a beautiful fruit-piece, while on the last page are half-tone engravings showing the Horticultural Laboratory and the Experimental Forcing Houses of the experiment Station.

The Fruit Bulletins not only contain a mine of useful information, but are worthy of a permanent place in the library of every farmer.

We are pleased to announce that any subscriber for this paper qualified as above, who desires a copy, can obtain one by mail, postpaid, upon application to the Secretary of the College, by stating that he saw this announcement in the HERALD, provided the application is received within ten days from the date of this paper.

The Adrian Times of Monday evening says: "A strict adherence to the Democratic party, and loyal support of Congressman Gorman has at last been rewarded. L. H. Salsbury has received — — — a package of garden seeds from Washington. We understand this is the last distribution." With a slight correction, the above item is true. This office received a package of garden seeds yesterday.

The Temple of Fame, which will be given at the Opera House on Tuesday evening next, is an entertainment of rare merit and beauty. Some of the chief historical characters in modern times are represented, many of whom will be attired in special costumes made expressly for their characters. The dialogue is apt and interesting, while the scenic effects are most elaborate and brilliant. It will be attended with much labor and expense and hence is entitled to a liberal patronage. We shall expect to see a crowded house that evening. Secure your seats early or you may get left.

The supper at the Arcanum Hall last Friday evening proved to be a very pleasant affair. A fine supper was served between five and seven to a large gathersng, many persons outside of the regular membership availing themselves of the opportunity thus offered. After the tables were cleared the audience was called to order and listened to some music from the Social Concert Orchestra, who gave some of their choicest selections. Miss Dora Grayson and Peter Ridgely rendered some fine music. D. T. Hall and Chas. H. Reed were called on for remarks and responded with appropriate impromptu speeches which were well received and added much to the entertainment. The Arcanum have inaugurated a good custom.

OBITUARY.

George W. Sisson was born in the state of New York, September 11, 1819, and died at his home in Raisin, Mich., March 15, 1894, aged 75 years. When but a boy he came with his parents and for more than fifty years he lived in the town of Raisin. He was married twice. His first wife was Miss Frances Taylor. To this union were born four children, two of whom still live, Mrs. Albert Waring, of this place, and Mrs. Dougherty, of Ypsilanti. After the death of his first wife, he was married to Miss Sophia Cleveland; five children were born into their home, four of whom still survive and with the mother mourn the departure of one who was a true husband and father. A service was conducted at the family residence, by Rev. J. P. Varner, after which the remains were interred in the Tecumseh cemetery, whither they were accompanied by a large number of relatives and friends.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to thank all those kind friends who extended their aid and sympathy so freely in our recent affliction.

MRS. G. W. SISSON,
MR. AND ED. SISSON.

Daniel Hanford was born near Rochester, N. Y., January 11, 1829, and died in Franklin, Mich., April 2, 1894. His boyhood was spent on a farm near Rochester, N. Y. with his parents. After arriving at manhood he became assistant superintendent of the Erie canal on the division from Rochester to Syracuse and from Rochester to Albion. In 1854 he came to Michigan with his parents and brothers and settled in Tecumseh. He was united in marriage to Miss Eva Plank in 1861, and continued to live in Tecumseh until 1874, when he moved to Franklin. He had been ailing for some time, but his last illness was of short duration, being taken first with congestion of the liver which was succeeded by hiccoughs. His suffering throughout the hiccoughs was intense, but they stopped a short time before his death, and the end was painless. His life was one of mirth and happiness with a good word for all, and he was a good husband and kind father and an excellent neighbor. He leaves a wife and five sons: Joseph G., who will remain on the farm, Harry, of Pennsylvania, C. Devere, of Dallas, Texas; Robert P. of Kalamazoo, and Lloyd W., who is attending college at Adrian, Mich. He also leaves three brothers, Abram and James, of Pratt, Kansas, and George, of Tecumseh, and one sister, Mrs. H. Chittenden, of Adrian.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the kind neighbors and friends who assisted us so much during the illness and death of our dear husband and father. We also wish to thank the choir for their asistance in the services at our home.

"Nose social" is a late form of entertainment in Adrian. Young ladies secrete themselves behind a sheet suspended across a door and poke their noses appendages through a hole to let gentlemen guess to whom said noses belong. The fellow who "nose" his business gets the prize.

The second game of indoors base ball was played last night before a delightful audience at the new Armory, the contesting teams being Co. C females, and the T. H. S. club. At 8:30 the latter appeared on the scene by couples and the roll was called, the copper was declared for innings and the ladies went to the field. Umpire McClure called "play ball" and the fun commenced. Three scores went to the credit of the boys before the call of "side out" was heard and the ladies took the bat with Big pitcher Harris for several long and fast scores. In the last half of the fourth inning with one out, a double play by Dr. Mary, short stop to Belle first base, brought the inning to an end close, but in the next the latter took an egg nog from a double play Hanson Sutfin to the second base. A jack-action hand spring by Topsy Dunn and a graceful slide by Maggie Ross, both toward home base, brought up another pair of scores, while a combination of moves on the part of Miss Dunn brought in another. The other nine then sailed round the diamond, and at the end of the fifth inning the score stood 17 to 22 in favor of the High School team.

The Grass Lake News has this gossipy item about a former Tecumseh resident: "Miss E. Cora DePuy, a sprightly writer and bright journalist, assists Miss Emma Bower in the editorial management of the Ann Arbor Democrat. It seems that this wide awake pair have soul-yearnings for the noblest objects outside of Paradise, as witness the following 'warning' copied from the Democrat of last week; 'It is all very well for our merchants to keep up an attraction by putting in the show window such things as pictures of clinics, nests of chickens and Ferris wheels. But we warn these gentlemen that unless you have a reserved stock of plate glass don't you dare to put a real handsome, live man in the window.' Now, there's a chance for somebody.

The services at St. Peter's church last Monday evening were deeply impressive and were listened to by a congregation that completely filled the edifice. Revs. Blachford and Phelps conducted the ritual portion of the services and Bishop Davies delivered a powerful discourse, pertinent to the occasion. He then conferred upon a class of fourteen candidates the rite of confirmation, following with a few words of admonition to the new members. The bishop has many admirers in Tecumseh outside of his communion who always take advantage of his visits to listen to him.

On Friday last, a son of James Hill, between ten and eleven years of age, found some dynamite cartridges in a windmill house belonging to Walter Osborn. He thought he would find out what was in it; then taking one of them in his left hand, he applied a lighted match to it with the other. The little fellow now knows that they are not a thing to fool with, for the experiment cost him the loss of thumb, index and middle finger of the left hand, which were amputated by Dr. Jenkins of Tecumseh, assisted by Dr. Rice of Tipton. The hand is doing well. A younger brother put a dynamite cap in his mouth, but luckily it did not explode; if it had, he would not have required a doctor.

Between fifty and sixty members of the Eastern Star Lodge went to Clinton last evening to attend a session of Golden Rod Chapter, O. E. S. and confer the lodge degree. The members drove up in private rigs, leaving here between four and five o'clock. Upon their arrival there they were taken in charge by the Clinton brothers and sisters and conducted to Masonic Hall, where a bountiful supper was served at six o'clock. A large delegation came down from Manchester on the afternoon train and they were also entertained to supper. After the refreshments had been properly disposed of the Lodge was called to order and two candidates were duly initiated into the mysteries of the order, the Tecumseh officers conferring the degree. At the close of this ceremony, an impromptu program of music and short speeches followed for nearly an hour, the meeting closing about ten o'clock, just in time for the Manchester guests to take the train. The Tecumseh party are more than enthusiastic over their hospitable reception and although our Clinton friends were pretty heartily drawn upon they honored the draft most bountifully. We had an evening of rare enjoyment and hope to be able to return the compliment at some future date.

HAPPY TOWNS.

St. Joseph and Benton Harbor Join in a Celebration.

The Selection of the Former City as the County Seat Settles All Differences, and Becomes an Occasion for Great Joy.

A GALA DAY.

ST. JOSEPH, April 8.—The celebration here Saturday over the county seat removal eclipsed anything ever witnessed in southwestern Michigan. It was a veritable outpouring of the people. The city was decorated in gala attire and enthusiasm was unbounded. There were four bands here, one from La Porte, Ind., one from Benton Harbor, one from Galion and one from Barada, besides the Twin City band. The principal streets of the city were traversed by the parade, there being fully 1,000 persons in line. After the parade there were speeches at the rink, and in the evening there was a magnificent display of electricity and fireworks.

The participation of Benton Harbor in the jubilee is remarkable to those who know how bitter has been the rivalry between the two towns for so many years. But when the leading citizens of Benton Harbor promised to help St. Joseph to secure the county seat the hatchet was buried and the late rivals are now sworn friends. In the election St. Joseph won the county seat by the small majority of 243 votes, which shows that Benton Harbor's cooperation was absolutely necessary to success.

St. Joseph has raised $20,000 for the purchase of a site for the county buildings on a bluff overlooking both cities, as was promised Benton Harbor, and work will soon be begun. An electric railway between the two towns brings them into close communication, and as they are only a mile apart they may in time be combined under the same municipal government. St. Joseph and Benton Harbor together have about 18,000 population.

MARRIED A DIPLOMAT.

Miss Potter, of St. Joseph, Weds Lorin A. Thurston, the Hawaiian Minister.

ST. JOSEPH, April 6.—At high noon Thursday in the old Potter homestead, in which the bride was born twenty-two years ago, Lorin A. Thurston, Hawaiian minister to the United States, was wedded to Miss Harriet Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Potter. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hardin W. Davis, of the Congregational church, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the two families and a few intimate friends. After the ceremony and congratulations a sumptuous wedding dinner was served to the company. There was a number of rare and costly gifts from friends present and abroad.

THE BRIDE.

At 5:35 the bridal party left on the Chicago & West Michigan railway for Chicago, from which place Mr. Thurston and bride left at 11:30 o'clock at night by the Pennsylvania railroad for Washington. After a stay of only one day at the capital, during which Mr. Thurston will close up some important government business, they will leave for San Francisco. They will sail April 14 on the steamer Australia and arrive at Honolulu about April 21, where the happy bride will be installed as mistress of one of the most elegant homes of the island republic. The length of Mr. Thurston's stay in Honolulu at present depends upon the course Hawaiian affairs may take. He may remain several months, or he may return to Washington at an early date.

THE GROOM.

End of the Walking Match.

DETROIT, April 8.—The walking match which was in progress here all week terminated Saturday night in a fizzle financially, although two of the walkers covered the required 425 miles and upward. Glick made 440 miles and 8 laps; Messier, 425 miles 1 lap, and Smith and Stevens 415 and 413 miles respectively. Upon figuring out the profits it was found that the walkers' share was but $14.32. During the day the track was torn out by a constable, on a writ issued to satisfy the carpenter's claim, but the remaining contestants bravely walked to the bitter end.

Bookkeeper Under Suspicion.

SAGINAW, April 9.—Newell B. Parsons, bookkeeper and manager of the Wells Stone company, and a leader in society, was arrested Sunday night charged with larceny in taking jewelry and books from the company's safe. The evidence, which is mostly circumstantial, includes that of a policeman who saw huge volumes of smoke issuing from Parsons' chimney on the night of the theft which smelled like burned paper. The missing books are important to an understanding of the firm's affairs since 1887.

Five Thousand Dollars for a Hand.

JACKSON, April 7.—In the circuit court here Friday Frank Perry was awarded judgment of $5,000 against the Michigan Central for the loss of a hand, sustained while coupling cars at Grand Rapids.

Lewiston Gets the County Seat.

LEWISTON, April 5.—Lewiston gets the county seat away from Atlanta by a vote of 426 to 317. Hillman, from which the seat was moved only a year ago, gave 100 for and 45 against the proposition. Every vote in Atlanta was adverse.

HE IS NO MORE.

Sudden Demise of Ben King, the Michigan Humorist and Poet.

Found Dead in His Bed at Bowling Green, Ky., Where He Had Entertained a Large Audience the Night Before—Grief at His Home.

PASSED AWAY IN SLEEP.

ST. JOSEPH, April 8.—Saturday the sad news was received that Ben King, the Michigan poet, humorist and musician, was found dead in his bed at Bowling Green, Ky., where he had appeared in public the night before. Like a dagger the news went to the hearts of wife, sons, father, mother and sister, who are to-day grief-stricken and heart-broken.

[Ben King was born in this city on the 17th day of March, 1857. At the age of 5 years his mother found him seated one morning on the piano stool playing the chords of a song. She then put him under the supervision of Mrs. Owen, of Benton Harbor, for instructions. After three years of practice under her he went to Chicago and studied under Prof. M. Ledochowski. At the age of 15 he began to write poems and declaim them and became the leader in all literary circles in this section. In his own birthtown Ben King was never appreciated except by the few, but outside he has made a record that was gaining fresh laurels every day.

His early life was spent in this city clerking in his father's dry goods store, and later assisting him in the post office. He spent much of his time along the banks of the beautiful river of St. Joseph and on the waters of Lake Michigan, and from these picturesque locations he imbibed much of the poetry that later found voice by pen and tongue. He was married to Miss Belle Latham in 1883. Two children bless the union, both boys, 7 and 9 years of age respectively. The aged parents and sister also reside here, and his death has added a blow to their hearts from which they will never recover, for he was their pride and only stay in life.

As a writer he was quaint, humorous and strikingly original. He was a prodigy in the literary world, and was fast climbing the ladder to fame and fortune. He was of slender build, bright eye and of unassuming disposition. He was thoroughly western in his ideas and make-up, and his originality had no duplicate. In his death Michigan loses the greatest genius she has ever produced, and the realm of literature one of its brightest lights.]

CHICAGO, Ill., April 9.—The remains of Ben King, who died suddenly at Bowling Green, Ky., arrived here Sunday. Funeral ceremonies were held at the rooms of the Press club. Appropriate addresses were made by members of the club and a committee was appointed to attend the funeral at St. Joseph, Mich.

CALLED HOME.

DETROIT, April 8.—Prof. Ira Mayhew, the widely-known public educator and Michigan pioneer, died very suddenly at his residence Saturday morning at the age of 80 years. He was known to be suffering from heart trouble, largely superinduced by his great weight and extreme age.

[Prof. Mayhew was born in Ellisburg, N. Y., in 1814. He came to Michigan in 1823, but soon returned to his native state. In 1843 he settled in Monroe, Mich., where he took charge of a branch of the state university. He was subsequently appointed as state superintendent of schools for four years. He was next called to the president's chair of Albion college, which, after filling for about two years, he resigned to again accept the office of state superintendent, to which he was this time elected by the popular vote. In 1860 he established his first business college at Albion. In 1857 he published a valuable work entitled "The Means and Ends of Universal Education," and later a "Manual of Business Practice," which speedily passed into almost universal use. Prof. Mayhew was collector of internal revenue for the Third Michigan district under President Lincoln, the only strictly political office he ever held. Twenty-eight years ago he removed his business college from Albion to Detroit, where he continued to successfully manage it until about ten years ago, when it passed into other hands.]

HAS DISAPPEARED.

Grand Receiver Wood, of the Michigan A. O. U. W., Suspected of a Crime.

MARSHALL, April 9.—James W. Wood, grand receiver of the Ancient Order of United Workmen for Michigan, left his home in this city Monday, March 26, and has not been heard from since. Upon his failure to make his monthly report, April 1, he was suspended from office and Grand Recorder Wilson appointed to look into the matter. Mr. Wilson and the chairman of the finance committee were in this city Friday and Saturday examining the books, and there are grave rumors of a shortage. Mr. Wilson took the receiver's books to Detroit with him and expects to make a report soon. Mr. Wood came here from Battle Creek seven years ago, having been elected county treasurer. He held that office four years, and since then has had charge of the abstract books. When he left it was supposed that he was in search of a position, as he expected to be out of one after April 1. He has many friends here, who still hope that he may return and give a satisfactory reason for his absence.

Named His Staff Officers.

MUSKEGON, April 5. — Department Commander Louis Kanitz has made the following appointments: Inspector, Judson S. Farrar, Mt. Clemens; judge advocate, S. S. Babcock, Detroit; chief mustering officer, James A. Crozier, Menominee; chief of staff, L. G. Rutherford, Grand Rapids; senior aid-de-camp, William S. Green, Detroit; aids-de-camp, George M. Devlin, Jackson; Robert Finch, Grand Haven; C. P. Brown, Spring Lake.

Claims Heavy Damages.

MUSKEGON, April 6.—D. M. Stever has brought suit against John Torrent and A. H. Petrie, claiming damages of between $200,000 and $250,000. The suit is in connection with an alleged contract for the purchase of a timber contract with the Smith Lumber company at Kalkaska.

Last Two Bodies Found.

HOLLAND, April 6.—The bodies of J. C. Schaeffer and Eugene McKay were found Thursday by parties dragging Black lake. The finding of the last one of the four drowned ends the worst accident which ever happened on Black lake.

Will Not Be Removed.

FRANKFORT, April 5.—The proposed removal of the county seat to Crystal City was defeated by 339 majority. The county road system was defeated by a small majority.
